U. S. Plans Aggression, Molotov Says, Calling Atom Bomb No Secret

Britain Included; Capitalism Pictured At Red Rally as Being on Last Legs

Moscow, Nov. 6 (AP).—Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov declared in an address keynoting the thirtieth anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution tonight that the United States and Britain clearly are making "a preparation for agression," and said the "secret of the atomic bomb ceased to exist a long time ago."

(Molotov did not go so far as to say Russia had an atomic bomb.

(Officials in Washington expressed the conviction that the speech was intended to calm any fears among Russians about their ability to produce one. Scientists said the secret had been known for some time, but not the technique of the bomb's assembly.)

Declares Peace Aims

Delivering the main policy speech of the Soviet holiday in the Bolshoi Theater, Molotov emphasized that "all real friends of peace—and they constitute the majority of the people of any country—can rely on the fact that the Soviet Union will defend to the end the interests of universal peace."

But he asserted the United States and Britain were pursuing a "quite different" policy.

"It is, however, clear that the creation of military bases in various parts of the world is not designed for defense purposes, but as a preparation for aggression," he asserted. "It is also clear that if, up to now, the combined British-American general staff, created during the war, has been maintained, this is not being done for peace-loving purposes, but for the possibility of new aggression."

Atomic Bomb Reference

His statement on the atomic bomb said:

"It is interesting that in expansionist circles of the U. S. A. a new, peculiar sort of illusion is widespread—while having no faith in their internal strength, faith is placed in the secret of the atomic bomb, although this secret of the atomic bomb ceased to exist a long time ago.

"Evidently the imperialists need this faith in the atomic bomb which, as is known, is not a means of defense but a weapon of aggression. Many are indignant that the U. S. A. and Great Britain hamper the United Nations organization from adopting a final decision on the prohibition of atomic weapons."

Refusal to prohibit atomic weapons, he added, "covers the imperialists with shame and sets against them all honest peoples, all peoples."

Molotov cited the interview given Harold Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, by Prime Minister Stalin in which the Russian leader expressed his belief in the pos-

'Little Assembly' Approved

Russia Announces Boycott As U. N. Votes Interim Body

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 6.—A year-round "Little Assembly" of the United Nations won overwhelming approval today, but the Soviet bloc immediately announced they would boycott it.

Forty-three nations backed with their votes an adamant insistence for a U. N. agency other than the stalemated Security Council to which they could bring any threats to their peace at any time when the General Assembly is not in session.

Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet deputy foreign minister, led his bloc of six votes in opposition before the Assembly's 57-nation Political Committee. And when he failed to impress any others with his claims that the "Little Assembly" was an illegal attempt to bypass the Security Council, he led them in announcements of the boycott.

Only the six Arab League states abstained from voting, a recent practice on virtually all questions other than the Palestine issue. Even Norway, Sweden and Denmark, usually cautious against antagonizing Russia, voted for the Little Assembly.

The large vote assured final approval by the General Assembly, John Foster Dulles of the United States optimistically called the "Little Assembly" the "most important United Nations development since San Francisco" where U. N. was created in 1945. "It will multiply the capacity of the General Assembly to service the cause of peace and security." Dulles "hoped" the six Slav nations would join later.

The boycott was the third on all "vital" actions recommended by Secretary of State George C. Marshall at the General Assembly's opening. Vishinsky has also led his flock in boycotts of the Balkin Commission to protect Greece and the Korean Commission to observe free elections in that bisected country.

Vishinsky surpassed himself in sarcasm and invective today, but in his calculated rage he made it clear that Russia intends to remain in the United Nations and that it would resist attempts at "being thrown out of this house."

He refused a suggestion by Britain's Sir Hartley Shawcross that its legality be submitted to the International Court of Justice as an

NLRB Denies Ballot Places To 2 Unions

Rulings Follow Failure to Comply With Anti-Red Oath

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In two precedent-making rulings, the National Labor Relations Board yesterday bared the sharp teeth of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The board refused to grant two unions which had failed to comply with the affidavit and registration provisions of the new law a place on the ballot in collective bargaining elections.

The two labor organizations, one of them the CIO National Maritime Union and the other the big New York City Local 65 of the CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Workers, had not met the NLRB's October 31 deadline for filing the requisite anti-Communist oaths and other financial and organizational data.

The effect of the rulings, it appeared, is to deny noncomplying unions a chance to use the labor law to establish themselves as the majority choice of the employes for collective bargaining purposes.

Furthermore, one of the decisions appeared to open the way for an outside—but complying—union to enter a plant and win away the bargaining rights from an established—but noncomplying—incumbent union.

Taken together, yesterday's decisions are bound to be followed by serious repercussions. They make clear that a noncomplying union has no way to use the peaceful processes of the law to gain or to hold bargaining status. It must once again rely—as before the passage of the Wagner Act—on its economic strength to win recognition from an employer.

Both of the key cases in yesterday's set of NLRB rulings were "hold-overs" from the period before passage of the Taft-Hartley Act. But a board spokesman said that the principles would serve as well for new cases, brought since August 22, the effective date of the new law.

Md. Senate Passes Lane's Tax Cut Bill

Measure Raises Sales Levy Base From 9 to 14 Cents

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6.—The State Senate, by vote of 26 to 2, today passed the administration bill to amend the State sales tax by raising the minimum base of taxable purchases from its present nine cents to 14 cents.

The bill now goes to the State House of Delegates, where chances to vote it down or alter it are considered even more slim. Passage of the bill in the Senate late this afternoon was a clear-cut victory for Gov. William Preston Lane, jr. It came only after several hours of heated argument, not indicated in the final vote.

Spectators Are Few

Sole dissenters after the measure came up for third and final reading, through suspension of legislative rules common at this special session, were Senator Roy Tasco Davis, (R., Montgomery County) of Sandy Springs, Md., and Senator Robert R. Kimble, (R., Allegany County), of Cumberland, Republican minority leader.

Senate passage of the bill followed a day in both House and Senate in which the legislators breezed through a majority of county matters and administration-sponsored measures considered even less controversial. It provided the only show for Assembly spectators, and there weren't many of these.

The lawmakers were slowed in racing prepared bills to completion only by delays in printing the measures fast enough for their

Chest Called Bulwark of Democracy

1200 at 'Kickoff' Urged by Senate Chaplain to Aim For $4,500,000

(Picture on Page 2)

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Community Chest was hailed as a bulwark of American democracy against communism yesterday as campaign workers formally launched the 1947 Greater Washington drive for funds.

The 1200 volunteers, meeting at a Dutch-treat, kickoff luncheon at the Statler, were exhorted to push the campaign over the minimum goal of $3,900,000 to meet the basic needs of the 125 Red Feather agencies in the District and suburban areas.

"A penny a day" contribution by the 1,250,000 residents of Greater Washington will boost the drive well over the top, the kep workers were told by Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and chaplain to the Senate.

Prove Faith Through Works

Dr. Marshall, principal speaker at the "D-Day" luncheon, declared that collection of "a penny a day" from every man, woman, and child in Greater Washington would bring in just over the $4,500,000 originally requested by the Chest agencies.

Through the Chest, he asserted, Greater Washington residents could show by works their faith in the American brand of democracy. As Americans, he pointed out, we place our accent on the individual. The Communists also use th eword "democracy," Dr. Marshall said, but interpret it differently. The Communists' accent, he explained is on the state.

The state, Dr. Marshall continued, has power, but no pity; compulsion, but no compassion; head, but no heart; regimentaion, but no religion; law, but no love.

Today "Red Feather Day"

Edward J. Foley, jr., Assistant Secretary of Treasury and campaign chairman, reaffirmed the pastor's point and declared that the Chest "is a weapon against misery and privation . . . and against communism."

Shortly after the opening luncheon, the District Commissioners proclaimed November 7—today—Red Feather Day.

The Community Chest Federation drive units 125 health and welfare agencies in Washington, and Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Prince Georges and Mont-

Dr. Marshall asserted that "our standards are all out of focus" when in a single day at the Jamaica race track $4,500,000 is bet on the horses. It's the same distortion of values, he said, which rewards the home-run-hitting ball player with $70,000 to $80,000 a year and pays the school teacher $1500 annually for educating children.

Dr. Marshall urged that the workers look upon the campaign as being "on the highest level—a thing God wants us to do."

Gen. "Ike" Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, will address a Chest rally at 4 p. m. today on the south steps of the Treasury Building.

GOP Agrees to Give Priority To Stopgap Aid for Europe; Herter Report Cites Urgency

Truman Wants Emergency Relief Considered Before High Price Problem

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

President Truman wants the special session of Congress to deal with emergency relief for Europe before tackling high prices at home.

The President used his press-radio conference yesterday to clarify his congressional plans as follows:

(1) His message to the special session o November 17 will be confined to the related problems of interim relief to Europe and prices here. It will tell Congress very plainly that European relief should have priority.

2. He will send a separate message later on the Marshall Plan, the long-term European recovery program. This message may be ready sometime during the special session, but perhaps not until the regular session in January.

Congress to Get All Facts

3. The congressional foreign policy committees that meet next Monday can have whatever information the Administration has. This was taken to mean that information about the "Marshall Plan" would be in congressional hands ahead of specific Administration proposals.

The Administration's request for interim aid for Europe, which the President regards as the number one priority, will amount to more than a billion dollars, including 642 million for winter food and fuel for France and Italy and 400 million for added occupation costs.

The Marshall Plan, which will come later, will be the American response to the four-year recovery program drawn up by 16 non-Soviet nations at Paris. Estimates of its first-year cost to the United States range between six and seven billion dollars.

Long-Range Plan Speeded

Although the long-range program will not be submitted to Congress until after November 17, Administration officials were still planning yesterday to submit it to the Bureau of the Budget in time for hearings scheduled to start next Monday.

It had not yet been decided whether to include a specific request for funds for at least the first year of the four-year recovery program.

President Truman was asked yesterday whether he would make a raido talk to the Nation about the European recovery program, in view of apparent ignorance about it among "average citizens."

He answered that he had been working on a plan to get the matter before the country in the simplest possible form so everyone could understand it.

Explains Scope of Task

He told reporters it had been a tremendous job to get the material ready, and cited the Krug and Nourse Committee reports and the Harriman Committee survey which, he said, probably would reach him today.

You can't take a single report and say it is the Marshall Plan, the President explained; you have to coordinate all the documents, put the whole thing together, explain it specifically and then send it to Congress.

He said he did not have a crystal ball to predict whether Congress would deal with European aid

Crates of Live Chickens Sent President in Poultry Protest

The Washington Post

Luckman's chickens are gratefully received by Col. Wesley Bouterse (left) and Maj. George Ribble of the Salvation Army

Crates of live chickens consigned to President Truman and his food conservation committee began arriving in Washington yesterday, shipped here by poultry raisers in protest against chickenless Thursdays.

Some of the clucking biddies were addressed to the White House, others to the office of Citizens Food Committee Chairman Charles Luckman in the State Department.

The campaign, immediately dubbed "Hens for Harry" and "Leghorns for Luckman," developed as poultrymen were complaining that elimination of poultry from the nation's tables on Thursdays has reduced consumption of fowl to the point where raisers have been forced into the red.

The live chicken shipments were said to have originated in upstate New York. In most cases the shipments were preceded by telegrams which said in effect:

"I can't sell these chickens and can't feed them, so I'm forwarding them to you."

About 100 chickens on the 'hoof' reached Washington yesterday and an industry source whispered that before the campaign is over more than 1000 of the feathered symbols of protest may arrive here.

The food conservation committee office ordered that its live chicken shipments be detoured to the Salvation Army Emergency Home, 622 5th st: nw:

Salvation Army Adjutant Edna Cooper, highly pleased, said the chickens will be fed to guests at the home "every day except poultryless Thursday."

The White House announced that it was sending its live chickens to veterans at Walter Reed Hospital.

While the chicken shipments were arriving, the Agriculture Department, by coincidence, issued a report stating that poultry is glutting the Nation's markets.

In protest, poultrymen, led by Herman Demme, president of the National Poultry Producers Federation, met with Austin Fisher, vice-chairman of the Citizens Food Committee, at an all-day meeting yesterday to urge the adoption of a substitute for poultryless Thursday.

What substitute was suggested

Service Funds Control Taken By Forrestal

Defense Arms Barred From Capitol Hill Trips on Their Own

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal yesterday took direct control of military purse strings and barred the Army, Navy or Air Force from taking independent action on Capitol Hill.

His order aims at settling all budget and legislative differences within the defense establishment and the avoidance of public bickering between the services. It provides two procedures on legislation—one for appropriations and the second for all other congressional matters.

In the former, the Army, Navy and Air Force must submit their recommendations to Forrestal, through his special assistant, W. J. McNeil. The Defense chief will "coordinate" the three department's budgets, before submitting them to the White House, it was said.

Thorough Coordination

As to other "reports or recommendations on proposed or pending legislation," it is directed that they not be submitted to the Bureau of the Budget or Congress until there has been "thorough interdepartmental coordination."

Where one of the three departments can clear a proposed bill or recommendation on a pending measure, it is then permitted to communicate directly with Capitol Hill or the Budget Bureau. In such cases, the Secretary of Defense

Marshall Plan To Be Considered By Congress Early Next Year

(Partial Text of Report, Page 4).

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House and Senate foreign policy chiefs, backstopped by a special House committee on foreign aid, yesterday agreed to give emergency session priority to interim relief for Europe.

Abandoning the "one bite" approach, GOP strategists decided to proceed with stopgap legislation first, and follow through with the long range Marshall Plan probably early next year.

The House Foreign Economic Committee meanwhile recommended both the Export-Import Bank and the Commodity Credit Corporation be authorized to assist France and Italy through March 31, in event of any legislative hitch.

Grave Threat Recognized

The so-called Herter group, writing its own program for European recovery, unanimously agreed on three sections of a report declaring Western Europe's economy "gravely threatened."

"The slender remaining resources of these countries will not carry them many months more without disastrous shortages of food, fuel, and certain raw materials, as well as of the capital goods required to stimulate recovery," read the report.

"These shortages are likely to have serious political and economic repercussions from which we cannot effectively insulate ourselves if we would."

The "meet the emergency first" plan of procedure was announced jointly by Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and House Foreign Affairs Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) following a conference on tactics.

Agrees With Truman Stand

This lined up substantially with the President's own press conference statement that Congress should act on emergency relief to Europe ahead of any price legislation. Like the President, also, Vandenberg and Eaton indicated uncertainty whether the over-all Marshall Plan would be laid before Congress in the special session.

One top Republican spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said there is no chance of enactment of the long-range program before the regular session even if it is ready.

The Vandenberg-Eaton statement, however, stressed that Secretary Marshall, when he appears Monday before a joint meeting of their two committees, will present a "preliminary, general view" of the long-range program, in addition to stop-gap aid details.

They said Marshall will bring an interim aid bill with him and the committees will "deal primarily with the emergency food and fuel situation in France, Italy and Austria this winter."

"The committees also will follow through into an examination of the long-range, self-help programs involving 16 nations," they added. "The extent to which the two problems will be considered together will be determined by the committees."

GOP Leaders Return

A rash of statements broke out as GOP leaders returned to the Capitol in advance of next week's aid push.

1. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., (R., Mass.) said: "There will be no rubber stamping of the foreign aid program. It is going to have to be justified all the way. It must be done on a sound and intelligent basis."

2. House Majority Leader Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) said the House Republican leadership won't "jam through any proposition." He added: "Aid to Europe, figuratively, must be done in a glass bowl. That certainly is not asking too much."

A jurisdictional point meanwhile left it unsettled whether the House Foreign Affairs Committee, headed by Eaton, or the House banking group led by Representative Jesse Wolcott (R. Mich.), will handle the aid legislation.

Wolcott's committee, it was learned, may sit jointly with Eaton's Foreign Affairs Committee during next week's preliminary aid testimony.

The decision may hinge on the

Prelate's Order Against 'Amber' Film Is Ignored

Philadelphia, Nov. 6, (UP). — Members of two Roman Catholic organizations today picketed two central city theaters which turned down an ultimatum by Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, to discontinue showings of "Forever Amber" and "The Outlaw."

Members of the Catholic War Veterans and the Holy Name Society began picketing the theaters last night shortly after the expiration of a 48-hour deadline given by the cardinal for withdrawal of the films to avoid a year's boycott from 1,000,000 Catholics in his 10-county archdiocese.

The prelate warned the theater operators in a letter Monday that unless they withdrew the two films he would order not only the theaters boycotted, but all Twentieth - Century Fox productions shown in the archdiocese.

William Goldman, operator of the Erlanger Theater featuring Jane Russell's "The Outlaw," was told that his three other mid-city houses, the Goldman, Keith's and the Karlton, also would be boycotted.

Manager Harold Siedenberg of the Fox theater said that "Forever Amber" was "here indefinitely," adding that the picture, now in its third week, would run until attendance decreased. Its star is Linda Darnell.

Amish Creed Broken

Cult Says Only God Can Lift Ban on Sinner Who Used Car

Wooster, Ohio, Nov. 6 (AP).—An Amish minister declared today actions of Andrew J. Yoder, which led to expulsion of Yoder from the church and the latter's $40,000 damage suit against four Amish officials, were "done to God" and rendered the churchmen incapable of lifting the ban.

In a highly emotional talk, Pastor John J. Nisley of Fredericksburg, Ohio, told a jury, "I feel very sorry that we are here. I have lost sleep thinking over this as I read the Scripture and prayed to God for a way."

Nisley said that if Yoder's action in using an automobile to transport his sick child to a doctor "had been a brother sin between Andy and me, we might have made it up. But when Andy went down on his knees and confessed (in joining the church) all this (the church laws) to be right, we had nothing else to do with it."

Nisley paused, looked at Judge Walter Mougey and the jury, and declared: "I have a high respect for you. But this sin was done to God. I am praying to God that the church and the jury do right. I am grateful that we have an order (the court) like you have here. We also must have that kind of order in the church."

In cross-examination, Plaintiff Attorney George Barnard asked: "If you are grateful that we have a national constitution, why do you put a boycott on someone and ruin his life—barring him from his constitution rights?"

The minister replied by quoting

'I'm Running for President'

Stassen Won't Accept GOP Nomination for Vice President

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen said today he would not accept nomination for Vice President on the Republican ticket in 1948.

Stassen, avowed Republican presidential candidate, made his statement in reply to questions before leaving by plane for Minneapolis.

He first was asked by reporters if he would accept nomination as Vice President on a [illegible] headed by either Gens. Dwight Eisenhower or Douglas MacArthur.

"No," he replied, "I am running for the presidential nomination."

Then asked if the vice presidential nomination were definitely unacceptable, Stassen replied in the affirmative.

Stassen told newsmen his campaign for the presidential nomination was "coming along in an encouraging manner, particularly in the Middle West," and added that his supporters estimated that of 130 delegates from North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and Minnesota approximately 100 would vote for him on the first ballot at the Republican Convention.

The former Minnesota Governor said the estimate of his strength in the Middle West was based on polls and on the belief he had "won the majority [illegible] ship in this area."

Stassen said it was still too early to figure his strength in the rest of the country, adding he would make a campaign trip through the South from November 17 to November 21, with appearances in Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Florida and Texas.

U. S. Urges Action On Atomic Control

Time for Lip Service Past, Bard Tells U. N., Citing Minority Barrier

The United States yesterday blamed "a small minority" in the United Nations for delaying world arms reduction and called for immediate action to "establish international control over atomic energy."

The U. S. declaration was made at a closed meeting of the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments shortly after Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov had declared that atomic secrets had ceased to exist.

Ralph A. Bard, U. S. delegate at Lake Success, did not refer to Molotov's declaration that the United States and Britain had hampered efforts to work out a system of atomic control.

Bard Calls For Action

"Lip service to the cause of disarmament in General Assembly debates," Bard said, "is no substitute for constructive action. Let us have a vigorous attack on these basic problems."

The Molotov pronouncement caused a flurry among U. N. delegates and officials, but the consensus was: "There is nothing new in it."

Some speculated on whether Molotov's announcement might mean a new Soviet move to end the United Nations deadlock on control of atomic energy.

British Minister of State Hector McNeil said Russia must "carry the primary responsibility for holding up both atomic energy and conventional disarmament" within the United Nations.

Frederick H. Osborn, United States deputy on the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, said:

"I might point out that not only the United States, but 13 other countries which have participated in the deliberations of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, have flatly refused to accept the Russian thesis. On the other hand it is the U.S.S.R. alone which blocks agreement by refusing to accept the safeguards which the 13 other delegations have decided are indispensible for their individual and collective security."

Washington Comment

In Washington, a number of lawmakers said they got the impression Molotov's remarks were tailored for home consumption.

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), former chairman of the Senate Atomic Energy Committee, said he does not believe Russia has yet achieved the production of any atomic bombs.

"Naturally," McMahon told a reporter, "Russia would like us to believe that she has it now. Of course, no one is going to know just when she does it and I must admit that it is possible, though not probable, that she has it now."

Senator Connally of Texas, ranking Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, said that Molotov is "laboring under a delusion" and that the United States has never tried to gain a monopoly of atomic energy.

"It proposed a plan to share the secret with Russia and other nations, under proper safeguards, but Russia refused," he said.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said Molotov's remarks forced the conclusion that the Russians have the atomic bomb. He called that "shocking."

Senator Hatch (D.-N. M.) was one of those who labeled Molotov's remarks "for home consumption." He said the Russian foreign minister had disclosed a complete lack of understanding of American motives.

The Army simply reiterated:

"Our best estimates indicate that it will take any other nation several years to complete one bomb. * * * For a number of years, perhaps as many as eight to 15, only the United States will possess atomic bombs in significant quantities."

infringement on the "sovereign right of States."

"I am surprised," said Shawcross who is British attorney general, "that the great prosecutor of Russia's treason trials based his case on so much assertion and so little evidence.

"One can almost imagine Mr. Vishinsky exclaiming that the accused are guilty, that evidence is unnecessary. One sees him pointing a finger and crying, 'Tass says so, Pravda says so, Izvestia says so. Therefore, off with their heads—off to Siberia.'"

Britain, he declared, does not object to the principle that each of the five big powers should have the right to veto in the Security Council, but this principle of unanimity among the major powers should not be "the empty, bitter frustrating mockery it is now." It should not be, he added, "perverted into a principle of domination by a minority."

The Boa and the Rabbit

Vishinsky, half rising in anger, mocked the appeal for cooperation: "We hear flamboyant appeals: 'Why do you not meet us halfway? Why are you not kind enough to do that? Why don't you cooperate—you Soviet saboteurs, you diversionists, you dynamiters who want to blow up this house.'"

"We are being thrown out of this house now, we are deprived of our rights, the very Charter is being flagrantly violated, and then we hear these flamboyant appeals: 'Why are you not good boys? Why do you not come closer to us? Why not rest your heads on our shoulders? We shall embrace you; we shall hold you close. Perhaps we shall hold you so close to our hearts that incidentally we shall suffocate you and break your bones—just incidentally.'

"This is the caress of a boa constrictor for a rabbit. But Sir Hartley Shawcross has miscalculated; in the first place he lacks the magnetism of a boa constrictor and in the second place I am not a rabbit."

Vishinsky declared that the proper method for setting up the interim committee, or "Little Assembly" was by amendment to the Charter.

sibility of Soviet-American collaboration, even with their different economic systems, and declared:

"Soviet Russia has invariably carried out, and is carrying out, the policy of peace and international collaboration. Such are the relations of the Soviet Union with all the countries which evince a desire to collaborate."

But he coupled this statement with the further declaration that "naturally it should be understood that, provided there was no desire to collaborate, then—even with economic systems which were alike—States and peoples might be fighting each other."

Refers to U. S. Bases

Lashing out at "American imperialism" he declared certain quarters in the United States "no longer hide the fact that the United States of America is acquiring new naval and air bases in all parts of the globe, and even adopt whole States for such like aims, especially if closely situated to the Soviet Union."

"Who," he demanded, "does not complain about the pressure of American imperialism?"

Asserting even some large nations "preserve a kind of solid silence" about such pressure, he said "it is certain that certain small states are faced by an absolutely intolerable position."

He cited Denmark, which he said, had been unable to reassert her sovereignty over Greenland, and Egypt, which he said "legitimately" demands the withdrawal of British troops without effect.

Sees Doom of Capitalism

Turning to the USSR, he declared the era of Soviet power was only at its beginning, while capitalism was "on its last legs" in a period when "all roads lead to communism."

Communist rule, he said, had transformed Russia "from a backward country into a progressive one, from an agrarian one into an industrial one," and that already industrial output had reached its preware level in the Soviet Union.

"Not only in the countries friendly to us, but elsewhere, there are millions of people devoted to the Soviet Union," he declared, adding that the recent creation of the Communist information bureau at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, was a good thing for increasing "Communist influence among the masses."

Claims U. S. Dictates

On the other hand, he said, "everywhere capitalism rules, it oppresses the working people."

Alluding to Russia's series of five-year plans, he said possibly there exists in the United States a program of economic development of the country for some period ahead." But the American press, he said, had mentioned no such projects, and on the contrary was filled with stories about the Marshall Plan.

"One might think," Molotov commented, "that the domestic problems of the United States have long ago been solved, and that now it is only a question of putting the affairs of the other states in order, dictating its policy to them even to the composition of their governments."

Declaring the United States and Britain head an "international grouping" aimed at domination over other peoples, "with the active participation of certain Socialist leaders," Molotov asserted that the Soviet Union's policy was based "on the principle of nonintervention."

He went on:

"Take, for example, the German question. If in the postwar period America and Britain had adhered to all the principles—let us say, of example, the democratic principles—of the Yalta and Potsdam conference on the German question, which made possible and fruitful the collaboration of the great Allies against Hitlerite Germany, with the aim of liquidating the remnants of fascism, then collaboration between the Soviet Union, the U. S. A. and Britain would also today produce good results."

"At the present time there exists an Anglo-American plan—by giving some alms to calm the population of the Anglo-American zone of Germany—for basing themselves here on the former German capitalists who were recently the Hitlerite support, and for utilizing with their aid the joint zone with its Ruhr industrial basin as a threat against those countries which do not display slavish submissiveness with regard to the Anglo-American plans for domination in Europe.

Adventurists' Plans

"But these adventurists' plans, based on Germany, will lead to nothing good and it goes without saying, will be rejected by democratic Europe . . .

"The task of our time is to unite all the anti-imperialistic and democratic forces of the nations into one mighty camp, welded together by the unity of their vital interests against the imperialist and anti-democratic camp and its policy of enslavement of the peoples and new adventures. . .

"Certain ministers and senators may fail to understand that. But if the anti-imperialist and democratic camp consolidates its forces and utilizes all its opportunities, it will force the imperialists to be wiser and to conduct themselves more calmly. It must be surmised that capitalism is not interested in speeding up its own collapse.

"One cannot deny that the vestiges of capitalism are extremely persistent in people's consciousness, and therefore the party constantly reminds the Soviet people of the necessity of thoroughgoing criticism and self-criticism, directed towards the elimination of those harmful vestiges of the past. One cannot deny, on the other hand, that at present we have immense possibilities for waging a successful struggle for the elimination of these vestiges."

Smith Hears Molotov In Silence

Moscow, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, American Ambassador, stood calmly in the rear of a box in the Bolshoi Theater tonight while 60 feet away, on the stage, Foreign Minister Vlacheslav Molotov said the atomic bomb was no longer a secret and denounced United States policy.

In the same box was the British Ambassador, Sir Maurice Drummond Peterson, whose own country came under the attack.

Neither man took part in the prolonged applause which greeted Molotov's principal points.

The stage backdrop consisted of a 25-foot-high painting of Generalissimo Josef Stalin and Nikolai Lenin. Stalin apparently was still at a Black Sea resort.

Soviet Can Now Face Any Foe, Bulganin Says

London, Nov. 6 (A.P.).—Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, Russian defense minister, said tonight in an order of the day that "the Soviet people in two years of the five-year plan have built a country which can stand against any enemy."

The broadcast order attacked "the instigators of a new war," declaring "the warmongers should remember the disgraceful end of the German Fascists who dug the grave for other capitalist countries."

Bullets Miss Burma Premier, Kill Briton, Wound Officer

Rangoon, Burma, Nov. 6 (A.P.).—An assassin barely missed Prime Minister Thakin Nu today but killed a British soldier and wounded a British officer, an official communique said.

The communique said six shots were fired at the prime minister 15 miles from Rangoon as he was returning from a vacation in the country. The British officer and soldier were traveling in a jeep immediately behind Thakin Nu's car.

The assassin escaped into the jungle, the announcement said.

The prime minister succeeded Maj. Gen. U Aung San, leader of the anti-fascist People's Freedom League, who was assassinated with six fellow cabinet members on July 19 in the executive council chamber. Former premier U Saw and eight other men have been charged with conspiracy in the killings.

Meanwhile, government party sources said three ministers, including Defense Minister Bo Let Ya, will fly Sunday to the Arakan division of the West Coast of Burma where clashes are occurring between government units and Arakanese rebels. The ministers will evaluate the situation with a view to planning fresh governmental operations in the disturbed area, the sources said.

Virginians Identified As Plane Crash Victims

Napanoch, N. Y., Nov. 6 (A.P.).—The wreckage of a plane, containing the bodies of two men tentatively identified as South Norfolk, Va., residents, was found yesterday by a hunter in an isolated mountainous section 7 miles from here.

Wurtsboro, N. Y., State police headquarters listed the men tentatively as Philemon Joseph Landry, jr., and Walter Dews, both of South Norfolk.

Surplus U. S. Radar Sent to Yugoslavia

30 Crates Shipped By Relief Group to Belgrade Red Cross

New York, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—Thirty crates of radar and radio equipment, enough for three complete naval radar sets, were shipped from New York Harbor on October 25, bound for Yugoslavia, and sent by the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief, it was disclosed today.

The crates, each the size of two billard tables, were lowered into the hold of the freighter Radnik, which by now probably is nearing its designated port of Fiume in Yugoslavia.

The records accompanying the shipment, it was revealed officially, showed that the radar and radio equipment were to be shipped to the Yugoslav Red Cross, and that its shipper was the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief, an organization which raises funds in this country principally for the support of childrens' hospital in Yugoslavia.

No Violation of Law

There was no violation of law involved. The radar was outmoded so far as the United States Navy is concerned but, according to informed sources, probably was as good or better than anything possessed by the Yugoslavs.

The equipment was purchased at one of the surplus sales of the War Assets Administration.

Customs men and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation made a surprise visit to the warehouse of the committee before the ship sailed. They found and opened 34 crates—four of which were medical supplies and 30 of which were radar and radio equipment.

The committee denied it was the owner of the equipment and, through Mrs. Zlaton Balokovic, one of the board members and wife of the committee's president, offered this explanation:

The committee maintains a large warehouse in the Bronx. Through this warehouse pass not only its own relief shipments but also the shipments to Yugoslavia of items supplied by individuals and organizations which rent warehouse space and labor.

The shipment in question, she said, was sent by the Yugoslav Embassy.

The Yugoslav purchasing officer in Washington said that he recently bought eight radar sets for $7800 from the Advice Corporation of Washington, which had bought the equipment from the WAA. It was pointed out that WAA cannot sell to foreign governments, but that it sells to private corporations which, in turn, can sell to any buyer.

The Yugoslav government has purchased about $180,000 of surplus war materials since the end of the war, and "hopes to buy more if we get the dollars," the purchasing officer said.

Plane Engines Bought

In addition to radar, the Yugoslavs have bought some 65 surplus plane engines for about $78,000.

The U. S. State Department disclosed it had investigated the radar shipment and also had been told by the committee that it had only made available space in its warehouse to the Yugoslav embassy pending the arrival of a Yugoslav ship, apparently the Radnik.

However, the New York customs office has stated categorically that the bill of lading showed the listed shipper to be the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief and its receiver the Yugoslav Red Cross in Belgrade.

The committee is registered with the State Department, and its records show that it operates in Yugoslavia 300 children's rest homes, six general hospitals, one children's hospital and 12 tuberculosis clinics.

Culture Must Guide Science, UNESCO Told

Mexico City, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—President Miguel Aleman told the opening session of the second General Assembly of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization today that "culture must take science by the hand and lead it," or science may destroy mankind.

"The task before UNESCO is to promote science and to find the ways and means whereby all nations shall share in its benefits and collaborate in its development, under the conditions that culture preside over those benefits and that collaboration," he said.

Aleman spoke to delegates and observers from 48 nations, as they opened a month's discussion of their international program. Other speakers at the first session were Manuel Gual Vidal, Mexican Minister of Public Education, and Jacques Maritain, French Ambassador to the Vatican and head of the French delegation and president of the conference.

There was little business on the assembly program today. Besides the speeches, it included only the appointment of three special committees.

Va. Recluse Gives Charity $100,000

Chester, Va., Nov. 6 (A.P.)—An 86-year-old Virginia recluse, whose first earnings came from selling bark used in tanning leather, and who had amassed a fortune of nearly $100,000 when he died early in October, left the bulk of his estate to two Richmond homes for aged women and two Richmond hospitals.

The clerk's office of Chesterfield County Circuit Court, where the will was probated, said today that Peter B. Belcher, after making bequests to relatives and friends, divided his estate into four equal parts to go to the Baptist Home for Aged Women, the Richmond Home for Ladies, Shelting Arms Hospital and Crippled Children's Hospital.

Mikolajczyk Fears for Lives Of 3 Associates

London, Nov. 6 (A.P.)—Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Polish Peasant Party leader, expressed anxiety today for the lives of three party associates reported by Poland to have been arrested while attempting to flee to Czechoslovakia.

The Polish government last night identified the three as Wincenty Bryja, treasurer, and party; Mrs. Maria Hulewicz, Mikolajczk's private secretary, and Mieczslaw Dabrowski, a "collaborator" with the former deputy premier.

In an interview at his London suburban home, where he has found sanctuary from what he described as "the unparalleled terror now reigning in Poland," Mikolajczyk said he had been informed that two other Polish peasant party leaders and their wives who fled with him from Poland are now "out of the danger area and safe."

The peasant party leader, who arrived here by British plane from Berlin Monday, said the two leaders from whom he had heard were Stefan Kolobonski, a member of the party executive, and Kazimir Baginski, party vice-chairman, and that they would join him in London with their wives.

He declined to give their exact whereabouts, saying they still could be "kidnapped by the Communists."

Mikolajczyk described as mostly "lies" the charges in the Polish communique that the fugitives had received the aid of an unnamed foreign embassy in Warsaw.

The Warsaw dispatches said the government was pushing its inquiry into the escape with indications there would be new arrests of persons suspected of helping the eight persons.

Bread That Remains Fresh 6 Months Is New Army Trick

By Walter Pulliam
Post Reporter

Loaves of bread that will keep fresh "as the day they were baked" for at least six months have been produced by the Army's Quartermaster Corps.

The development, being made available for commercial use, was revealed here yesterday by Col. Charles S. Lawrence, commander of the Army's Food and Container Institute at Chicago.

Other new developments include a way of canning cakes to stay good two years and a new egg-dehydrating process to make heretofore palateless dried eggs taste henfresh a year later.

Samples at Statler

Colonel Lawrence was here to attend a one-day meeting at the Statler Hotel of representatives of industrial groups cooperating in the Army's $700,000-a-year food research program.

Samples of the six-months-old bread were distributed during the day to persons visiting an industry-quartermaster food show in the Statler's South American room.

The loaves are baked by a new formula and packaged in a laminated aluminum-foil, plastic and paper wrapper. Canned bread which may be kept fresh for two years also has been developed, Colonel Lawrence said.

The Army's food research, centered in Chicago, is carried on through 85 colleges and universities, research foundations and industrial organizations.

The Food and Container Institute, which directs and coordinates the work, is now three years old.

Old Order Changeth

"Our research already has proved World War II rations to be obsolete," Colonel Lawrence said. "It is clear now that we can produce a much better ration than anything in use during the war."

Practically all the old ration standbys from the familiar "C" ration to the "D" emergency chocolate bar have undergone changes or have been discarded altogether.

Research is centered primarily in improving both the nutritive value and palatability of all rations.

Of 900 food items taken from cookbooks and hotel and restaurant menus, fewer than 200 are known and used in all 48 States, Colonel Lawrence said.

Tests have revealed, he said, that of all food items the hamburger, plain and simple, is the best known and the most widely eaten.

Wildcat Strike Holds Queen Mary 25 Hours

Southampton, England, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—After a 25-hour delay caused by a wildcat strike of 300 crew members, the luxury liner Queen Mary sailed for New York in a slight fog today with 2000 passengers, including the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The strikers, part of the ship's complement of 1280, returned to their berths after walking out yesterday in support of a seamen's strike at Liverpool, demanding a union hiring hall and pay for idle time between sailings.

Liberals Lose Key Positions In Romania

Bucharest, Romania, Nov. 6.—Liberal Party members were swept out of the Communist-dominated government and other key places in Romania today as a result of the treason trial of Peasant Party leader Juliu Maniu, and Premier Petru Groza set about reorganizing his cabinet.

The liberals were the second largest party in parliament.

Gheorghe Tatarescu, long-term premier under the regime of King Carol and foe of the pre-war Iron Guard, resigned as deputy premier and foreign minister after the House of Deputies last night voted no confidence in his administration at an extraordinary session.

The three other liberal ministers in the cabinet, Minister of Finance Alexandru Alexandrini, Minister of Public Works George Vantu and Minister of Culture Radu Rosculet, immediately followed his example.

Tiberiu Mosoia, governor of the Romanian National Bank, and other liberal party men in key positions, then resigned.

The House of Deputies voted its no confidence, 187 to 5, after several witnesses at the treason trial of Peasant Party leader Maniu had testified last week to copying confidential foreign ministry documents for alleged plotters against the state.

The no-confidence motion said the "happenings at the ministry of foreign affairs could not have been possible without his (Tatarescu's) knowledge."

In the elections of November 19, 1946, Tatarescu's Liberals won 75 seats in Parliament, compared to the Social Democrats' 78. The Plowmen's Party, headed by Premier Groza, won 70, while th fourth large party, the Communists, won 68.

(The political handbook of the world lists the Communists, Plowmen's Front, Social Democrats and two independents as remaining in the cabinet.)

Mussolini Sought Early Peace, Says De Gasperi Book

Chicago, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—Benito Mussolini wanted to make peace with the Allies two months before the Italian armistice, but failed to carry out his plan because he feared Hitler's reaction, Italy's present Prime Minister disclosed today.

Alcide de Gasperi, writing in "Ten Eventful Years," a four-volume history of the war decade published by Encyclopaedia Brittanica, said Mussolini "lacked the courage" to mention a separate peace to Hitler.

De Gasperi said Mussolini was compelled to drag an unwilling and unprepared Italy into World War II as Germany's partner because Hitler jumped by three years the timetable Mussolini had drawn up for an "inevitable" war.

Ruhland Regrets Loss of Gallinger Medical Officer

Health Officer George C. Ruhland expressed "regret" yesterday at the resignation of Joseph T. Roberts, chief Gallinger Hospital medical officer, and called for an "upward adjustment" of Gallinger salaries.

"While I regret the loss of so competent a man from our staff," Dr. Ruhland said, "the University of Arkansas Medical School gains." Dr. Roberts resigned Wednesday to become dean of the school.

"The loss of such physicians as these emphasizes forcefully the fact that some upward adjustment in salaries will be necessary to attract and hold competent men for continued improvement in the services at Gallinger and in the Health Department proper," Dr. Ruhland declared.

3 Parts of Herter Committee Report

The text of three sections of the report of the Herter Committee on Foreign Aid unanimously approved yesterday by the group follows:

(Revisions to Section II of the draft of the Preliminary Report.)

II. EMERGENCY AID TO CERTAIN COUNTRIES AS RELATED TO GENERAL FOREIGN-AID PROGRAMS.

THE President has presented to the country as the most acute problem and the one demanding the most immediate attention the so-called "interim aid program" which is represented as dealing with the rapidly dwindling resources of France and Italy. This program is framed to finance the imports of essential items for these countries to March 31, 1948, apparently on the assumption that a longer-run program for foreign aid may be in effect by that time.

While this problem is one demanding immediate attention, it must be emphasized that it is merely a part of a larger problem, of only slightly lesser urgency, facing not only France and Italy, but other foreign countries whose economies were devastated by the war. In varying degrees, all of such countries require food, fuel, fertilizer, raw materials, and manufactured goods in order to help preserve their economies and to make possible a balance in their payments that will permit needed imports into such countries from all sources.

The solution of this general problem has raised the question of foreign-aid programs on the part of the United States. Certain liberated countries of Europe have shown the road to recovery and have made remarkable progress in that direction. The committee noted among these Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Luxembourg and Norway. On the other hand, the problem is particularly pressing in France and Italy. The committee is prepared to make available to the appropriate standing committees of the House and to the Congress generally its findings regarding the urgent requirements of these two countries. It has also prepared estimates as to the possible strain that those requirements will put upon United States' resources and the relation thereof to the total foreign-aid requirements.

The problem of the timing of aid for France and Italy is now pressed on the Congress for immediate attention as a matter of helping to preserve these economies. This committee points out that the constructive side of European aid must also be attacked through the recovery of Germany on which the other countries of Europe largely depend. It was the opinion of officials in the surrounding countries who were consulted by the committee, confirmed by the report of the 16-nation conference in Paris, that German recovery is an essential step within Europe to aid their own recovery. Subject to the proper controls for preventing the remilitarization of Germany which are being applied and which can be applied, Germany can make a key contribution to European shortages of manufactured items, coal, and steel. Detailed studies as to the extent of this contribution and how it can lighten the load of the United States will be submitted by the committee in a supplementary report.

SHOULD the Congress through its responsible legislative committees, find that as a practical matter it will not be able to set in motion other machinery of foreign aid by the end of the special session, the committee recommends that action should be taken prior to that time to authorize funds for the purchase of supplies through the Export-Import Bank and the Commodity Credit Corporation for any aid for France and Italy found necessary to assist those countries through March 31.

It should be noted that the French request for an advance of 30 million dollars to enable France to repay Belgium for the charge of Belgians working in France, and a similar request for 10 million dollars to settle outstanding French obligations in Brazil, are not in the nature of emergency aid, but involve balance-of-payments problems. At the same time emergency aid to France will help to keep the economy of France operating in a way that will permit total balancing of payments. In other words the emergency aid presents the same problems as does the general European aid program, and Congress should bear this in mind in setting up any emergency aid program.

The committee must therefore emphasize that there is no assurance that the proposed emergency aid program alone will solve the problem. However, an interim aid program will provide the time necessary for an adequate consideration of a long-range program.

IV. PRINCIPLES AND ORGANIZATION THAT SHOULD GOVERN ANY FOREIGN-AID PROGRAM.

An economically sound world is essential to the security and well-being of all nations. When the economies of countries break down, political conditions become unstable, free institutions are endangered, the freedoms of the individual tend to disappear, and the peace of the world is jeopardized.

Today the economies of certain countries of western Europe are gravely threatened. The slender remaining resources of these countries will not carry them many months more without disastrous shortages of food, fuel, and certain raw materials, as well as of the capital goods required to stimulate recovery. These shortages are likely to have serious political and economic repercussions from which we cannot effectively insulate ourselves if we would.

The emergency, though aggravated this year by crop failure, is not a temporary one. This fact must be faced and, if remedial action is to be taken, plans must be formulated accordingly.

Two world wars and the rift between west and east in Europe have corroded the foundation on which the economy of Europe is based. To rebuild this economy will require vigorous and well-concerted action by the European countries themselves.

This report is generally addressed to western Europe, but the general principles enunciated are equally applicable to other countries where aid may later be found necessary. Germany and Japan, in view of their military occupation, present special problems which may require separate treatment.

B. ASSUMPTIONS OF THE PARIS CONFERENCE

THE nature of the circumstances in which the European countries presented their "requirements," the absence of any central authority which could reduce them to a common basis or have them drawn from common assumptions necessarily render these estimates little more than efforts to arrive at the order of magnitude of the problem. The attempt was made to develop a productive capacity in Europe by 1951 that would, after that time, raise all consumption levels substantially higher than prewar, but since the calculations were necessarily in the nature of guesses as to what the levels of prices, size of harvests, rate of utilization of equipment, ability to use and transfer manpower, and many other unknown factors would be, the committee cannot feel that they constitute, in any sense, the basis for a long-term authorization of funds. Detailed studies of these requirements, which are to be published subsequently, reaveal the possibility of many steps which could be taken, including the greater contribution of Germany to the total economic recovery of Europe as well as other factors which, in the judgment of the committee, might reduce the magnitude of European requirements. It will, in any case, be necessary to set an agency that can screen the European and other foreign requests for aid and insist upon justification of the requests and upon common action to meet these needs, as well as upon the mobilization of the resources of other countries which are also asking for aid, in one form or another, from the United States.

Republicans Agree to Give Priority to Stopgap Foreign Aid

weight given financing arrangements and agencies in the aid legislation. The House GOP steering committee will finally decide who gets the bill.

Wolcott meanwhile has urged the Herter Committee to consider a financing plan he has already aired at the White House and in GOP councils.

The Michigan Republican proposed that European countries pay for all but direct grants in their own currencies. They would pay into a United States trust fund set up in Europe. This Government in turn would draw on the fund to pay some of its own overseas expenses in local currencies, without conversion into dollars.

Wolcott further proposed that any Government corporation set up to handle foreign aid float its own bond issues, guaranteed by the Government, to obtain recovery funds, much as the Export-Import Bank does now.

Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), directing efforts of the House Foreign Economic Commiteee to write its own aid program, released three sections of the 19-man group's preliminary report as soon as the committee approved them.

He said the group will sit late again today in an attempt to complete the memaining sections, including controversial proposals for administering the program.

One paragraph approved yesterday raised doubts whether a new corporate aid agency will be put in charge of the first stopgap phase of the aid program.

The language, construed by some to mean the committee hoped to restrict the program as far as possible to goods, rather than dollars, read as follows:

"Should Congress, through its responsible legislative committees and that as a practical matter I will not be able to set in motion other machinery of foreign aid by the end of the Special Session, the committee recommends that action should be taken prior to that time to authorize funds for the purchase of supplies through the Export-Import Bank and the Commodity Credit Corp. for any aid to France and Italy found necessary to assist those countries through March 31."

Herter told reporters he hoped to put stopgap relief under the proposed special agency "if there is time in the special session."

A section of the report, dealing with the Paris 16-nation conference, termed over-all estimates on the long range program "little more than efforts to arrive at the magnitude of the problem . . . necessarily in the nature of guesses."

It said the committee "cannot feel they constitute, in any sense, the basis for a long-term authorization of funds." It suggested the "possibility of many steps which could be taken, including the greater contribution of Germany to the total economic recovery of Europe, and other factors . . ."

"It will," it said, "in any case, be necessary to set up an agency that can screen the European and other foreign requests for aid and insist upon justification of the requests and upon comon action to meet these needs as well as upon the mobilization of the resources of other countries which are also asking for aid . . ."

The interim aid section of the report noted the "rapidly dwindling resources" of France and Italy and called for "the immediate attention (of Congress) as a matter of helping to preserve these economies." It said the problem "must also be attacked through the recovery of Germany on which the other countries of Europe largely depend."

It underlined the lack of any "assurance that the proposed emergency aid program alons will solve the problem."

"However," it said, "an interim aid program will provide the time necessary for adequate consideration of a long range program."

Soviet Deputy Gets War Compensation Dropp From Agenda as London Conference Opens

London, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—The first meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers' deputies today was marked by the Soviet member's refusal to discuss compensation to United Nations' citizens for property seized or destroyed in Germany.

Soviet Deputy A. A. Smirnov declared that the question of compensation for wartime destruction or reparations seizure was not included on the agenda handed to the deputies when the Foreign Ministers adjourned their fruitless Moscow conference last spring.

French Deputy Jacques Hardouin sided with Smirnov, and the question was dropped over the protests of United States Deputy Robert Murphy and British Deputy Patrick Dean.

An American spokesman said that Smirnov had indicated that Russia would not agree to discuss compensation until the entire question of reparations had been settled.

With the question of compensation removed from the agenda, the deputies' discussions were narrowed to two topics:

1. The political structure of the new Germany.
2. Procedure for the preparation of a German peace treaty.

The deputies met at Lancaster House, where the Foreign Ministers held their unproductive first meeting in September-October, 1945, to lay the foundation for their chiefs' discussions of the German peace at the conference opening November 25.

A Soviet editorial broadcast today by Moscow radio indicated that Soviet representatives would press Russia's demands for reparations from current German production at this month's conferences.

Two Boys Arrested In Synagogue Vandalism

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—Police said today they were holding two boys in connection with the destruction of sacred articles in a Baltimore synagogue last week.

Police Capt. John R. Rollman said statements were taken from the lads—16 and 13 years old—but he declined to disclose the contents.

Damage to the interior of the synagogue—which had been broken into on fuor previous occasions, President Sab Smolkin said—was estimated in the thousands of dollars.

For Long Service

Boys' Club Group Fetes Fleming

Members of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club tonight will pay tribute to Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, at a dinner meeting at the Ambassador Hotel, starting at 6 o'clock.

Fleming

Fleming, who has served on the board as treasurer since Maj. Ernest W. Brown founded the organization 13 years agto, will be honored "in recognition of his long, faithful and efficient service," John A. Remon, president, announced.

Among those expected to attend include Clifford Bangs, Morris Cafritz, Raymond Garrity, Daniel W. Bell, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., Ralph L. Goldsmith, Kirk Miller, Evan Sholl and James E. Colliflower.

Of particular interest will be the discussions regarding the forthcoming fund-raising campaign and the recent decision of the District Commissioners to declare December 6 "Metropolitan Police Boys Club Day."

Marshall Plan Rechristened As 'Recovery'

President Truman still called it "The Marshall Plan" yesterday, but its official name is to be the European Recovery Program.

The key word in the name is "recovery." The chief goal of the long-range program now being worked out by the Admanistration is to get Europe back on its feet within four years.

The aim is to make western Europe self-supporting by the end og 1951, so that its individual countries will not have to come to the United States with recurring appeals to keep their people fed, clother and warmed.

A high American official described it the other day as an attempt "to get Europe off our neck as soon as possible."

In contrast, the emergency aid to be sought at the special session of Congress will be a straight relief program. It cannot conceivably "get Europe off our neck."

Its intention is to provide dollars so that France and Italy can buy food and fuel to keep their people alive this winter. Some call this an "interim aid" program, as the President did yesterday, but the word "relief" describes it accurately.

Truman Wants Stopgap Aid Considered Before High Prices

first, as he wanted it to do. But he said he was sure Congress would do the right thing.

He told another questioner that foreign aid and high prices were equally important, and that one depended on the other. There is no use making appropriations to buy 100 million bushels of grain, he said, if it will only buy 25 million bushels.

Ball Advances Incentive Plan

Meanwhile Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) entered the widening debate on foreign aid by suggesting that help be given Europe on an "incentive" basis. He said American aid should be apportioned according to what the recipient countries do to help themselves.

Countries which could show increased home production in semi-annual surveys would draw full Amercian aid, he suggested, while those whose production lagged would be penalized.

His Minnesota colleague, Senator Edward Thye, said he would support "immediate and adequate aid" for Europe, but eventually there must be funds from the World Bank and private investors for productive expansion. "I think it is clear," he said, "that there must be a Marshall Plan or some equivalent program to aid in Europe's recovery."

Taber Says We Must Stop Reds But Not Wreck U. S.

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 6 (AP).—Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, asserted today "We have got to do what we can to stop communism, but at the same time we must not wreck the economy of the United States."

Taber in an address before the convention of the American Institute of Accountants declared that in May the United States sent more than 3000 tractors to Yugoslavia "at a time when the iron curtain was a menace to this country."

He said "all the surplus war property we had in Italy, all the cars and tanks, is now being used by the Communists for propaganda purposes against the United States. These things msut be stopped.

"I am willing to go as far as we need to go to protect the interests of the United States. Now is the time for those governments over there to realize the situation they're in.

"They must stand up and look Stalin in the eye and tell him that it's time to cease disturbing the peace of the world. It would have a wholesome effect."

Congress has to face the problem of foreign relief, Taber said, adding:

"If we can have the cooperation of the Administration . . . so far as putting our government house in order . . . we can bring about the necessary results and even have a modest tax reduction and something left to meet our other obligations."

Gas Stations Get Save-Meat Stickers

Autoists Urged To Ask Attendants For Drive Slogans

The District Citizens Food Conservation Committee yesterday began distributing car stickers urging "Save Wheat—Save Meat—Save Peace."

The 2-by-3-inch stickers are being delivered to gasoline stations by tank truck trivers and will be available early next week, James E. Colliflower, committee chairman, said. He said 400 stations of the Gulf, Sun, Sinclair, Standard Texas, Shell and Washington Petroleum Products firms will receive the stickers.

Motorists were urged to ask attendants for the sticker on their next visit at the stations and were warned to place them only in the lower right section of the rear window of hteir vehicles.

Motorists may also pick up stickers at the committee office in room 507 of the District Building at 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., Colliflower said.

Yesterday 60 members of the Washington Restaurant Association were addressed by Colliflower at a weekly meeting on sanitation practices held in the Municipal Building under the auspices of the District Health Department.

Colliflower praised the restaurateurs for "doing a simply grand job" in saving food. The association secretary, Robert J. Wilson, pointed out that proper sanitation practices in eating places inevitably resulted in food saving and said District operators had a "fine record" or. sanitation.

Overall Agency

Henderson Urges New Control Plan

Leon Henderson, former Price Administrator, would create a new Federal agency with power to impose controls over the Nation's economy as an "immediate" move to check the inflation.

The agency, Henderson proposed, would have full authority to act speedily in dealing with prices, wages, rents, consumer credits, exports, allocation of critical materials, and rationing of consumer goods.

His plan is the "ideal" way to deal with the "dangerously unmanageable" inflation, Henderson told the Amvets' Conference on High Prices, meeting at the Willard Hotel. A single agency with complete power would do away with the feuding between control agencies, such as took place during the war period, he said.

Warns on Deflation

The former OPA director, now a business consultant, warned the "real payoff" would come with deflation, "when the break comes."

Increased production is only a partial answer to the price-related problem of limited supplies. In certain industries—like steel, coal, oil, and scrap iron—production already is close to capacity, without meeting needs, Henderson said.

"What we need is control of certain strategic items, not a return to general price controls under OPA," Henderson declared.

"Orderly Retreat"

Once the inflation is halted, then efforts should be made to get "an orderly retreat" of prices through the initiative of the government and voluntary action of industry.

"A rollback in prices would require in some cases a rollback in wages," Henderson said in reply to a question. He added, however, that reduction in profits would make up most of the rollback.

Also participating in the discussion, sponsored by Amvets Special Anti-Inflation Committee, were Richard Heflebower, Brookings Institute; Peter Henle, American Federation of Labor; and Forrest E. Keller, United States Chamber of Commerce.

Two Youths Given 12 Years for Robbery

Bowling Green, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Two Pennsylvania youths pleaded guilty in Caroline County Circuit Court this morning to an armed robbery charge which netted them $49.50, and were sentenced to 12 years each in the State Penitentiary.

The teen-agers held up with a pistol Clyde E. Brooks at the Hillcrest service station at Golensville, on September 28, and took the money from the cash register. They were apprehended by State police after the holdup after a 20-mile chase.

Schools to Compete

Rockville and Gaithersburg elementary schools will meet in the WTOP quizdown at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Defendant Freed After Catching Court Fugitive

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6.—A flying tackle by a man in police court for a parking violation won him the judge's thanks and put a man who did not appreciate a suspended sentence in jail for six months.

Fred Davis, 32, was given a two-month suspended sentence by Justice Carleton E. Jewett on charges of striking a woman. As both were leaving the courtroom, the woman claimed he threatened to kill her, and a bailiff brought them back before the bench. Davis slapped her across the face in front of the judge and then made a dash for the open door.

David Rollins jumped half-way across the room and brought the fugitive down. Davis was given six months at the state farm and a $50 fine.

Rollins, with a summons for a parking violation, was next on the docket. Justice Jewett's sentence: "For services rendered the charge against you is hereby dismissed—with thanks."

Baltimore Police Catch Gunmen After Battle

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—Six New Yorkers and a Baltimore man, in whose apartment they were found after a running gun battle with a policeman, pleaded innocent today to charges of intent to murder and burglary.

Police routed the six out-of-staters from the apartment of Solly Geller, tracing them through a car with New York license plates parked outside.

Bail of $25,000 apiece for all seven was continued by Judge Joseph Sherbow.

Virginia's State Autos Cost 3.86 Per Mile

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6.—The State's central garage operated a fleet of 110 motor vehicles during the last fiscal year at an average cost of 3.868 cents per mile, State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett reported today.

Bennett noted that the garage made a profit last year of $2612 on its operations.

Reds Detain U. S. Newsmen For 3 Hours

Two American newspapermen in search of a feature story were held for 3½ hours yesterday by Soviet authorities in the Russian sector of Berlin.

Henry D. Burroughs, jr., 29, former photographer for The Washington Post, now with the Associated Press, and Stars and Stripes reporter Joseph Fleming of New York City were arrested as they left a Russian barter store, the Associated Press reported.

They had gone into the shop with an interpreter for feature story material on the barter system.

Burroughs, whose home is at 9504 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, Md., said after his release that Soviet plain-clothes agents had accused the two of "making anti-Soviet pictures."

Made No Pictures

No pictures had been made, the newsmen said. Burroughs was returning to their automobile to get his camera when a Russian in plain-clothes took the car keys and ordered all three to wait in the car. Then he called Soviet military police.

Later in the day Soviet authorities announced they were releasing Burroughs and Fleming.

With Post 6 Years

Burroughs was photographer in the advertising department of The Washington Post from April 1938 to April 1944, when he joined the Associated Press. Assigned to Berlin in August 1945, he was joined by his wife, Elizabeth, more than a year ago. They have no children.

Burroughs' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Burroughs, sr., live at 1101 Powhatan st., Alexandria. The elder Burroughs is chief clerk at the Naval Ordnance Plan there.

Mrs. Anna Anderson, Burroughs' mother-in-law, who lives at the Silver Spring address, said the couple plans to return here for a vacation next summer.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. of Europe Finds Support Among People of Continent

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 6.—A federation of European states—dream of many of Europe's famous statesmen for the last hundred years or more—has a good deal of support from public opinion in leading European nations.

A round-up of public sentiment in France, Holland, Norway and Sweden by the public opinion institutes of the respective countries shows that the weight of sentiment among those familar with the plan is distinctly favorable to the idea of a United States of Europe. Support is especially large in France.

Winston Churchill has several times backed the idea of a European federation as the only permanent solution to the political and economic troubles of the European continent. During the early days of World War II Mr. Churchill, as Britain's prime minister, invited France to merge with England into a common nation with common citizenship.

In testing European sentiment on the plan for a United States of Europe, the polltakers found that most voters wanted all European nations included in the federation although some voted to exclude Russia.

The poll, one of the monthly international public opinion surveys conducted by members of the International Association of Public Opinion (Gallup) Institutes, first sought to determine how many voters in the various countries had heard of the idea of a United States of Europe.

It was found that more than half were familiar with it, at least in a general way. The percentages claiming to know about the plan were 58 per cent in Norway, 55 per cent in France, 39 per cent in Sweden, and 63 per cent in Holland. In the United States, where a similar poll was conducted, 49 per cent said they had heard or read about about the idea of a United States of Europe.

Voters in all countries were then asked:

What do you think of this idea?

The results are summarized in the following table:

	Good Idea	Qual. Ans.	Bad Idea	No Opin.
France	61%	—	10%	29%
Holland	43	2	15	40
Norway	34	6	23	37
Sweden	35	7	24	34
U. S.	55	13	24	8

In each country the voters were handed a list of European nations and asked which ones should be included in a United States of Europe.

Large majorities in each poll indicated that all countries should be allowed to join, with the exception of Russia. In France only 47 per cent thought Russia should be included, in Holland, only 33 per cent, the United States, 45 per cent.

Most friendly toward including Russia were the voters of Sweden, 68 per cent of whom said they thought the U.S.S.R. should properly belong in a United States of Europe.

Live Poultry Sent Truman

was not disclosed, but committee sources said the idea would be forwarded to Luckman who is now on the West Coast.

In Los Angeles, Luckman told reporters who informed him of the live chicken shipments that "anytime the Poultrymen's Association or anyone else can show us a better way to save grain than by having poultryless Thursdays, we will be glad to adopt it."

"You might ask why we don't encourage people to eat more chickens," said Luckman. "The answer is that this would simply encourage farmers to raise more of them."

Industry opinion was not unanimous on the shipment campaign, however. The Delmarva Poultry Corp. of Salisbury, Md., one of the large producers of fowl on Maryland's Eastern Shore, sent this telegram to Luckman:

"Anyone in the United States having trouble selling their poultry, please have them call us collect and we'll arrange to have it picked up within 24 hours."

Eastern Shore Objects

Poultry raisers on the Eastern Shore peninsula which includes parts of Maryland, Virginia and Delaware were of the opinion that the food conservation committee should encourage the eating of poultry instead of vice versa.

The attitude in Salisbury, heart of the poultry-raising area, was clearly demonstrated yesterday at the tricountry convention of the Homemakers Clubs during which 400 chicken dinners were served—although it was poultryless Thursday.

The chicken growers who met with Luckman's aide yesterday argued that as a grain-saving measure poultryless Thursday is useless. They said the longer the poultry market is curtailed, the longer raisers will have to continue feeding grain to their fowl while waiting for a price rise.

In Baltimore, W. H. Rice, secretary of the Maryland State Poultry Council, commented: "It would be much more in line with President Truman's policy to have the American people eat the food that is plentiful and save that which is not plentiful."

At his press conference, President Harry S. Truman said he was very happy at the success of the voluntary food conservation drive and commended Luckman on doing a good job.

Bladensburg Club Operator Fined In Gambling Case

Nathan Davis, 42, operator of the Bladensburg Athletic Club, 4303 48th st., Bladensburg, Md., was fined $100 yesterday on charges of setting up a gambling table by Judge John B. Gray, jr., in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md.

Robert McCullough, attorney for Davis, contended the police search on which the charge was based was illegal because the club location was a private dwelling. Judge Gray held however, that the club portion of the building was for public use, thereby taking the building out of a dwelling classification. The judge held the police entered the club because of noise and were confronted with slot machines while legally present.

Nine men and eight women in the club at the time of the raid on October 11 were charged with disorderly conduct and forfeited collateral.

Black Flag Spurs Army To Avoid Accidents

Fort Lewis, Wash. (U.P.).—A new safety, program, slanted at keeping Army personnel "accident conscious," has been started by Fort Lewis officials.

Separate unit headquarters are issued white flags, to be flown from the roofs of headquarters buildings. In case of an accident resulting in hospitalization or death of unit personnel, the white flag will be taken down and replaced with a black flag.

The black flag, signifying a poor safety record, will remain until the unit has served a full week with no accidents.

Wholesale Food Prices Drop But Total Index Goes on Up

Wholesale food prices sank to the lowest point in two months during the week ending November 1 and registered only 4.8 per cent above a year ago.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, disclosing this brighter outlook for housewives' hard-squeezed pocketbooks yesterday, said meat dropped to mid-July levels and farm products generally fell off 1.6 per cent.

Average wholesale prices dropped 0.4 per cent during the week, the bureau said, despite a rise in non-agricultural commodities.

The wholesale price index, which includes many other things besides food, was recorded at 157.4 per cent of the 1926 average. This was 0.2 per cent higher than four weeks earlier and 16.8 per cent higher than a year ago.

Market prices of farm products fell 1.6 per cent to a level only slightly higher than four weeks ago, with the November 1 index registering 187.7.

Most grain prices ebbed, reflecting improved weather conditions and uncertainty regarding the Government's future program of controls and purchasing. Hog prices declined sharply with the heaviest supplies in several months. Other livestock and poultry increased.

Apples, potatoes, oranges and onions increased, while lemon prices were down with larger supplies. Eggs decreased.

Raw wool, both domestic and imported, and raw cotton continued to advance as demand remained high.

Food prices were 173.8 per cent of the 1926 average.

Pork prices declined sharply and there were smaller decreases for beef and veal. Lamb and mutton were up substantially because of active bidding for scarce supplies.

Bread prices were raised in a number of cities because of higher cost of production and ingredients.

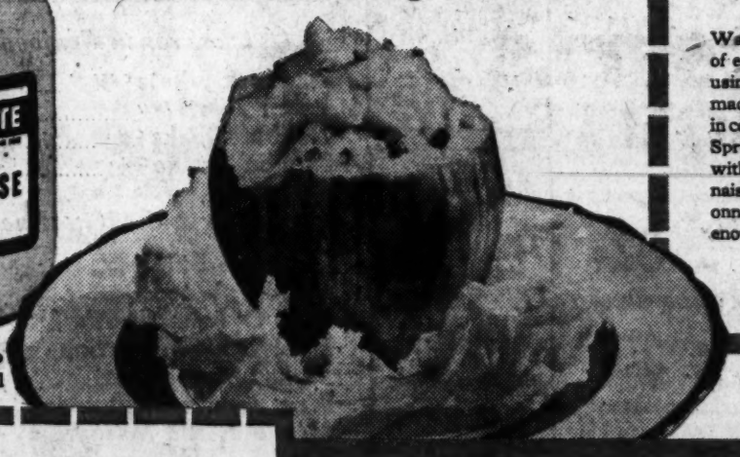
BLUE PLATE FOODS

Oh, how good it tastes—with fresh, FRESH
Blue Plate Mayonnaise

Made by the Wesson Oil People —with finest salad oil



FRUIT BASKET SALAD

4 large red apples — 1 cup chopped celery
1 tblsp. lemon juice — ¼ cup nut meats (if desired)
¼ cup Blue Plate Mayonnaise

Wash and core apples. Cut slice off top of each apple. Scoop out inside of apple, using sharp knife, to make "basket." If made before serving time, keep baskets in cold water to prevent their turning dark. Sprinkle apple pulp with lemon juice, mix with celery, nuts, and Blue Plate Mayonnaise. (Creamy, smooth Blue Plate Mayonnaise is seasoned just right—just sweet enough, just tart enough. It's really first for flavor.) Serve salad in apple baskets, and top with more Blue Plate Mayonnaise. Serves 4.

Hot and Hearty Sandwiches

Blue Plate Peanut Butter — Salt
Sliced Bread — Blue Plate Margarine

Spread half the bread with Blue Plate Peanut Butter, sprinkle with salt, and top with remaining slices of bread. Spread outside of sandwiches, top and bottom, with Blue Plate Margarine and brown in hot skillet. Serve hot. Youngsters specially love Blue Plate Peanut Butter. Smooth—full of rich peanut flavor. Rich in vitamins and proteins too.

For variety: Serve with jelly or syrup as a main dish for breakfast. Put a ring of pineapple in sandwich before browning.

Prospects for Next Wheat Crop Dark in Parched Oklahoma

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Okeene, Okla., Nov. 6.—There's little humor today in this winter wheat part of Oklahoma—the State that gave the great humorist, Will Rogers, to the country.

In spite of a world-beating wheat crop just harvested, with prosperity at its greatest peak, the farmers are looking at their dry, parched lands and wondering about next year. Pessimism is as thick as optimism was a year ago.

In one drive of 23 miles, from Enid to Nash, this reporter saw only one small field of grain above the ground. The rest of the country was dreary and desolate as only these great praries can get without moisture. This area is the heart of the greatest wheat-growing belt in the world.

Farmers Gamble on Nature

For 27 miles from Nash to Cherokee, where the recently harvested crop yielded 20 or more bushels of wheat to the acre, only 10 fields of fairly good stand were to be seen. The remainder was fair to nothing. Many farmers were drilling their seed into the dust, gambling on mother nature's bounty—upon the law of compensation, when a dry fall is offset by splendid growing weather later—to bring results. Already some have lost that gamble and are awaiting some moisture before replanting.

The seriousness of the situation is best understood as A. R. Lankard, miller and grain grower at Kingfisher, Okla., explained it this morning. There is one calorie of food in each eight or nine grains of wheat. There are about 14,000 to 1 pound of wheat and a European's diet is 1500 calories a day. Each of these acres produced about 20 bushels of wheat this year—60 pounds to the bushel.

Lankard said he had been here 41 years, and only twice before has he seen a fall like this. Once was in 1906, when the next year's harvest gave only 9,880,000 bushels of wheat to the world. The other was in 1911 and the next year's crop was only 9,440,000 bushels. Last year this State produced 104 million bushels, or nearly 17 million more than ever produced before.

Ample Rain Last Year

Last year there was four or five inches of rain in the first week in November. It was so wet the farmers complained they couldn't get out for the duck season, so they had the duck season changed to December, and this year they are complaining because it is so dry they can't plant wheat nor shoot ducks.

Owen Wimberly of Okeene reported that we don't have any areas in the State with normal moisture. In the southern part of the winter wheat belt many farmers are giving up, and planning to go back to cotton. They gave up cotton for wheat, at Government urging, a few years ago.

Wimberly, recognized as one of Oklahoma's most expert observers—he is a graduate of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, and has devoted his 21 years since to scientific study of wheat rowing—called the picture serious.

It is just the reverse of a year ago he added. The chance of raising a good crop is now two to one against.

"Miracle" Hoped For

This doesn't mean that the Oklahoma wheat farmer has given up. By nature he is a gambler, and he knows that with ideal weather later, they will produce a lot of wheat. There have been miracles before, they point out, and they name the years when those took place.

He has to put up a lot of money to make his gamble. Seed wheat is about $4 a bushel. He gambles $4 against an average crop of 15 bushels an acre for which he is now getting about $2.50. If he has to reseed, and most of those who have already planted face that dire possibility, he doubles the odds against him. He usually is gambling on the one crop—all his year's income depends upon a good wheat yield. It doesn't incline a man to optimism when he sees his whole year's labor threatened by weather.

Many are counting heavily upon improved methods — scientific moisture conservation, machine operations, improved seed — to overcome the vagaries of the weather. In 200 miles of driving today only one group of horses were observed, and they were saddle mounts near one of these highly prosperous towns.

Streams Are Dwindling

The community of Okeene boasts less than 1000 residents—including many of the neighboring farmers. But the two banks in the little prairie town have more than 3½ millions in deposits, with additional millions laid away in Government bonds, and other investments. In addition, it is estimated that only half this year's huge crop has been sold, which means millions more in grain bins.

If any moisture comes the farmers are ready with tractor-drawn machinery, to rush into the fields. In two days they can accomplish more than they could in 15 in the old days. And soil conservation practices retain all the rain that falls, moisture that formerly drained off quickly.

One indication of the dangerous condition of the subsoil can be seen in the streams. Instead of healthy quantities of water, many of them, the Cimarron River for instance, have dwindled to tiny trickles.

A man would walk across the Cimarron today without wetting his knees. That doesn't augur well for next year's harvest.

Berlin Rats Destroy Huge Amount of Food

Berlin, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Three million rats are destroying 90,000 food rations daily in Berlin, the newspaper Berliner Zeitung reported today.

The city's ruins have proved good breeding grounds for the rats and a campaign to exterminate them will be launched next week.

Anderson Invites Grain-Buying Probe

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said yesterday he would welcome a congressional investigation of the Government's grain purchasing program as proposed Wednesday by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

Spokesmen for the Nation's grain exchanges called for an inquiry into the effect on prices of the Government's purchase of grain, and Taft said he would urge his joint congressional economic committee to do so.

Anderson branded as false charges by the grain exchanges that the Government plans to purchase more than 570 million bushels of grain for export. He told a press conference that he would be "delighted" with an investigation because it might show who was making such plans.

Truman Defends Grower

Meanwhile, President Truman said at his news conference that he didn't blame Tom Campbell, Montana wheat grower, for holding 610,000 bushels of wheat off the market for higher prices.

Mr. Truman's off-hand remark was made in response to questions about Campbell's White House visit Wednesday.

Campbell, 65-year-old wheat king, said after the visit that he had advocated fixing the price of wheat at about $3.50 a bushel to encourage farmers to release grain they are holding back and avoid speculation. He said he had 610,000 bushels he would sell at that price.

Mr. Truman said Campbell did not discuss figures with him, but merely suggested a ceiling price so farmers would turn loose their wheat for hungry Europe.

A reporter asked the President whether Campbell told him that he was holding 610,000 bushels himself for higher prices.

Yes, the President said, adding that he did not blame for that. Mr. Truman made no further statement and he was not pressed for additional comment.

Price is Question

Asked to comment on Campbell's attitude, Secretary Anderson grinned and said:

"Tom plants more wheat and undoubtedly knows more about it than I do, but we've (the government) been buying our wheat for much less than that."

Campbell told reporters that farmers are hanging on to their grain in the hope of higher prices or to convert it into meat that will bring more money than grain at current prices. Wheat now is hovering just below $3 a bushel.

He suggested that the government set a price high enough to lure bread grain off farms and let the farmers know that is the final selling price for the 1947 crop.

He described wheat as the scarcest food in the world, but still the cheapest. At present prices, he said, a nickel will buy five big slices of bread or part of an egg or one small bite out of a pork chop. The five slices of bread will sustain life 20 times as long as the other food, he said.

Beef Steer Prices Attain New High

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—Beef steers set a new high price for the year today at $36 for a load weighing 1,242 pounds. The trade generally was steady to 50 cents higher.

Hogs prices took an opposite direction, however, after about 10 days of steadiness, and crashed 75 cents to $1 a hundred pounds. The popular price was around $25, lowest since July 3. An estimated total supply of 24,000 hogs, highest since January 9, accounted for weakness of the market.

Today's high price on cattle topped by 20 cents the previous best for year established yesterday. Highest price on record for normal loadlot sales at Chicago is $37, reached several times in October and November last year after removal of price controls.

Woman and Father Indicted In New York Election Slaying

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—The first indictments growing out of the death of Joseph Scottoriggio, slain a year ago as he walked to the polls on election day, were returned today by the New York County grand jury.

Named in the indictments, which charged perjury, were Mrs. Doris Coppola, 25, attractive former show-girl wife of Michael (Trigger Mike) Coppola, identified by police as an underworld character, and her father, David Lehmann, 58.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said the indictment charged that Mrs. Coppola was at her home the night before Election Day, 1946, while her husband and others discussed "the fate of scottoriggio." He added it was not alleged she attended the conference.

The perjury indictments grew out of testimony by Mrs. Coppola and her father before the grand jury in the last several months, Hogan said. They surrendered last July and have been out on $15,000 bail each as material witnesses but have appeared frequently before the jury.

The indictment charged Mrs. Coppola fled New York and remained in hiding at Providence, R. I., after her husband had been picked up as a material witness shortly after the Scottoriggio slaying.

Mrs. Doris Coppola — "Trigger Mike" Coppola

Truman Talks Politics, Shines At Horseshoes

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman talked about politics, bad newspaper habits, civil rights and other matters at a press-radio conference yesterday. He then went out into the White House backyard and pitched a game of horseshoes.

Mr. Truman was in rare form on the horseshoe court, located on the south lawn just outside of his office. He threw five ringers, and defeated his opponent, Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, 21 to 8.

He was in pretty good form at his news conference, too. At the outset, the Chief Executive said that he had no particular announcements to make, but just wanted to give reporters a chance to ask any questions they had on their minds.

"Mr. President," said a reporter, "have you had a chance to analyze the election returns and do you see a trend?"

Mr. Truman said he was happy to see such a large turnout at the polls on Tuesday. He said it showed that people were learning their responsibility as citizens and that their interest in free government was increasing. He added, with a grin, that he was happy over the outcome in Kentucky, where the Democrats ended four years of Republican rule.

"Do you think that a big turnout in 1948 will help the Democratic Party?" a reporter asked.

Mr. Truman, amidst laughter, said it would help those who like free government.

"Mr. President, this may be a leading question, but have you made a choice of a running mate?"

Mr. Truman said that it was, indeed, a leading question and that he had no comment. There was more laughter and the President joined in it.

"Again, this may be a leading question, but a number of your recent callers who have been in to invite you to things next September and October said you told them you would be very busy at that time?"

This, too, failed to smoke the President out on his political plans for '48. He simply replied that he had been as busy as he could be ever since he entered the White House, and that this was true also of his so-called vacations.

A reporter asked him about the Government's new set of security rules. One of these, as originally drafted, said that departments and agencies should treat as "confidential" all documents or information which, if disclosed, "would cause serious administrative embarrassment or difficulty." The reporter reminded Mr. Truman that the American Society of Newspaper Editors had sent him a resolution objecting to such rules. Did he have any comment?

The President said that he had taken no action on the new code of rules.

He said that he thought it was a very bad habit on the part of the press to publish fragmentary parts of reports that have not been released—to set up a straw man and then knock him down. He said that he would have to pass on the new set of security rules when it came to him, but that it had not yet reached his desk.

The rules, drawn up by the Security Advisory Board, are now before the State-War-Navy Coordinating Committee.

Mr. Truman was asked about the civil rights report made to him recently by a committee headed by Charles E. Wilson. This recommended legislation to eliminate poll taxes, lynching and other aspects of discrimination against minorities, and called for an end of segregation in the District of Columbia, where the lot of the Negro was described as "intolerable." Did the President intend to send this report to Congress?

Mr. Truman said the report would be used as the basis for part of his message on the State of the Union, which will go to Congress early in January. He repeated that he thought that the committee's report was a good one.

Mr. Truman declined to comment on Capitol Hill investigations of Hollywood and Howard Hughes, and the news conference ended with the familiar "Thank you, Mr. President."

A few minutes later, the Chief Executive was out in the autumn sunshine throwing ringers.

Elections Show Democratic Gain of 5%

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 6.—Three congressional elections last Tuesday, plus the Kentucky Governorship vote and an earlier congressional election in Pennsylvania last September, provide political experts with some evidence on political trends for 1948.

Although purely local issues are always a factor in such voting, when taken together the five elections indicate an increased Democratic strength of about 5 percentage points since 1946.

Less than three weeks ago the Institute, in a national political roundup, showed that the Democratic Party had made a dramatic upswing from its low point of 1946.

Here is the record in the three congressional races held last Tuesday. (The figures are expressed in terms of the Republican percentage of the major party vote cast.)

	Percent Republican 1946	1947	Loss
Ohio 4th District	59.2%	55.3%	—3.9
Indiana 10th District	61.3	55.3	—6.0
N. Y. 14th District	25.0	16.4	—8.6

In the Kentucky Governorship cause Kentucky is a border State and a fairly good barometer of national political sentiment, the change since the last comparable election in 1943 was as follows:

	Percent Republican 1943	1947	Loss
Kentucky Governor	50.3%	42.1%	—8.7

However, the special congressional election in Pennsylvania's Eighth District in September showed a slight shift in the opposite direction—that is, it showed a small Republican gain. The Republican candidate polled 61.4 per cent as against 58.9 per cent in 1946.

DON'T BLAME YOUR GROCER

IN FAIRNESS to retail grocers throughout the country, we of H. J. Heinz Company feel called upon to make a frank statement to the housewives of America.

During the last few weeks, millions of you homemakers have taken advantage of Heinz special soup offer—have bought three tins of Heinz Cream of Tomato Soup and received one tin of another Heinz Soup free.

Despite the fact that H. J. Heinz Company and your grocer were well aware of the quality of Heinz Soups, it was almost impossible to foresee the tremendous demand this special offer would create. Obviously an offer of this kind has to be limited. If your grocer is one of the many whose supply of special coupons has been depleted, he is no longer able to make you this unusual offer. So please understand the situation.

Grocers, however, have plenty of Heinz Soups available. Every one is carefully made, perfectly seasoned and reasonably priced. So ask for the kinds you like best—popular Cream of Tomato, Chicken Noodle, Vegetable Soup and the rest of your family's favorites.

More Paris Workers Strike

Paris, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—The 3-day-old strike of Paris sanitary workers was spreading gradually to other public services tonight, and flour workers threatened to cut off the nation's bread supply.

Two thousand employes of the municipal trucking service, 1200 sewer workers, and 400 hygiene and disinfection agents voted to walk out in sympathy with 5000 garbage collectors and street cleaners already on strike.

A water works strike, called in sympathy with the sanitary workers' walkout, spread to the Marne Department, where 370 workers in the Neuilly plant left their jobs. Paris' water supply, however, was unaffected.

A large portion of flour workers for Paris bakeries voted, 295 to 85, for strike action, but they will not walk out until mills throughout the country are polled, probably in the next day or two.

House Investigators' Legality Questioned

Constitutionality Attacked in Appeal Of Leon Josephson's Contempt Sentence

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Counsel for Leon Josephson, former Trenton, N. J., attorney and admitted Communist, today attacked the constitutionality of the resolution creating the House Committee on Un-American Activities in arguing Josephson's appeal from the conviction of contempt of Congress.

Josephson

The attorney was convicted October 29 on an indictment resulting from his refusal to be sworn before a House subcommittee. He was sentenced to one year in prison and fined $1000.

Indictment Attacked

Barent Ten Eyck, counsel for Josephson, today told the United States Circuit Court of Appeals that the law creating the House committee was "too broad and vague and it invades the area of free speech guaranteed under the first amendment."

Ten Eyck also attacked the indictment against Josephson, arguing that it was drawn up under the wrong section of the United States code.

U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohey, terming Josephson's conduct as "a classic example of contempt of Congress," told the court that "the obligation to answer questions under inquiry has existed since 1792." McGohey charged that Josephson made up his mind before appearing that he would not be sworn and would not testify or answer any questions.

Gerhardt Eisler Attends

Ten Eyck submitted a lengthy brief to presiding Judge Thomas W. Swan, in which the attorney said were incorporated the minutes of a number of hearings held before the House committee. He contended the brief would support his argument that the committee and all its activities have been unconstitutional.

Gerhardt Eisler, termed by the committee as "the No. 1 Communist in the United States," who is free in bail pending his appeal from a similar conviction in Washington, attended today's hearing.

Chinese Lose Anshan, but Gain on Reds

Peiping, Nov. 6 (AP).—Chinese government forces were reported today to have lost the Manchurian steel town of Anshan, but gained elsewhere in the civil war with the Communists.

The Catholic newspaper Social Welfare and the independent Peiping Daily News said government troops had withdrawn from Anshan, 55 miles southwest of Mukden, apparently due to Communist pressure.

Progovernment reports said other government units had recaptured Changwu, rail and highway town 60 miles northwest of Mukden, and had driven off Communists who were besieging Ihsien, 120 miles west of Mukden.

Only minor fighting was reported around Kirin, scene of recent Communist attacks, 60 miles east of Changchun, but various press reports agreed in predicting a big battle in the Changchun vicinity.

Control Held By Forrestal

only need be notified and be given a copy of the communication.

When the departments are unable to agree, Forrestal's office steps in. The Secretary of Defense then "will resolve the points of difference," and after notifying the service departments, submit a report or recommendation to the White House or Congress.

Aimed at Disputes

In an effort to hold down the number of disputes put to him for settlement, Forrestal emphasized the importance of "a full and free interchange of information between departments during the formative period of recommendations and reports."

While the defense chief thus will pass on the distribution of the security dollar, and any controversial legislative questions, the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Forces, under the law, can go direct to the White House and present their case to the President if they object to Forrestal's rulings.

Expediter Blocks Chicago Rent Boost

The Federal Housing Expediter yesterday batted down a proposal of the Chicago Rent Advisory board to raise rents 15 per cent.

Acting Expediter Tighe E. Woods wrote the board that its recommendation, made a week ago, was not properly substantiated, as required by law.

He said his action did not preclude the Chicago group from making a future recommendation with proper substantiation.

The criteria for determining whether a rent increase is justified, he added, are considerations of the operating position of landlords in the area, and of any unusual conditions or circumstances that caused the maximum allowable rent levels to be abnormally low.

Woods pointedly observed that "public hearings are the most feasible means of gathering evidence." The Chicago Rent Advisory Board had not held such hearings before making their recommendation.

It proposed the 15 per cent jump for the Nation's second largest city and three nearby Illinois counties. The increases would have affected about 800,000 rental units.

from the Amish "Confession of Faith:" "We ought to obey God, rather than man."

"Then the only sin Andy is guilty of, in your eyes, is that he joined the church and then left it?" Barnard asked.

"That's right," Nisley replied.

Mrs. Yoder earlier told the jury that her husband "lost weight, became nervous and had to visit doctors" after the boycott was imposed.

Mrs. Andrew Yoder, mother of seven children, said her husband purchased an automobile in 1942 to drive their year-old paralyzed daughter, Lizzie, to Wooster for medical care.

"We couldn't take the sick baby on that long, 15-mile trip in a buggy to see the doctor, so we had to use a car," she said.

Andrew transferred to a more liberal branch of the church before he was banned, she said, but later suffered ill health because of the boycott.

Dan Y. Yoder, 38-year-old brother of Andrew, reported he also had been banned for a period of a few weeks for associating with his brother, and added, "I could visit Andy, but not at meal times—because I wasn't supposed to eat with him."

About 75 per cent of the 60 Amish families in the area refused to "talk to Andy or have anything to do with him" during the past five years, the elder Yoder testified.

Fairfax Board Again Postpones Cemetery Case

The Fairfax County Board of Zoning Appeals yesterday postponed for the third time a request to increase the size of Mount Comfort Cemetery near Penn-Daw, Va.

The application to enlarge the 50-acre cemetery to 137 acres was tabled at yesterday's special meeting on request of Walter C. Crain, builder and developer.

Opposition to the rezoning came chiefly from Crain, who says the expansion would block areas which he is developing residentially from existing roads. Crain said he would present a counter proposal at the next meeting of the board November 25.

The planning board has reported favorably on the request.

Truman and Martin Hit Tax Action Now

Speaker Would Give Revision Priority In Regular Session; Knutson to See Him

By The Associated Press

The prospect for tax-cutting legislation during the special session of Congress was dampened yesterday by President Truman and House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr.

The President told a news conference that his message opening the extra session November 17 would contain no references to tax revision.

At the same time, Martin told another group of reporters that he thought the special session would be too busy on foreign aid and price stabilization problems to consider taxes.

The Republican Speaker added, however, that it was his own "personal inclination" that a tax-reduction bill would be the first order of business when Congress assembles in regular session next January. Under the Constitution, all revenue legislation must originate in the House.

Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee has been urging quick action on a proposed four-billion-dollar tax cut.

Told of Martin's stand, Knutson commented that "much may happen between now and the 17th." He said he plans to see Martin tomorrow.

Senator Maybank (D., S. C.), who visited the White House after the news conference, told reporters that Mr. Truman wanted to confine the special session exclusively to the foreign-aid and anti-inflation tasks.

The President, who already has vetoed two tax bills this year, declined to comment when a reporter asked if he would veto a third. He said he would take care of that situation when it arises.

Martin made it plain that he was speaking only for himself. He said the Republican steering committee of the House might have different ideas.

Meanwhile there were the strongest indications that the Administration would offer its own tax program to Congress some time next year. With the accent on revision and reform, rather than outright cuts, it is expected to differ sharply from Knutson's percentage-cut proposals. The Minnesota legislator sought to authorize reductions ranging from 30 per cent in the lowest brackets to 10.5 per cent at the top.

Senator Wherry (R., Neb.) announced he would back legislation which would restore to farmers the right to deduct from their income taxes the cost of fertilization and other improvements to the land. Wherry is his party's whip and assistant floor leader.

Representative Eberharter (R., Pa.), a member of the Ways and Means Committee, expressed strong criticism of the majority report of a 10-member citizens' tax study group headed by Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the Treasury.

"He told a reporter that most of the majority's recommendations were designed to legalize tax-evasion schemes available only to the upper bracket taxpayers."

Two Unions Denied Ballot

Transit Co., operators of Great Lakes cargo ships. The AFL Seafarers International Union, which had complied with the registration and affidavit requirements, sought a collective bargaining election. The CIO National Maritime Union intervened in the case, requesting to appear also on the ballot.

The NLRB denied its request, because its officers had failed to submit the anti-Communist oaths by the deadline date. Employes of the Wilson Co., therefore, will be limited to a choice in the election between the AFL union or no union representation.

The second case also involved a noncomplying union as an intervenor, but in this situation that union had long since held the bargaining rights.

The case concerned Sigmund Cohn & Co., manufacturers and sellers of base and precious metal products in New York.

For three years it had collective bargaining contracts with the Wholesale and Warehouse Workers Local 65. But last spring, when its contract expired, the independent International Association of Machinists asked for a collective bargaining election. Local 65 intervened, requesting a place on the ballot.

The NLRB ruled that the election should be held, but that the name of Local 65 should not appear, since it had not complied with the filing requirements of the law. Thus, as in the previous case, employes will have a choice only between the IAM and no union.

In both cases the noncomplying unions' only chance for gaining, or maintaining, collective bargaining status would be if the majority of employes voted for "no union." This would mean that the rival, complying union did not have a majority status. In that event the noncomplying union could seek—outside the processes of the law and dependent only on its economic strength—to win a contract from the employer.

Without violating the law, it could strike to gain the recognition it sought, but the employer would be under no legal compulsion to recognize it.

In the event, however, that the complying union won the election, no rival union could strike without violating the law and incurring the risk of damages levied against it.

In both yesterday's cases, the situation involved unions intervening for a place on the ballot. The NLRB has not yet ruled on a further issue inherent in the new law, arising when an employer, not a union, requests an election. The question still undecided is whether in that event noncomplying unions may go on the ballot.

If not, and if the only union involved had not complied with the law, the employer's request for an election would be denied—for there would be no name to go on the ballot form.

In other action yesterday, the NLRB dismissed seven more old cases, in which noncomplying unions initiated the request for elections. This action was in line with precedents set by the board in an earlier ruling.

Whatever results the law may have in these or other cases, it appeared yesterday that no major changes would be sought in it at the coming session of Congress.

Senator Ball (R., Minn.), chairman of the joint congressional committee studying the law's operation, told a reporter that it was extremely unlikely his group would recommend any revisions.

While the committee's decision alone would not bind Congress, the Minnesota Senator's attitude apparently reflects agreement with that of Senator Taft (R., Ohio), co-author of the law and chairman of both the Senate Labor and GOP Policy Committees.

Between them, the two Senators are conceded the power to block Senate action and thus kill any efforts by others to meet the demands of organized labor leaders for drastic revision of the act.

Maryland Senate Approves Lane's Ta xCut Measure consideration and by a lengthy conference early this afternoon among Governor Lane, the mayor and city council of Baltimore, and Baltimore legislators, who met in the mayor's office.

Montgomery County's Senator Davis, in bitter opposition to any change but repeal of the sales tax "at the earliest possible moment," quoted both the Bible and the wishes of Montgomery Countians to explain his stand.

He argued that though the bill did raise the exemption of purchase prices taxable it broadened the base "until there is actually no tax reduction at all." He referred to a clause in the new bill amending the present sales tax to stipulate that only food sold for home consumption would be tax free.

The new clause was designed to embrace sales by street venders.

The sales tax change measure came up for Senate deliberation this afternoon when it was voted out favorably by the Senate finance committee, under the chairmanship of Senator L. Harold Sothoron (Dem., Prince Georges County), who told the Senate he saw no hope of ending the sales tax "until 1949."

The same committee voted unfavorably on another measure which would authorize the State Board of Public Works to further raise the minimum base of the sales tax as receipts from it warranted. In his message to the legislators yesterday, Governor Lane left that proposal "to the discretion" of the legislators.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6.—Montgomery County State legislators won half their battle to supply relief to debt-ridden Surburban Hospital in Bethesda and to give Takoma Park a professional fire department.

Two hospital health bills and three bills affecting Takoma Park which had been introduced through the Legislative Council by Montgomery County legislators were passed here today by the House of Delegates on third and final reading. They were sent to the Senate for its consideration.

The bills were only a fraction of those acted upon favorably today by either the House of the Senate to give aid to Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties and their neighbors.

Payments Provided

One bill passed by the delegates would authorize the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners to pay to any hospital located in the county and not receiving State aid a sum in grant not exceeding $50,000.

The second hospital relief measure also passed by the delegates extends the powers of the Montgomery County Commissioners to acquire sites, construct and operate hospitals and health clinics in the promotion of public health.

Both bills, the legislators said, were aimed at relieving conditions at Suburban Hospital which has been operating at a loss for some time now. Should both pass the Senate and receive indorsement of the Governor, either or both could be used to help the hospital out of its financial straits, they said.

Takoma Park Measures

The Takoma Park measures passed by the House of Delegates today give the incorporated city (town) permission to borrow up to $200,000, upon bond referendum, for capital improvements; repeals the county act governing the Takoma Park (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department, and authorizes the collection of a special tax of 6 cents per $100 assessed valuation from property owners in the Twenty-second Precinct of the Thirteenth Election District, there.

The measures thus opened the way for modernization of the town's fire department, provide the means of raising money for new equipment and insures a method of obtaining continuing maintenance funds for a paid fire department.

Prisoner Faces Judge in Cell, Gets Life Term

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—Shrieking "I am innocent," and twisting in the grip of four policemen, a 26-year-old Polish seaman today faced a judge through the barred door of a courthouse lockup and heard himself sentenced to life imprisonment.

Witold Walter Szukiewicz was convicted last May of killing his bride of a few months, lost in his attempt to gain a new trial, and was to have been brought before Judge Joseph Sherbow for sentencing. But police reported the prisoner was too unruly.

So, for the first time within memory of local court attaches, a judge left the bench to hold court in jail. A stenographer and other officials accompanied the jurist to the reception room of the lockup.

The wife, Helen, was shot to death on a downtown Baltimore street last January 15.

U. S. as Landlord Sues to Evict Maryland Tenant

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—The United States Government, having landlord trouble, went to Federal Court today seeking eviction of a tenant occupying one of its houses at Indian Head, Md.

The homes, rented by the Government on the United States Naval Powder Factory reservation, are for use only of active Government workers, the suit pointed out. It alleged that the defendant, Morris E. Bowie, has not worked for the Government since June 17, 1946.

Bowie, the suit continued, has been renting a house on the naval reservation for $35 a month. Since last August, however, the Government has refused to accept rent, and Morris was given notice to vacate more than a year ago.

Federal Judge William C. Coleman signed an order giving Bowie until November 19 to show cause why he should not be required to leave the house.

Phone Building Planned

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 6.—Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will build a $334,000 office building at the corner of Burke and Spring sts. here. Plans and general design have been approved, and it is expected to be completed late in 1948. Dial systems will be installed in this area when the new building is completed.

Shooting Holds Woman

Mrs. Mary Warren, 28, of 2231 yesterday by 13th Precinct police and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon in the shooting of her husband, Fred L. Warren, 44.

Warren was admitted to Garfield Hospital yesterday afternoon with two .32 caliber bullet wounds in his right leg and thigh.

County Teachers in Parley

More than 100 Fairfax County high school teachers yesterday opened their annual two-day workshop in the Fairfax County High School. All high schools in the county, closed yesterday, will remain closed today for the sessions.

U. S. Overpaid Hughes on Ending Contract, Probers Told; Firm May Return $326,333

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Multimillionaire Howard Hughes, charged with operating his wartime aircraft companies like "a country club," was paid $326,333 too much when the Government canceled his 22-million-dollar contract for photo-reconnaissance planes, the General Accounting Office testified yesterday.

Four representatives of the Comptroller General, official watch dog of the Treasury, told the Senate War Investigating Committee that there was no way under the law for the Government to get the money back unless Hughes volunteered to pay it.

Promptly Noah M. Dietrich, executive vice president of the Hughes Tool Co. told the committee that if the claim is properly established the Hughes parent company will pay it. He said he was authorized to make such a promise in the absence of the Texas-born planebuilder.

First Disclosure

Dietrich said, and the GAO officials concurred, that the first time the company ever had been told of the GAO finding was when the four representatives took the stand late in the afternoon.

The Senate committee, which abruptly adjourned its hearings into Hughes' contracts last August after the embattled airplane designer had dramatically defended his flying boat project, had its innings in a full day of steady testimony against Hughes, his operating methods and his production record.

Charles W. Perelle, former general manager of the Hughes Aircraft Co., told the committee that the Government never should have awarded Hughes the two wartime aviation contracts—one for the FX-11 photo reconnaissance plane and the other for the flying boat.

The two contracts together represented an investment of 40 million dollars in taxpayers' funds in an enterprise which, Perelle testified, Hughes regarded as "his personal plaything."

Perelle said Hughes had discharged him for "insubordination" soon after he had submitted a lengthy letter of criticism against Hughes' production, accounting and business methods.

The former Hughes employe, said he had been paid $75,000 a year and given a $250,000 stock option to do away with the "Hughes Country Club" atmosphere and bring up production.

Perelle testified that Hughes once discussed with him the possibility of postwar employment of an Army procurement officer who had helped him get a contract.

Now president of hte Gar Wood Industries, Wayne, Mich., Perelle said that officer discussed was Major General Bennett E. Meyers, wartime deputy director of AAF material an dservices at Wright Field, O.

Meyers to Testify

Hughes, the executive said, told him the idea of hiring Meyers had been dropped and to "forget all about it."

Meyers, who has been brought into testimony repeatedly as favoring continuation of contracts for Hughes, is slated to take the stand himself today.

Testimony yesterday disclosed that the Bureau of the Budget twice recommended that Hughes' contract for the FX-11 either be cancelled or transferred to a company with a better production record.

Last ecommendation for cancellation from the Bureau of the Budget, according to Air Force documents, was on February 27, 1945.

On May 2, 1945, General Meyers replied that since the contract originally had been recommended by higher authorities, he could not recommend for cancellation or transfer.

Subcommittee Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) called attention to the fact that this was only six days before VE day.

On May 3, 1945, the day after Meyers made his recommendation, Col. H. G. Bunker in Air Force headquarters in Washington, agreed with the recommendation of the Budget Bureau. On May 29, the last portion of the Hughes FX-11 contract was cancelled.

The Budget Bureau, the records showed, said work on Hughes' flying boat should be either halted abruptly or Hughes should pay all the building costs himself.

The Hercules, largest plane in the world—five stories high—was lifted into the air with Hughes at the controls last week. Hughes, who said he has put seven million dollars of his own money into the plane, told the committee earlier that if the plane flew it would prove that man could cross a barrier of size, comparable to the barrier of sound.

General Phillips Heard

Brigadier General James F. Phillips, wartime chief of materiel for the Army Air Forces, squirmed on the witness stand when he was questioned about the Budget Bureau recommendations and about "the political background" of the contracts.

In a memorandum, Col. E. C. Riley, one of Phillips' assistants, had quoted Phillips as giving "the political background" of the FX-11 contract to an Army Air Force conference.

Those weren't his words, Phillips maintained, and he didn't have any idead what was meant by the political reference.

"If I may respectfully suggest, Mr. Carirman," he countered, Colonel Riley wrote that memorandum. He might be able to explane it."

With steady determination Ferguson pressed the point.

Was the reference to the fact that it was Brigadier General Elliott Roosevelt, son of the late President, who recommended the FX-11 in the first place?

Was the reference, perhaps, to a memorandum, signed F. D. R., in which the commander-in-chief queried of the photo-reconnaissance plane, "What is htere in this?"

Asked About Memo

"Could Riley draw the conclusion that this was what was meant by political background?"

"He might have," said the obviously unhappy witness.

Then Ferguson asked Phillips just what he had meant by a memo signed by himself. It read:

"Howard Hughes should be left to hang himself and the Army Air Forces should not get itself into a position of being criticized in this connection."

Ferguson asked Phillips if the real story was not that the technical experts at Wright Field and elsewhere were not all against awarding Hughes a contract, but that Gen. H. H. Arnold, former Air Force chief, had approved it, and "so the Air Force was just going to let the contract stand but do nothing about it and let Hughes hang."

The subcommittee chairman demanded to know if it wasn't "unfair" to Hughes to adopt such an attitude.

"On the other hand," Phillips commented, "Hughes himself was quite confident he could finish the job on time."

Johnny Meyer Again

The name of Johnny Meyer, chubby free-spending "public relations expert" for Hughes, who once testified that he never saw anyone else "pick up a check in my entire war," popped into testimony again yesterday.

Safety Measures for DC-6s Ordered on Builders' Request

Removal of certain insulating material and thorough inspection of equipment on the DC-6 has been ordered as a fire precaution, the Civil Aeronautics Administration acknowledged yesterday after the temporary grounding of a plane in Hawaii.

The action was requested by the Douglas Aircraft Company, builders of the DC-6, to support its recommendations to users of the plane. Douglas said most of the work it recommended had been completed before the order was issued.

The DC-6 is the type which crashed in flames near Bryce Canyon, Utah, on October 24, killing 52 persons.

The order provides removal of the fibre-glass heat-roofing pads from the bottom of the cargo compartments by 7 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, Friday, unless inspection shows them to be oil soaked, in which case the pads must be removed before another flight.

Glass Might Act As Wick

The order further provides a thorough inspection of the electrical, hydraulic, fuel, oil, heating, ventilating, oxygen, alcohol and thermal de-icing systems before December 1 unless it has been done since October 24.

The insulation to be removed is fibre glass and fireproof, but Charles Dycer, chief of aircraft and components service for CAA, said it soaked up leaking oil and might act as a wick in event of a fire.

Government and company officials declined to associate the action with the cause of the Bryce Canyon disaster, but said the situation might have contributed to the intensity of the fire.

The Civil Aeronautics Board previously had ordered removal of landing flares from all DC-6's because they "may have contributed substantially to the intensity" of the Bryce Canyon fire.

More than 80 DC-6's have been delivered, including the Independence, President Truman's plane. A Douglas spokesman said he assumed the Independence has been modified according to company recommendations.

American Airlines, largest user of DC-6's, said its 41 planes of that type had been modified before the CAA order. Removal of the insulating pads requires only two hours, Government and Douglas officials said.

United Airlines, with 34 DC-6's, has not completed modification, a spokesman said, and as a result has canceled some flights and delayed others.

Hawaii's Friendship Plane, with Territorial Gov. Ingram Stainback already aboard, was grounded 5 minutes before it was scheduled to take off for San Francisco.

Police Here Capture Md. Jail Fugitive

Pearl Simpson, 50, one of four men who sawed their way out of the Charles County jail at La Plata, Md., Tuesday night, was captured here early yesterday in the 1200 block of 4th st. sw.

Simpson, of Doncaster, Md., who was awaiting trial on charges of rape and assault with intent to kill, surrendered to Metropolitan Police without a struggle. He was unarmed.

Police made the arrest after a tip that Simpson had visited a boarding house in southwest Washington. He was in the street trying to hitch a ride when police captured him.

Returned to La Plata yesterday by Sheriff Elmer M. Quade, Simpson said he had no knowledge as to the whereabouts of the other three still at large. He said he had taken a bus from Waldorf, Md., about 10 miles from the jail, to Washington.

Still at large are Lewis Williams, 17, of Welcome, Md., awaiting trial on a rape charge; William McClellan, 23, of La Plata, serving a sentence for drunk and disorderly conduct, and Samuel A. Jackson, 29, of Raleigh, N. C., awaiting trial on charges of burglary and auto larceny. All the fugitives are Negroes.

Warrenton Names New Chief of Police

Warrenton, Va., Nov. 6.—The Warrenton Town Council has named Luther Cox to the newly created post of chief of police. Cox, a veteran of World War II, is a native of Garrett, Ky., and has been on the local police force since 1946.

He will take over his duties December 1, replacing Town Sgt. Sam Hall, who becomes Fauquier County Sheriff January 1. The Council also approved the appointment of Clay Brown to the police force.

Beckley Tragedy

E. RAY BAILEY
Furniture salesman

Beckley, W. Va., Nov. 6 (Spl.).—Police today sought the weapon used in the slaying of a Beckley businessman and the wife of a Beckley dentist, whose bodies were found in a wooded ravine near here yesterday.

The victims were:

E. Ray Bailey, 50, manager of a Beckley store furniture department and father of two children.

Mrs. Nellie Mae Rand, 39, wife of Dr. K. K. Rand and mother of two children.

Both had been shot in the head, Bailey once and Mrs. Rand twice, and their bodies rolled down an embankment off a lonely mountain road nine miles from here. Bailey's car, its back seat blood stained and four bullet holes in the cushions, was found near the Black Knight Country Club and Mrs. Rand's car was not far away.

[State Police Sergt. Anthony Scalise told The Washington Post last night that Dr. Rand and Mrs. Bailey had been among the persons questioned yesterday but that "concrete" clews are still lacking. He added that the slain couple had been "seen together."

[The West Virginia State Police criminal investigation bureau has taken a number of prints from the cars and around the scene.

[Dr. Rand told The Post he had "never heard any threats" against his wife. "I don't even know anyone who was even mad at her," he said. Mrs. Bailey declined to discuss the case. Her only comment was praise of her husband—"a mighty fine man."]

Editor's Home Bombed

Managua, Nicaragua, Nov. 6 (U.P.). One man was killed by a bomb explosion shortly after midnight outside the home of Adolfo Altamirano, editor and part owner of La Estrella De Nicaragua. Raul Arana, 21, passerby, was fatally wounded by bomb splinters. Altamirano's home was badly damaged.

Mrs. Talbert Asks Divorce

Mrs. Hazel P. Talbert, 4607 Connecticut ave., who said she helped her husband, Edward, build up a $300,000 group of businesses from a small ticket agency, yesterday asked District Court to grant her a limited divorce and to declare her equal partner in the enterprises.

Citing cruelty as grounds for the action, Mrs. Talbert charged in her suit that once her husband, angered during a card game with her and friends in Roanoke, left the table and returned to Washington. He stayed away for "extended periods," the suit stated, leaving her permanently in November, 1946.

Additional income is derived by Talbert, the suit said, from a large farm and stable he acquired at Olney, Md.

Prince Georges Fines 2 D. C. Men For Trash Dumpin

Imposition of maximum fines on two District men in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday signaled renewal of an intensive campaign to prevent illegal dumping of trash in Prince Georges County.

The men, Alfred G. LesCallet, 946 14the st. se., and Joseph B. Perry, 734 50th st. ne., were fined $50 each for dumping trash along county roads in zones whcih are described as restricted under existing county ordinances. Both men were arrested October 31 by Policeman J. P. Kearns who had been assigned to the anti-trash drive.

Perry was also fined $25 for reckless driving by rigzagging and $25 for driving at a speed greater than reasonable, which was suspended Kearns said the traffic charges grew out of Perry's attempt to flee as he was about to be arrested.

Salesman Freed From Term for Phone Obscenity

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—A Philadelphia advertising salesman sentenced to six months in jail by a magistrate three days ago on charges of disorderly conduct by using obscenity over a telephone was freed today by order of Judge Emory H. Niles in City Court.

The judge held the three charges brought against the defendant George F. Walsh, each accusing him specifically of "acting in a disorderly manner by making a telephone call . . . and using obscene language to the disturbance of the public peace" are not charges warranted by the laws of Maryland.

Walsh had instituted habeas corpus proceedings on the ground the three sentences of 60 days each, consecutively, were unlawful.

Walsh admitted at the magistrate's hearing he had made telephone calls to various women from his hotel room.

AT THE SONDY SPRING FAIR—Four-year-old Lorraine Hobbs of Olney, Md., cautiously feeds corn to a big goose, one of the more than 1200 entries displayed yesterday at the eleventh annual "Community Fair", staged at Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md. The two-day fair, concluded last night, was started 11 years ago by the present Sherwood principal, Sidney Lawler. It gives residents of Montgomery Coun ty the opportunity to inspect the farm and home products of their neighbors

School Plans Will Cost Md. 29 Millions

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—School construction to cost $29,393,146 altogether will be at least in the blue print state in all but two of Maryland's 23 counties before this fiscal year is over the State Department of Education reported today.

Baltimore and Prince Georges County top the list, with plans to spend $5,750,000 and $4,350,000 respectively on new school buildings.

Montgomery County is third, with $3,531,951 to be spent on schools.

Ninety-five per cent of the contracts let or to be let are for new buildings with the rest going for improvements, Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, State school superintendent, reported.

Montgomery County has 27 new projects, nearly four times as many as any other county. Pullen explained the county is constructing many of the campus-type schools, with a large number of separate units.

Following is a list of buildings and total cost for each county:

Allegany, five, $2,764,000; Anne Arundel, five, $3,100,000; Baltimore, seven, $5,750,000; Calvert, seven, $744,195; Caroline, none; Carroll, two, $400,000; Cecil, one, $30,000; Charles, three, $800,000; Dorchester, none; Frederick, two, $500,000; Garrett, seven, $1,500,000; Harford, five, three million dollars; Howard, two, $500,000; Kent, five, $50,000; Montgomery, 27, $3,531,951; Prince Georges, seven, $4,350,000; Queen Annes, three, $25,000; St. Marys, two $3000; Somerset, one, $75,000; Talbot, one, $100,000; Washington, four, $1,003,000, Wicomico, three, $1,085,000, and Worcester, $82,000.

The 1947 Legislature authorized counties to issue bonds totaling $39,835,000 for school construction. The counties also are using funds available under their county levies and through the State's so-called incentive fund for buildings.

23 Jobless Pay Collectors Fined

Centreville, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—Twenty-three Kent Island crab pickers who pleaded guilty to collecting jobless pay illegally were fined $50 each and given one month suspended jail sentences today by Circuit Judge William R. Horsey.

Horsey told the defendants his sentences were "lenient."

Nine other crab pickers, who pleaded innocent, will go on trial next week.

Approximately 200 persons were receiving jobless pay last June, when State's Attorney Edward Turner opened a campaign to purge the unemployment conpensation rolls. No one has applied for pay this month.

Sandy Spring Home Products Display Viewed by Hundreds

Hundreds of Sandy Spring, Md., area residents outdid themselves with traditional farm and home products displayed at a two-day "community fair" concluded last night at Sherwood High School.

More than 1200 entries were viewed by several hundred persons and numerous cash and special prizes as well as ribbons were awarded.

Tables loaded with home-made jams and pastries as well as locally grown prize fruits and vegetables were exhibited.

Sidney Lawler, principal of the school, founded the fair 11 years ago when he was an agriculture instructor. It is held so that members of the farming community can study and observe the work of their neighbors.

Sponsors this year were the boys and girls 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America as well as local farm and civic groups. Co-directors were Harold H. Compton, agriculture teacher, and Mrs. Ella Lopez, the home economics instructor.

A high light of the "fair," Principal Lawler said, was a special exhibit staged by the elementary school in its classrooms. The exhibit included various models, charts, and posters, as well as numerous hobbies.

Town Crime Wave Cut to a Ripple By 1 Policeman

Berlin, Md., Nov. 6 (AP). — A minor crime wave blew into town behind one-man-police-force Jerry Rapillo, but after two weeks the new chief can boast that he has reduced the wave to a ripple—and found time to pretty up the three-cell jail to boot.

Jerry was on the job for almost 24 hours daily during his first 10 days as chief. The city's three policemen quit during his first weekend.

"Guess I was too tough," Rapillo said.

But the 47-year-old former pugilist (they used to call him the Patent Leather Kid in New York) went it alone.

Between arrests he painted and fumigated the jail, which he found "just unsanitary."

"It's a tough job by yourself," says Rapillo. The nights were devoted to patrolling the 2000-population town in a delivery truck.

But things are looking up. The mayor and council called a hurried meeting when Rapillo threatened to quit and go home to Washington. Now one of the former policemen has come back. A new one was found, and Rapillo is looking for another.

Civilian Pay Boosted At Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—New wage scales providing for an average increase of 4 per cent have been made effective for civilian employes of the Navy Department in the Annapolis-Baltimore area, a Severn River Naval Command officer announced today.

Included in the area are the command with its installations, the Naval Academy, postgraduate school and the Academy Preparatory School at Bainbridge.

Although some decreases occur in the new scales, none will apply to personnel now on the payroll.

Jewish Welfare Board Meeting Attracts 200

A definition of the fundamental purposes of the Jewish Community Centers will be discussed at the thirty-eighth annual convention of the Middle Atlantic Section, National Jewish Welfare Board, which opens at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the local Jewish Center, 16th and Q sts. nw.

The convention is expected to bring more than 200 leaders of Jewish Community Centers, YMHA and YWHA, from 35 communities in the District, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania.

Bee Sting Helps But Doctors Don't Recommend It

Chicago, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—The belief that bee stings will alleviate symptoms of arthritis isn't pure superstition, the Journal of the American Medical Association said today. But it said bee sting treatment couldn't be recommended.

"Bee keepers have been said to be immune to arthritis and they have been known to dispense the stings of their bees to the sick," the Journal said.

The Journal explained that the natural venom of the bee contains a poisonous substance similar to cantharidin and a sapotoxin somewhat similar to that found in snake venom. The physiologic effects produced by injections of the venom of bees are said to be similar to the effects of administering histamine.

"Untoward reactions to bee venom therapy are fairly common," the Journal said. "On the basis of the evidence available at this time, bee venom therapy cannot be recommended."

Crash on Gridiron Hospitalizes Back

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—Peter Calas of Hagerstown, was in the University Hospital here today with a head injury suffered in a soccer game between the University of Maryland and Western Maryland College at Westminster yesterday.

Physicians described his condition as "satisfactory."

What a relief to be able to do all your week-end shopping at one time at the beautiful Shirlington Business Center. Whether you go by car or bus, it's a pleasant easy ride. Both the A. B. & W. and Arnold Bus lines take you from Washington, and points in nearby Virginia, direct to the heart of the Center.

Now, you can fill your home with flowers from Shirlington. Gude has opened a flower shop a few steps from the theater, and a beauty it is. Right now, it's blooming with chrysanthemums . . . great golden ones, shaggy amethyst beauties, and little white, russet, rose and yellow "buttons." You know it's time to plant "the flowers that bloom in the Spring, Tra La," when you see Gude's Holland bulbs . . . crocuses, daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, jonquils. House plants in profusion, ivy, philodendron, cacti in pottery and glass bowls and miniature Oriental gardents are ideal for indoor decor . . . a touch of green, now that winter is nigh. It does your heart good just to walk in Gude's door, gaze at the lovely blossoms, inhale their spirit-lifting fragrance.

Fast-approaching holidays turn your thoughts to festive fashions like those at the Clothes Horse. Regal gowns for "big" evenings, white dinner gowns, whirling ballerinas beg to be tried on. See how you look in Ceil Chapman's bouffant dance dresses of rustling taffeta and filmy net . . . new-length frocks, with skirts full of flare, of taffeta and moire and velveteen . . . a "haute couture" afternoon dress, full of skirt, bare of shoulder, with a valance of pleating. Prices range from $35 to $69.95, and there are sizes for juniors, misses and women.

You'll want a new permanent, like Clive Beauty Salon's "Supersonic" to make your hair look lovely with your new holiday dresses. This scientifically proven cold wave by Helene Curtis is fool-proof, we are told. It employs body heat to do the waving . . . cannot over-curl or under-curl, but gives you lovely, natural looking waves that are easy to manage.

Santa is busy behind the scenes at Jerry's Kiddie Center, and has already brought in several sacks full of toys . . . velocipedes and doll carriages and wagons, and everything good girls and boys want. If you want them to be warm and protected children, you'd better pick out snow suits for them from Jerry's large selection by national makers. There are Pram Sets for infants of six months, suits of wool, and suits of water-repellent cotton poplin lined with wool, for every age from toddlers to teen-agers. Better attend to this now!

Imagine the gleeful cries of your favorite little girl on Christmas morning when she spies a lovely doll from the Gift Shop under her tree! It's awfully hard to choose. Johnny and Janie, precious brother and sister, are dressed in blue, stand alone, cost $3.95 each. A charming little miss has long blonde braids of real hair her young mother can brush and comb. Magic Skin Baby may be bathed as often as his little nurse wishes. He comes in shirt and didee for $5.95, and you may buy him a wardrobe, if you wish.

Glittering as tree ornaments is the Shirlington Woolworth's costume jewelry. Gold-colored butterflies, birds and insects set with colored stones flash like precious gems. Wide, gold-painted carved bracelets, twisted gold-colored chains, gold or silver-finished snake chain necklace are lovely, and tiny-priced.

Virginia Results

It is not exactly astonishing that the Republicans did not sweep to the gates of the capitol in Richmond in Tuesday's Virginia election. What is surprising is that the Republicans made heavy gains in the races for State Senator and Delegate in southwestern Virginia at the very time that the GOP was being snowed under in Kentucky. Perhaps this was a sort of reaction to the one-party rule that is a Virginia byword. For in Virginia it is the Democrats, rather than the Republicans, who are the conservative party.

In the areas near Washington the only interesting contest was in Arlington County. The apathetic vote in Alexandria and in Fairfax County meant that since there was no meaningful opposition, no inducement existed to go to the polls. In Arlington, despite early Republican optimism, Democrats have won all contests except that for county treasurer. The reason, we suspect, lies both in the caliber of the Republican candidates themselves and in their campaign tactics. In one instance vicious mud-slinging left many voters disgusted. To win Arlington the Republicans would have to mount extraordinary strength in order to overcome the normal following of the incumbent machine. On Tuesday the voters simply were not convinced that they would get any better representation under the challengers than under the incumbents.

Results in the Arlington County Board race were mixed. One of the present members was reelected and a newcomer was chosen for the second board post. The closeness of the vote is indicative of considerable dissatisfaction with the present board's inaction and should put the new board on its mettle. Where Arlington voters did show a decided preference was in their overwhelming selection of school board candidates supported by the Citizens Committee for School Improvement. This is encouraging evidence that voters feel deeply on local subjects when issues are clear cut. In this case the electorate plainly was not taken in by apologists for the status quo.

In quite another sphere the Arlington results disclosed a drastic need for overhauling election procedure. Any would-be voter who has struggled with the complexities of the Arlington registration system knows how it operates as a positive deterrent to voting. The companion piece is the overloaded precincts and archaic tallying methods which are an impossible harrier to quick election returns. Certainly musts in any program for local improvements should be a redistricting in keeping with Arlington's present population and the installation of voting machines to replace the present ridiculously cumbersome manual process of counting ballots.

Trend Or Not

The Republicans will have difficulty in explaining how it happened that Kentucky returned a decisive majority on Tuesday for the Democratic candidates for Governor and other leading State offices. It is further significant that Louisville, a city in which the independent voters exercise a large influence over municipal elections, elected a Democratic Board of Aldermen in place of the 12 Republican board members. Of course, the Republicans will minimize their defeat by protesting—with truth—that Kentucky is normally a Democratic State. Hence in an off year with no Federal officials to elect, the State simply reverted to its old allegiance. However, this reversionist tendency is, we surmise, indicative of a revulsion of sentiment favorable to the Democrats that can hardly be dismissed in such fashion.

A year ago Kentucky elected a Republican Senator by 42,000 votes and returned two Republican Representatives in place of Democrats. While local issues were predominant this year, we doubt whether the Democrats could have staged such a decided comeback if the disaffection that put the Republicans in control of Congress had not greatly abated insofar as Kentuckians are concerned. Moreover, the victorious Democratic candidate for the Governorship, Representative Earle C. Clements, voted against the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and made capital out of his opposition to that legislation in campaigning for election. It all adds up to one pretty clear conclusion: the tide that swept Republicans into power is beginning to recede. For a State like Kentucky provides a very sensitive gauge of shifting political minds.

After 30 Years

The Red Square today will witness a mighty parade of the Red army in celebration of the thirtieth birthday of the Soviet Revolution. It is too early as yet to put the revolution in the context of world history. Yet sufficient time has elapsed to demonstrate that the revolution which the Russians are now extolling is something entirely different from the 1917 Revolution. In those idealistic days Lenin and his co-adjutors expected the workers of the world to arise as the result merely of example. For a time their hopes seemed justified, but, as soon as non-Russian people recovered from the excitement and disturbance of war, an accustomed pattern of life returned. It was then that the great design of 1917 dissolved into naked aggression—an expansion that Peter the Great would have recognized and admired. Perhaps the Fifth Column in the Soviet manner is a novel intrigue. But even this, in a way, is as old as Troy, and the student of history has no difficulty in finding analogies for the so-called revolution as it is now practiced. The Soviet state, Communist infiltration—both are instruments of the lust for power of a coterie of 14 strong and ruthless men who make up the Political Bureau of the Communist Party, or Politburo.

It is because of this state of things that our eyes are today not on an idea or a movement but on a personality, viz, Joseph Stalin. Stalin, dominant member of the Politburo, will not be on hand for today's ceremony. He is resting at Sochi. More and more the Soviet leader, who next month will be 68, is taking time out from duties which must be onerous in the extreme. That he will not be in Moscow today will revive the rumor that he is feeling the effects of age and the tremendous energy he has expended as Soviet leader. As to this, we have no knowledge, but nothing that we have heard lends credence to the repeated rumors that Stalin is ill.

Nevertheless the questions of the succession and of what will happen when Stalin dies are endemic. The weakness of a state resting on personal power instead of law is that an entirely new situation is invited when the head man has been removed. However, it is taken for granted that Stalin and his colleagues of the Politburo have prepared very carefully for that event. Marshal Bulganin will again take the salute in place of Stalin, but no expert thinks of him as Stalin's successor. There are many observers who say that the choice is either Zhdanov or Malenkov, the two members of the Politburo who were present in Poland when the Comintern was disinterred. In Russia they are called "chicks from Stalin's nest." But the man that Victor A. Kravchenko, author of I Chose Freedom, feels sure will inherit the mantle is "The Hammer" himself, Vyacheslav Mikhailovich Molotov. Whoever the man, few authorities on Russia believe that the dictatorship will crack up in the event of Stalin's death; the elite in Moscow will not be so easily overthrown.

And purged the regime must be of its present character and power if we are ever to have a peaceful world. Five years ago, when we commented on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Soviet Revolution, we noted the good will that had developed out of association in the war on Hitler. Stalin himself spoke of it. He pointed to a "progressive rapprochement" among the big powers for the establishment of peace as well as the prosecution of war. He outlined the basis of this rapprochement in terms of the Atlantic Charter. They were honeyed words. But they have been proved so insincere that no statesmen in the free world could afford any longer to rely on Muscovite words. Moscow turned its back on its professions and pledges even before hostilities ceased. Now, having been stopped in its expansion, it is relying on intimidation, clearing out, Tartar fashion, a great fear felt beyond even the peripheral area of its borderland tenanted by its satellites. The ultimate aim is to frighten America. Molotov's hint yesterday that Russia may have the atom bomb is the latest of a series of desperate moves aimed at hastening an American slump and a consequent American retirement to our continental shores. Expansion by intimidation can be resisted only if the American people keep up that strength of soul which was Spinoza's recipe for peace.

Tax Avoidance

The really significant recommendations of the tax study committee headed by Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, have been overshadowed by the committee's advocacy of a general reduction in income taxes and its suggestion for "strengthening the excise tax structure so that, in less prosperous times than these, the Federal Government will still have adequate sources of revenue." We do not propose to discuss these much publicized features of the report, for the committee makes no specific recommendations concerning the amount of reductions in income tax that they consider desirable or the methods to be followed in applying reductions. The references to excise taxes are likewise too general in character to afford any guide to legislative action. However, as Matthew Woll notes in his one-man dissenting report, the committee is proposing to effect "a major change in Federal tax policy by urging increased dependence on consumption taxes."

The real meat of the Magill report is found in numerous specific amendments to the tax laws that the committee hopes to see enacted next year. Most of these recommendations are designed to provide relief for taxpayers in the upper surtax brackets and to open up avenues of tax avoidance on a lavish scale. To cite a few outstanding examples: the report urges legalization of short-term family trusts, thereby permitting the taxpayer to assign income to members of his family in lower tax brackets without actually surrendering control of the property. The proposal would not only reopen a now plugged loophole for tax evasion, but it would discriminate unfairly against family heads with large earned incomes who do not own securities.

The recommendation to allow individual stockholders credits on dividends paid by corporations, the credit to be calculated by multiplying an individual's dividend by the lowest bracket rate of the income tax, may have merit. Nevertheless, the change would entail extremely large losses of revenue that we cannot afford to dispense with at this time. The committee also believes that directors of corporations should be permitted to decide what proportion of earnings shall be retained in their businesses. Thus the burden of proving that profits had been unreasonably accumulated would rest on the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, making it much easier than at present, especially for closely held corporations, to retain an excessive amount of earnings without incurring a penalty tax. The stockholders of such concerns would in turn escape payment of high surtaxes on distributed earnings.

There is a cleverly phrased proposal in regard to stock purchase plans that would actually permit an employe to exercise an option to purchase stock for less than the market price, sell it that very day if he chose, and allow the profits from sales to be treated as long-term capital gains for taxation purposes. That would be a very alluring scheme for reducing the income taxes of high-paid executives participating in stock purchase plans. Numerous suggestions regarding the treatment of gains resulting from corporate reorganizations have the same ulterior purpose of facilitating tax avoidance with resultant loss of revenue to the Treasury.

Another committee recommendation that would have a devastating effect on revenue is the proposal to permit taxpayers to set their own rates of depreciation for the assets in their plants. Problems connected with rates of depreciation no doubt deserve consideration in view of the fact that rates of depreciation that might have been reasonable 10 years ago may no longer take care of obsolescence. However, it does not follow that the remedy for this state of affairs lies in letting taxpayers determine rates for themselves. The committee believes that in the great bulk of cases rates and methods would be reasonable. We see no reason for such abounding optimism. On the contrary, with lower taxes in prospect, the temptation would be irresistible to take excessive deductions for depreciation in the next few years when, as Mr. Woll says, tax collections should remain high to counteract inflation.

The committee's frontal assault on the estate and gift tax system threatens to bring about partial collapse of that rather feeble wing of the tax structure. Among other things it is proposed that all gifts made more than two years before death shall be conclusively deemed not to have been made in contemplation of death—an unwarranted assumption that would open up a new avenue of escape from estate taxes. Probably the greatest loss of revenue would result from the recommendation to exempt life insurance payable to a beneficiary from the estate tax, provided the decedent who had been paying the premiums possessed no incidence of ownership of the policy. This retrograde step would be a windfall for insurance companies, since it is a direct invitation to tax avoidance by the insurance route. Expert estimates indicate that from a third to a half of the revenue from estate taxes would be lost if such special tax exemption were to be granted.

All of us look forward to the time when reductions in Government expenditures will make it safe to lighten the burden that taxpayers are now carrying. When that time comes, reductions in income taxes for the relief of individuals in the high surtax brackets as well as those at the low end of the scale should be substantial. For the present high level of taxes entails real hardship for many workers and discourages the taking of legitimate investment risks by the well-to-do. The corporation tax system also needs to be thoroughly overhauled, while the estate and gift tax system is in crying need of reform. But this is no time to urge sweeping tax reductions, if the budget is to stay in balance and the National credit to be properly safeguarded.

Nor is it fitting at any time to present a program thinly disguised as a general tax reduction measure that is in reality a plan for lightening the tax burdens of the few by widening existing gaps through which taxable income escapes high surtax payments and by boring new holes in a defective tax structure. Unfortunately that appears to be the primary objective of the Magill report—an unworthy aim meriting the harsh criticism of the lone labor representative and only dissenting member of the tax study committee, Matthew Woll.

THE SUMMONS

All the English birds were noisy in the cool green sunless evening—
Even, across the silent fields, I heard the cuckoo sing—
When my buddy and I came up from Tavistock,
Summoned to camp
(Over the green grass, soft to our lowcut shoes, and the bluebelled meadows damp),
Alerted, though they did not say anything,
Stopped in the square, called back, and it came to me as we sped
Over the cool grass, with the cool trees moving overhead,
It was a year ago, a New England spring
When last they did this thing,
And seeing the peaceful woods and hearing the happy birds, I said

When is the time to come
When we too shall stand still,
At the breeze's will,
Unchanged, and home?

"Romanian Trial"

We read in your issue of November 1, Mr. P. Riposanu's letter addressed to the Romanian Premier, Dr. Petru Groza, as well as your comments thereupon.

On November 4 we were rather surprised to note that you deemed the statements of Mr. Riposanu, who, incidentally, has never been, to public knowledge, secretary of the Romanian National Assembly, valid enough to merit an editorial on your part.

While it is the custom of our legation not to interfere in the political discussion of Romanians residing in this country, this matter concerns one of the former members of our staff, who was recently asked to resign, and we would like to offer the following comments for your information and for that of your readers:

1. Mr. P. Riposanu, in spite of his spectacular declarations, is not a political refugee. A few weeks ago, after handing in his resignation, he was permitted to leave Romania, officially and openly, as can be easily confirmed by examining his passport and noting the date of his exit visa. Thus, his leaving Romania contains no element of heroism. He was granted permission to return to the United States to settle his private affairs—house, personal effects and debts.

2. His resignation was requested for several reasons, not the least important among them being several financial indelicacies on his part. There is no truth, whatsoever, in his statement that he was asked to join the Communist Party. This was not requested of him a year ago, when he was first sent here by this same government, nor was it requested of him on his recent visit to Romania. As a matter of fact, there are a few of Romania's diplomats, as it happens, who are members of the Communist Party, most of them being affiliated with other parties or having no political affiliation at all.

3. To comment on the essence of Mr. Riposanu's assertions, we are astonished to note that despite his protestations of friendship and concern for Mr. Maniu, he adds still another accusation against him at this critical moment in Mr. Maniu's career, by pointing out that not only was Mr. Maniu not in jail during the dictatorial regime of Antonescu but he was so influential under that regime that he was in a position to save others from jail. It is hardly a mark of devotion and loyalty on the part of Mr. Riposanu to add to Mr. Maniu's burden at this time.

Editor's note: The proper title of Mr. Riposanu when he was in office in Romania was Secretary General of the Office of the Prime Minister.

"Tools Of Foreign Policy"

Bravo for your October 29 editorial, "Tools of Foreign Policy." As I see it, the last two points are really one: inform the people.

There always lurks the danger that opponents of a Government project can block action by first misinforming the public and then by piously sighing, "The people won't support it." One is reminded of this when one hears, as I heard recently, a person ask, "Why should we give Europe our meat and bread? We work and sweat. They just sit back on their haunches—lazy." I, for one, think this demonstrates shocking ignorance.

Ignorance is the commonest public enemy of democracy, and since dictators understand this fact they first abolish freedom of information, even before taking the freedom of influential individuals.

To this end, my guess is that informing community, business, professional, and industrial leaders is not enough without (1) providing and repeating, more effective material for press, radio and cinema and (2) direct reports to the people by radio. Without further steps along these lines, the Tabers can prevail. There are quite a few of them, and they speak with loud voices.

Can it be that Secretary Marshall, long accustomed to military hierarchy, regards reports to the people as a wasteful explanatory procedure akin to explaining all Army drives in detail to every private? Of course, we all appreciate the fact that his time is limited and he must be doing the work of several good men, but someone must find a way to make such reports. The people still seem unconvinced, and, as you say, "it cannot be said that we have a truly national foreign policy until the people understand and support it."

"Ignorance Of History"

A few days ago I wrote to The Washington Post complimenting it upon the editorial, "Ignorance Of History." A curious error crept in due to not carefully checking my dictation as transcribed.

In discussing with my secretary the importance of English history I spoke of the intensity of the feeling of the British and the execution of Charles I when Cromwell came to power. That has always been very interesting because of the fact, which I mentioned to my secretary, that a direct lineal ancestor of Mrs. Fries was one of the judges who voted the execution of Charles I. Then I dictated my letter and probably dictated it rather rapidly. The result was the mixing of Charles I and King John, so that Charles I was credited with signing the Magna Carta more than 400 years before he was executed upon Cromwell's coming to power.

After I wrote the letter to the editor I immediately dictated an article for the bulletin, Friends of the Public Schools, on the same subject and King John was put in the right place.

Plane Speeds

Mr. Drew Pearson, in his column November 2, represents "high officers" of the Air Force as being incredibly ignorant from an engineering point of view. As a member of the aeronautical engineering fraternity, I resent this implication.

In the first place, it should be pointed out that to the engineer and combat pilot, the true measure of the speed potential of a high performance aircraft is not necessarily portrayed by the results of a speed run conducted according to an antiquated set of international rules. The ambient air temperature has a marked effect upon the true airspeed possible at any given time. Therefore, when two high performance aircraft are being compared to obtain an indication of their respective speed capabilities, it should be assumed that the aircraft are being operated in air of a given temperature.

A short time ago the speed record was returned to this country after many years, when a P-80R broke the British record of 616 m.p.h., by traveling at an average speed of 623 m.p.h. This feat was fine from a publicity point of view, but to the engineer, a design comparison of the P-80R and Meteor was the noteworthy item, not the record itself, since in terms of the speed of sound the P-80R did not travel as fast as the Meteor. The Douglas D-558 broke the P-80R record of 623.8 m.p.h. by traveling at an average speed of 650.6 m.p.h.

Mr. Pearson states that Air Force officers point out that D-558 is one of five research airplanes operated by the Air Force and the Navy, and that their performance was supposed to be highly classified. He further points out that "the Air Force lived up to this secrecy, but the Navy didn't."

I presume the Air Force planes referred to by Mr. Pearson are the Bell XS-1 craft. Much information has been released on the XS-1, including the fact that its was "designed to go 1700 m.p.h." A few days ago press releases indicated that the XS-1 had achieved over 90 per cent of the speed of sound. I submit that if the Navy broke secrecy rules by establishing a record at 82.8 per cent of the speed of sound, the Air Force really jumped the traces by indicating the XS-1 has already traveled at over 90 per cent.

Lawyers Guild Stand

THE WASHINGTON POST is to be commended for warning the public that the effect of the current activities of the Un-American Activities Committee "is to intimidate and coerce the industry into an even more rigid acceptance of Mr. Thomas' concepts of Americanism . . ." and that those who produce pictures in Hollywood should be left free to think as they please.

The recent widespread awakening to the dangers inherent in the extraordinary powers exercised by the Thomas Committee is heartening in these days when civil rights are so much under attack. The National Lawyers Guild is in accord with those who are gravely concerned with the assumption of power by this committee "to dictate what Americans shall think."

In these circumstances it seems proper to suggest that Mary Spargo's reporting of the Hollywood hearings is subject to criticism. Each day when she referred to Robert W. Kenny, one of the counsel for the "unfriendly witnesses," she found it necessary to identify him as president of the National Lawyers Guild, and she then identified the guild, in turn, by the words "cited by former Attorney General Biddle as a Communist front."

The National Lawyers Guild is content to stand on its record of service to the legal profession and the Nation. The caliber of the individual members of the guild and their standing in their profession are such that they need not fear injury to their reputation by any name-calling such as this. They do, however, deplore such practices whether by an Attorney General or a congressional committee.

The tedious and doggedly insistent way Miss Spargo has used these phrases of identification would be humorous, were it not for the fact that such writing is indicative of the same approach as that used by Mr. Thomas and his committee. It adds strength to the attempts of that committee to resolve all problems by the calling of names and the attachment of labels.

For these reasons and for the sake of variety and more well-rounded reporting, we suggest that in the future, when Miss Spargo feels it necessary to use words of description in referring to the guild, she uses identifications such as the following:

"The National Lawyers Guild characterized by Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, as an organization that had 'become effectual in crystallizing legal idealism into a working force for the betterment of humanity.'"; or

"The National Lawyers Guild, which Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, congratulated 'upon the progressive position it has continually assumed on questions of vital public moment'"; or

"The National Lawyers Guild, of which Senator James E. Murray said that it 'had won a high reputation in America because of its work in protecting and strengthening democratic processes.'"

It may be that even Mr. Biddle would be more hesitant today to apply such name-calling. After all, his own nomination as United States representative to the Social and Economic Council of the United Nations was blocked by members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations because he was considered "an advanced New Dealer." New York Times, July 13, 1947.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Patriot And Betrayer

PRAGUE.—In Vienna, in the midst of Soviet occupation armies, the Austrian political leaders swear to fight for their independence to the last. But here in Prague, which the Soviets can only occupy by a naked act of war, the non-Communists gloomily ask, "What can we do?" or plead for impractical rescue parties from the west. Such are the commonest reactions to the increasing Communist terror in Czechoslovakia. Consequently the eventual death of Czech freedom seems grimly probable.

Nonetheless, although the existence of the terror is quite tangible, there is still freedom in Czechoslovakia. The press is uncontrolled, and two or three brave editors still dare to speak out. The political parties still operate without hindrance, except for the threat of such attacks as the arrest of the Slovak Democrats. And since this is the only country in Europe using the American system of mechanically secret balloting, next spring's elections, if they are held at all, will be excessively hard to fix.

Why then must freedom die? It need not, is the answer. It probably will for three reasons. First, the Communists have here their strongest genuine mass base in Europe—about 40 per cent of the voters—because they have been permitted to take credit for the Czech program of nationalization, planning and social welfare, which has greatly benefited the average man.

Second, through their Socialist stooge, Dr. Fierlinger, they have thus far commanded the Socialist parliamentary vote. This gives them 51 per cent majority in the Chamber. And, third, the other parties are hopelessly divided, and a large proportion of their leaders are visibly congealed with fear. This is a situation made to order for the Communists, who have all the instruments of governmental power, like the police, already in their hands.

TWO DANGERS loom ahead of them, however. The most popular, indeed the most loved, man in Czechoslovakia is President Benes. His labors for his country have worn him out. Because he recently suffered from an impediment in his speech, it is generally supposed that he has had a stroke. Nevertheless, he is one man whose courage has not failed.

His views may be gauged from a story of a recent episode between him and Dr. Fierlinger. After the Marshall Plan episode, word came from Moscow that the Socialists and Communists must merge. Fierlinger promptly issued a declaration of Socialist solidarity with the Communists. He then tried to see Benes. At first he was forbidden access to the ill old man. But he insisted. Benes received him, and told him in unvarnished words that he could no longer be regarded as a loyal Czech. Benes added that those who were seeking to destroy Czech freedom had best watch their step. Fierlinger blustered that the mass of the people would have their way, by force if necessary, and retired in some confusion.

This episode is now widely known in the inner circle of Czech politics. It will be angrily denied, of course, but it is certainly authentic. It can only mean that Benes will fight the incipient dictatorship, if his health lasts.

BESIDES HIS vast prestige, Benes has the powers of the presidency and the radio at his command. Second, Fierlinger's own position with the Socialists is being challenged. It well might be, in view of his record. He was Czech Ambassador to Moscow before the war. He was expelled from the Soviet capital to please the obscene Von Ribbentrop. Yet he gladly returned as the emissary of the Czech government in exile.

Even in 1944, his national loyalty was already dubious. At that time, warned by the Czech military mission, Benes tried to recall him to London, ostensibly for consultation. Even then Fierlinger felt secure enough to reply with impudence that he was too busy and too unwell. Later, the first post-war Czech government was formed at a conference in the Soviet Union with the Czech Communists. It was Fierlinger who took the lead in persuading and intimidating his colleagues into yielding to the Communists many key posts.

This short, sharp-looking man with shifty eyes and a talent for survival is not popular with the liberty-loving rank and file of Socialists. He has at least been challenged on the Communist issue by another Socialist leader, Majer. He may be displaced at the forthcoming Socialist Congress. If Fierlinger is defeated, if Benes asserts his influence, and if the other non-Communist parties unite in self-defense, there may yet be hope for the liberties of this republic. But three "ifs," of which two are decidedly uncertain, add up to cruel odds.

Oregon Politics

By Richard L. Neuberger

Clear Field For Morse

PORTLAND, OREG.—The strongest kind of political pressure on Senator Wayne L. Morse is suddenly gone. In its place is a void in Morse's home State which makes him a certainty for reelection in 1950 despite his frequent revolts against the regular Republican leadership on Capitol Hill.

One of the most incredible tragedies in American political history brought about this startling change. Never before did the three top-ranking public officials of a State die in one fleeting instant, as occurred in the impact of a light airplane against a timbered Oregon plateau last week.

The flight, risked in stormy weather on a dark night, killed Gov. Earl W. Snell, Secretary of State Robert Farrell, jr., and Marshall E. Cornett, president of the Oregon Senate.

GOP conservatives planned to pit Snell against Morse in the 1950 primaries. Should Snell for some reason not have chosen to undertake the race, Farrell and Cornett were potentially available for the assignment. All three were Republican stalwarts, opposed by belief and temperament to Morse's insurgency.

NOW THAT the three of them are dead, and the GOP regulars in Oregon have no candidate available who could force Morse to spend 2 cents in an election campaign, the heat is off the leader of the Senate mavericks. Morse can denounce Carroll Reese, embarrass Bob Taft and question Republican doctrine generally—and yet still be sure of at least six more senatorial years after 1950, Deo volente.

The possibility of opposition from Governor Snell alarmed Morse and his friends. Snell was the most successful politician in Oregon's annals. He had never lost a race. In 1942 and again in 1946 he was elected Governor by the most decisive margins in the history of the State. His '42 victory over the Democratic nominee was 220,188 to 62,561. This was without precedent even in a State as overwhelmingly Republican as Oregon.

GOP newspapers, irked with Morse's party bolts, often mentioned 1950, when Governor Snell might be the avenger of this irregularity. Particularly in a Republican primary, Snell was felt to be invincible. He had a machine behind him based on the State liquor stores, State police and similar agencies. In addition, the personal friendliness of an automobile dealer was felt more likely to be successful than the intellectual approach of a law school dean.

Nor were the Republican overlords of Oregon pleased with Morse's frequent desertions of the party on major issues such as tax reduction and the Taft-Hartley bill. Despite its reputation for revolt, Oregon is an extremely conservative State. Along with Maine and Vermont, it is one of three States which did not elect a Democratic United States Senator while Roosevelt occupied the White House. Out of 90 State legislators in Oregon, 85 are Republicans—a greater proportion than in any other State, including even Maine and Vermont.

But now Oregon's Republicans are stuck with Morse. They cannot get rid of him, and they know it. They admitted as much when the grim news of the airplane disaster first came out of the solitudes of the Fremont National Forest. By a curious note of fate without parallel, Morse is his own political master today as much as any man in House or Senate.

MANY SNOWS will have melted in the mountains and many generations of tamarack trees will have turned golden before Oregon ceases wondering about the tragedy which robbed the State of its first three public officials.

The flight involved no emergency. The three men and their pilot were merely on the way to hunt geese. The weather had been characterized by gusts of rain and a low ceiling. They left Klamath Falls Airport after 10 o'clock at night. They were bound for an unlighted wilderness landing strip where the pilot had never put in before.

The plane was a private Beechcraft belonging to Mr. Cornett, the president of the Senate. It had no two-way radio in event of peril or emergency. Its extra quota of gasoline was small. It had to cross rugged uplands which rose to an elevation of at least 6500 feet. Many crags soared to nearly 10,000 feet.

An investigator for the Portland Oregonian finally concluded that "the pilot was squeezed between ceiling and mountains, and flew into the side of a hill."

OREGON'S new Governor, plucked from four echelons down in the State government, is John H. Hall, 49-year-old Speaker of the House of Representatives. His presence in the gubernatorial chair has amazed and embarrassed the leaders of his party.

Oregon is a State with a large Methodist and Baptist population. Its views on liquor, vice, nudity and morals have a slight Anthony Comstock tinge. Indeed, officials of the GOP in Oregon have not been above making capital of Harry Truman's Kansas City connections and his fondness for bourbon and branch water. Nor did they hesitate to cite the numerous divorces in FDR's family.

Now the State has a Republican Governor whose legal practice has been characterized by the representation of night clubs, taverns, slot-machine operators and gamblers. As a legislator Mr. Hall's main effort had been directed toward repeal of an 1876 Oregon statute which gave the loser in a gambling game the right to recover in court twice the sum he had lost. Hall said repeal of the bill would "discourage welchers." It was obviously a bill for the benefit of gambling houses, and Governor Snell sent word he would veto it.

Indeed, the late Governor did veto a measure legalizing "bookies" which Mr. Hall and his confederates forced to passage on Easter Sunday with the legislative clock stopped.

IN THE few days he has occupied the gubernatorial chambers Mr. Hall has run true to form. He was administered the oath of office by his law associate, Jay Bowerman, who is chief legislative lobbyist for the pari-mutuel greyhound tracks. Hall then announced he would demand the resignation of all members of the State Liquor Commission. The new Governor had numerous unpleasant experiences before the commissioners when he sought to retain the licenses of his night-club clients who had run afoul of Oregon's strict liquor regulations.

Republican leaders are now afraid that in the year in office ahead of him, Governor Hall may thoroughly associate the GOP in Oregon with the underworld. Democrats in the State say they hope to make a regional and perhaps national issue of Mr. Hall's legal associations. There also is the likelihood that the new Governor could be the nominee to succeed himself. So many prominent Republicans are determined to seek the prize so tragically vacated that Hall could win as a minority candidate in a badly split field.

As matters stand today in Oregon, there may be a few Republicans who do not intend to run for Governor next year—but only a few.

1500 New Guard Armories Urged With Federal Help

Construction of 1500 new National Guard armories—with the Federal Government footing most of the 600 million dollar bill—was urged yesterday as necessary to expansion of the Guard.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, new chief of the National Guard Bureau, told reporters that the intensive Guard recruiting program, aimed at signing up 88,888 volunteers in nine weeks, will fall some 15 to 20 per cent short of the goal.

Cramer said, however, that no difficulty is expected in completing this year's and next year's expansion program. It would result in doubling the present 170,000 strength of the Guard.

After that, he declared, further expansion toward the ultimate goal of 681,000 officers and men will depend upon new armories and universal military training.

States Now Supply Armories

Heretofore, the States have supplied the armories and storage facilities and the Federal Government all other equipment, including uniforms and weapons. Under the Administration-backed proposal urged by Cramer, the latter would put up about two-thirds of the cost of building the additional armories.

At present there are about 1400 State-owned armories, adequate for the prewar Guard of 185,000 men and today's 170,000 but not the greatly expanded force required under present M-day plans, Cramer said. By next year, lack of armory space and not a lack of men will limit further enlargement, it was said.

Additional armories also will aid recruiting, as they will be put in communities where Guard units do not now exist, Cramer declared.

Universal Training Favored

But he declared it doubtful if National Guard strength could be expanded much beyond 400,000 on a purely volunteer basis even with these armories. He urged adoption of universal military training, which would assure that the goal of 623,000 in ground units and 58,000 in air units will be reached by 1959 or earlier.

The Air National Guard of 84 squadrons is expected to be at full strength by mid-1951, but ground forces are a different matter.

UMT would feed men into the Guard after six months of full-time training under Army instructors. It would not only provide a sure and adequate source of Guard troops, but would relieve local commanders of recruiting duties and enable them to concentrate on training, Cramer said. Also men entering the Guard would have had basic training behind them and units could concentrate on more advanced military instruction, it was said.

Cramer, who was a Connecticut legislator and commander of the Forty-third National Guard Division until he assumed his present post last month, reviewed the present state of the guard for reporters.

He declared that steps have been taken to assure that officers and enlisted men are physically and professionally fit for combat. When called into Federal service before the war and later when sent overseas, many guard divisions had to be purged of unfit personnel.

Despite the fact that "operation 88,888," the guard's current program will not attain its goal, Cramer praised the accomplishments of the drive. He said that in one month 32,000 men were enrolled—an all-time record. It has put the guard four months, or 15,000 men, ahead of its programmed strength.

Nine States and one Territory have exceeded their quotas to date, Cramer reported. The District of Columbia was thirty-first among 51 States and Territories on November 1, with 55 per cent of its objective. Virginia stood thirty-second and Maryland, forty-fourth. One State, Nevada, signed up no recruits due to a failure of the Legislature to provide funds.

The National Guard Bureau head reported that the situation as to uniforms and motor vehicles is now satisfactory. There have been complaints of the caliber of the used uniforms and trucks furnished the Guard by the Army.

Some 300,000 new uniforms now have been bought and deliveries have begun, Cramer said. All vehicles now are being overhauled before delivery.

Most of the Guard units are expected to take two-week summer training next year with small unit drills emphasized. Anything as extensive as full divisional maneuvers canot be held for four or five years, Cramer said.

Chlorine Tank Blast Kills 16; Town in Terror

Helsinki, Finland, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Smoke and chlorine gas still shrouded the west Finnish port of Raumo today, where 16 workers died yesterday when a tank of liquid chlorine exploded in a pulp mill, setting fire to the factory and clouding the town with fumes.

Forty-nine burned, blasted or gas-stricken victims were still in hospitals. Seventy others received first aid.

Medical squads wearing gas masks still were combing the smoldering ruins, seeking additional bodies.

Raumo, evacuated by half of its 10,000 inhabitants at the height of the terror, was one quarter vacant late today.

Streets were filled with hundreds of minor gas casualties and other hundreds seeking safety in the countryside.

Duke Routs Burglar

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—The 39-year-old Duke of Norfolk, premier peer of Britain and earl marshal of England, chased an agile burglar from his bedroom through armor-filled chambers and ancestral halls of Arundel Castle in Sussex last night. The burglar leaped through a window and escaped with his loot: One gold cigarette case, worth about $100.

Democratic Victories

By Ernest Lindley

Blow To Taft's Hopes

WHILE THE results of Tuesday's elections were rather mixed, they provide a net sum of good cheer for the Democrats. The Republican trend of 1946 appears to have been checked. In several important States it definitely receded. Democratic gains in the mayoralty elections in Indiana were impressive. In Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York, also, the Democrats showed increased strength.

Lindley

The Democratic sweep in Kentucky was especially striking. Kentucky is normally Democratic. It has gone Republican five times in gubernatorial elections, but only for single terms at intervals. It has gone Republican in only two national elections—1924, when the LaFollette candidacy on the Progressive ticket took away enough Democratic votes to give Coolidge Kentucky's electoral vote by a plurality, and 1928, when Hoover received a large popularity majority over Al Smith.

IF PRESIDENT Truman cannot carry Kentucky in 1948, he will not come even within shouting distance of reelection. The 1946 elections, however, suggested that the Democrats were doomed to just such a devastating defeat in 1948 as the loss of Kentucky would entail. The Kentucky returns of Tuesday just as clearly reveal a resurgence of Democratic strength. The outcome in the gubernatorial contest took on added significance from the circumstance that the Democratic candidate, Representative Earle C. Clements, had gone down the line with Mr. Truman's policies, including opposition to the Taft-Hartley Act.

Senator Robert A. Taft, perhaps unhappily for his own political advancement, said on October 15 that the outcome in Kentucky would "reflect to a large degree which party will elect a President in 1948."

Although all but a few contests this fall were local and were fought on local issues, their net result was in harmony with President Truman's recovery of popularity, as shown by public opinion polls during 1947. His popularity rebounded almost immediately after the 1946 election. But there is little doubt that it was increased and fortified by the Republican record in Congress. When they were no longer mere critics of the Administration but had to share responsibility, the Republicans unavoidably began to disillusion some who had voted for them or who had not voted in 1946 because of indifference.

THE NET results Tuesday work against the presidential candidacy of Senator Taft, unless he can improve his rating in the public opinion polls, in which he has consistently trailed Governor Dewey. Taft's standing among the professional politicians of the Republican Party is high. Many of them definitely dislike Dewey. But they are not convinced that Taft would have as good a chance as Dewey of defeating Truman. If he cannot improve his showing in the public opinion polls, Taft will need rather definite signs by June, 1948, when the convention meets, that a Republican landslide like that of 1920 is forming.

While indications that the presidential election in 1948 might be close favor Dewey up to a point, they could reach the point where they would block his way also. If the public opinion polls give Truman an advantage or point to a hard race, the Republican convention might well turn elsewhere, possibly to General Eisenhower, if his showings in popular opinion sampling are still as high as they have been in recent months.

It was the Democratic rebound in the elections of 1867 which made the Republicans turn to General Grant. Had they felt as confident of victory as they had after their sweep in 1866, they might have nominated a Republican politician for the Presidency in 1868. The Democratic gains Tuesday were not sharp enough to start a stampede away from the orthodox Republican candidates for the presidential nomination. But they were a warning that 1948 may not be another 1920.

Mississippi's New Senator May Be On D. C. Committee

By The Associated Press

When Mississippi's newly elected Senator, Democrat John Stennis, takes up his duties one of his committee assignments probably will be to the District of Columbia Committee, a Senate committee official said yesterday.

There are two vacancies open for the Democrats, one on the District Committee, the other one the Public Works Committee. These two had been reserved for the late Senator Bilbo before the Senate refused him his seat last January.

Les Biffle, director of the minority Policy Committee of the Senate, told a reporter it is likely Stennis will draw the District Committee assignment but since he is a new man might not be given the more important Public Works Committee job.

D. C. Physicians Attend Chicago Medical Meeting

The Medical Society of the District of Columbia will be represented at the conference of State and Medical Association Secretarie sand Editors today and tomorrow in Chicago.

Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, past president of the society, will address the conference this morning on "Effective Scientific Programs," followed by a talk by Dr. G. Halsey Hunt, chief of the Hospital Division of the United States Public Health Service, on "Survey of Group Practice."

Other medical society members present are Dr. Wallace M. Yater, journal editor; Theodore Wiprud, executive director, and J. Richard Connelly, assistant secretary.

Argentine Prices

A Communication

I have read your editorial of October 31 entitled "Peron's Profiteering" in which you launch a very strong attack against the Argentine government mainly because of the difference between the prices at which our government sells grain to the European countries and the prices it pays to the farmers.

For your information, I want to point out the following facts:

1. There has always been a difference between the price at which the Argentine production of grain was sold abroad and the prices the farmer actually received. In years past, some foreign concerns and some private corporations controlled completely the Argentine grain market. They used to pay very scanty prices to the farmers for their grain which they later sold abroad at a tremendous profit. Of course, the difference in prices represented money that was never spent in Argentina for the benefit of the country. It can be truly said that the Argentine grain market was in the hands of a few individuals who used such control to the advancement of their personal interests, with complete disregard for our country and our people.

2. I am sure that your interest in the Argentine farmers is just because you wish their well being, not because you want to have an excuse to attack our government, so in order to give you some comfort I wish to point out the fact that the Argentine farmer enjoys a prosperity he never had before. Their bank deposits are the highest ever recorded in Argentina. Our agricultural worker gets now a much better salary than he used to earn in former years. The Argentine Congress has enacted a law called "Estatuto del Peon," a social law which benefits the people who work in agriculture, extending to them such benefits as vacations with pay, free medical assistance, minimum wages and social security, which were denied to them in the past.

Even the worst foes of the present administration can't deny the tremendous work accomplished by the Argentine government in improving the condition, both material and moral, of the working classes.

3. The Argentine government uses the money thus obtained to expand Argentine industry. Argentina has reached a stage of development where it can no longer resign herself to remain indefinitely an agricultural country. It is a well known fact that nations are great only when they have attained a substantial development of their industry. The case of this country proves conclusively that point. The United States began to be one of the great nations of the world some decades ago, because industry was encouraged, and it is industry, not agriculture, that has made the United States the great power it is today.

I would like to ask you what is the reason why Argentina should not try to build up its industry as United States did in the past.

Don't forget, Mr. Editor, that in the short period of one year and a half, the Argentine government has bought up all the country's transportation and the telephones. It has increased the tonnage of our merchant fleet up to one million and a half tons, so it is now the third merchant fleet of the world. One thousand million pesos have been destined to improve the public health in the country which had been completely neglected in the past. The Argentine government has also paid up all the external debt of Argentina, which formerly obliged us to pay about two million pesos a day. From being a debtor Argentina has become a creditor nation for more than eight thousand million pesos.

We realize fully that the American spirit is contrary to the intervention of a government in the system of free enterprise, but you have to understand that ours is a temporary policy in order to solve an Argentine problem, which otherwise could not be worked out satisfactorily.

OSCAR IVANISSEVICH,
Argentine Ambassador.

Birth Control Aid For Girls Demanded

Swindon, England, Nov. 6, (UP).—Swindon's health officer today urged the town's clubwomen to slash the illegitimate birth rate by teaching girls "the art of avoiding pregnancy."

Dr. T. Ross reminded a conference of the women's organization that Swindon Hospital has insufficient beds to care for unwed mothers.

Metropolitan Opera Sets Record Attendance

New York, Nov. 6, (AP).—A record attendance at Metropolitan Opera performances both in New York and on tour boosted receipts to the highest in history in the year ended May 31, the Metropolitan Opera Association reported today.

"Attendance in New York was almost at the saturation point, with the house having been approximately 97 per cent sold out for the New York season," said Charles M. Spofford, president.

'Carny' Picture Is Fascinating

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL'S "NIGHTMARE ALLEY" is pretty raw beef. While I can imagine that Aunt Hattie from Dubuque will find it distasteful, I found it fascinating. Most of the time my eyes were on stalks.

The acting is fine. You can even call it acting. Tyrone Power bites into as unpleasant a character as you can imagine and makes him credible. Joan Blondell, Ian Keith and Helen Walker convey some memorable scenes.

There is nothing admirable in the ordinary movie sense about any of the characters those four portray. Power is a scheming heel, good-looking as Power inherently must be, but using his looks and his charm purely as a selfish device. He's a carnival barker who grew up in an orphan asylum. He likes carny life because he senses in it a way to get ahead.

He uses the aging blonde mindreader for whom he works (Miss Blondell) to learn the vocal code inflections that will make a good mindreading act. He toys with a strong man's pretty assistant, and when Miss Blondell and the strong man force him to marry the girl he unwillingly complies. Being resourceful, he puts his wife to good use as his assistant. He comes across a lady psychiatrist who's as much of a heel as he and together they plot fraudulent spiritualism.

The psychiatrist does him one better and, when their scheme collapses, turns the tables on him with neat dispatch. He winds up a "geek," the lowest type carnival employe, a down-and-outer who bites the heads off live chickens so long as the management supplies him with a place to sleep and all the liquor he can drink. While the ending (his wife returns to comfort him) may be viewed as the Redemption of True Love in movie phraseology, you don't need much imagination to know that the guy's done for.

This grim story is told with exceptional movie honesty. You couldn't expect to find on film some of the scenes described in William Lindsay Gresham's best-selling novel, but they're pretty clearly suggested. The "spirit" he conjures for the benefit of a wealthy man who has grieved her death for 30 years is more of a lady than Gresham portrayed, but that's beside the point of the story.

The point is that these are pathetic, hopeless people. Zeena, the mind reader, is a mass of superstition. Her husband, superbly played by Ian Keith, is a wreck of a man who can't exist without a drink. (Our "geek" gives him a drink, little realizing that it is wood alcohol, a fact that becomes one of the causes of his mental breakdown.)

The beautiful psychiatrist rises to a horrible cruelty of her own, which Miss Walker makes one of the finest scenes in the film. And the bitterness at people in general doesn't stop with the characters. The general public which patronizes carnies and mental doctors alike is shown to be even worse than Barnum's oft-quoted description.

"NIGHTMARE ALLEY." Twentieth Century-Fox release produced by George Jessel. Screenplay by Jules Furthman from the novel by William Lindsay Gresham. Directed by Edmund Goulding. At the Capitol.

The paradoxical situation about such a frankly grim set of characters is that to the habitual moviegoer they come like a breath of fresh air compared with the wishy-washy good-hearted souls one is accustomed to watch on the screen. These ruthless people with twisted brains are engrossing to watch.

The general treatment, to be sure, is considerably less biting than it would have been had the story been made, say, by some of the European directors or our own John Ford or Fritz Lang. Director Edmund Goulding has steered something of a middle course in picturing the story, but he has not veered off to the sentimental as far as one might expect.

As I say, I can imagine a lot of people will stay away from "Nightmare Alley" in droves after such an outline as this. But they'll be missing some good make-believe and a couple of memorable characters.

The Capitol's stage show is peopled with pleasanter folk. For jokes there's Johnny Morgan; for warmth there are the DeCastro Sisters; for taps there are the Mayo Brothers, and for easy motion there are the Four Elgins.

BACK AGAIN: Maureen O'Hara, Rex Harrison's lady of "The Foxes of Harrow," back on F street for a run at the Columbia

Time Hasn't Smoothed Out Adverse Saga

Except for a couple of nicks in the sound track, the years haven't altered "Anthony Adverse" a bit. He turned up again at Warners' Warner yesterday and went through every single one of his adventures in the same breathless somewhat mock-heroic fashion as before.

Olivia de Havilland

As you may recall, Anthony, like all foundlings since Tom Jones, has a great many unlikely and non sequitur adventures. In fact, Tom spent a fairly unified day in the country compared to the paces Fredric March gets put through in the movie version of Hervey Allen's 2-pound novel. There's no use denying that the movie has everything.

The trouble is that there is too much of it, and that dramatic limitations imposed some arbitrary selections on Sheridan Gibney, who did the script. As a consequence an audience gets mostly effects without causes and is forced to take what delight it can from random sequences. The picture leaps from one mountain peak of swashbuckle to another—breaking abruptly out into climaxes without sufficient preparation—like bubble gum.

Fitzpatrick Shamed

Anyway, the scenery is magnificent, Director Mervyn Le Roy has nice eye for pictorial compositions and Anthony's itinerary shames Fitzpatrick. Although colossal scenes get fairly routine in this picture after awhile, the film has a vigor and a rather incredible belief in itself that make some scenes stick in your memory—Rains and Heyward dueling in a Swiss inn; the boy Anthony meeting his unknown grandfather for the first time; the sweat and beat of the slave-trading sequences; the coach crashing down the Alps; Anthony's realization that his wife has negotiated a pact with Napoleon.

It may be interesting to note, at this late date, that Anthony is a businessman first, last and always and is willing to engage in practically any occupation to turn a guinea. Usually his conscience assails him in the form of fever, or something equally unstable, but his Dun & Bradstreet instinct carries him on triumphantly.

Fredric March weathers all these happenings with his head up, but tends to overstress rather consistently and his performance is somewhat in accordance with the lineage of his character.

Claude Rains chews up several feet of film expertly and shows himself the finest costume villain the screen has produced. Edmund Gwenn struggles through a sea of sentimentality as the grandfather. Olivia de Havilland is beautiful if improbable and Akim Tamiroff's jaunty, hedonistic Cuban is a delight.

Although its own weight bears the film down, it moves swiftly and impressively, if disjointedly, and its much ado is about a little something anyway.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Hughes 'Invites' Senate Critics on Plane Ride

By Drew Pearson

Howard Hughes has invited the same Senators who criticized his Government contract to build his huge flying boat to ride on it during its first major test. So far none has accepted . . . Actor Adolphe Menjou may soon repeat in court his scene before the House Un-American Activities Committee. The suave screen star is legally protected from libel for his statements at the committee hearing, but he made the mistake of repeating his charges at Romanoff's, a Hollywood restaurant. Two lawsuits now are being prepared against him.

Hughes

State Department Gestapo

The White House will ask Congress to pass another unification bill next session if the President's blustering military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, has his way. This time it is a merger of the National Guard with the Army Reserve. Vaughan is boldly pushing the merger backstage.

The State Department has given Francis Russell, director of public affairs, the job of selling the American public on the European recovery plan. All other governmental departments have been instructed bluntly to clear with Russell before handing out information on the plan.

Message With Food

Here is the message to hungry Europeans to be attached to the food aboard the Friendship Train:

"All races and creeds make up the vast melting pot of America, and in a democratic and christian spirit of good will toward men, we, the American people, have worked together to bring this food to your doorsteps, hoping that it will tide you over until your own fields are again rich and abundant with crops.

"This gift is sent you by (name and address of donor)."

This message, translated into French and Italian, and printed alongside the American flag, is on all friendship train labels.

Note—The food is being distributed in France and Italy by the joint American relief agencies functioning together. They include: The American Baptist Relief, American Friends Service Committee, Brethren World Service, Church World Service, National Catholic Welfare Conference, Congregational Service Committee, Mennonite Central Committee, Unitarian Service Committee, and all other American church groups conducting relief in those countries.

The Nation is indebted to Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune for exposing the exact text of the State Department's Gestapo cross-examination used in firing "disloyal" employes.

The Andrews expose shows the flimsy fabric of rumor dished out by the State Department "firing squad" to be highly reminiscent of a certain European country we recently defeated in order to make democracy live.

Truman Will Run

Quite accidentally President Truman recently let drop the fact that he would be a "little busy" in September, 1948—which, of course, is the time the presidential campaign gets hot.

Truman dropped this remark when AMVET Comdr. Edgar C. Corry, jr. invited the President to address the AMVET convention in Chicago next September.

"I'll be a little busy around that time," replied Truman, quickly adding with a smile, "however, don't take that to be an announcement."

Switching to economic problems, the President showed the AMVET commander a series of charts from which he called figures almost like a football quarterback. One chart showed how prices are following the dangerous predepression trend of 1929. Another revealed that eight billion dollars of surplus war goods had sold for only one billion dollars.

"If we are able to take such heavy losses from a war," the President commented, "we certainly should be able to spend some money to insure peace."

It didn't matter whether you called it the Marshall Plan, the Truman plan, or by some other name, Truman added, it was really peace insurance in addition to humanitarian relief.

"My organization is with you all the way," responded Corry. "We'd even be for a return to consumer price controls and rationing if that were necessary and possible. But you'd never get the approval of Congress."

The President indicated that the legislative program he would send to Congress would not call for consumer price controls or rationing, but would be sufficiently broad to answer current needs.

Crime Rates Held Deserved by Cities

Shaw Says County Jails Constitute Great Problem of Correction in U. S.

Every community has the crime and juvenile delinquency rate it deserves, the Junior Board of Commerce was told yesterday.

The speaker was G. Howland Shaw, former Under-secretary of State, now chairman of the continuing committee of the Attorney General's Conference on Juvenile Delinquency. He also is head of the Bureau of Rehabilitation, a Community Chest agency.

Shaw, speaking before the Board's luncheon meeting, urged that the delinquency problem be attacked "at the grass roots."

As a beginning, he suggested that each community look over its county jail—"and get the kids out of them." The jails are the "great scandal of correction in the United States," he added.

Several critical shafts were loosed at Washington in Shaw's remarks.

"Our correction setup is inadequate and has been for years." He said when he reported on the District's correction inadequacies several years ago there had been six previous reports on the situation and three have been made since.

"Voting isn't enough," he declared. "We've got to find more ways to participate in our democratic way of life."

Cattle Get Holiday

Fifty head of prime beef cattle were roaming Fairfax County yesterday after a truck taking them to market overturned on Route 211, west of Kamp Washington.

Police said the driver, Donald Taliferro of Mount Solon, Va., fell asleep at the wheel. Although Taliferro was uninjured, two steers were killed, police said.

Teen-Agers Tried for Murder

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FACING THE COURT—In Detroit, Edward Small (left), 17, and his chum, William Hungerford, 16, went on trial yesterday for the brutal slaying of Edward's father, whose body—stabbed a score of times and with the skull crushed—was found in the Rouge River last June. The youths are being tried without a jury before Recorder Judge John J. Maher

Girl is Injured When Hit by Auto

Five-year-old Dolores Thomas, 495 L st. sw., was knocked unconscious yesterday after she apparently ran out into the street and was struck by an automobile at 4th and L sts. sw.

The driver, Alfred Ford, 55, 1257-a Carrollburg pl. sw., told police he did not see the child and stopped the car after realizing he had hit her. Police filed no charges.

Dolores, taken to Children's Hospital with head injuries, was reported in fair condition last night.

Two Mexican Army Jumpers Add to Lead in Horse Show

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Two faultless jumpers, Chihuahua and Malinche, ridden by Captains Alberto Valdes and Ruben Uriza, toured the nine barrier Madison Square Garden course in pairs today without nicking a piece of timber to give the Mexican army team a commanding lead in the three-event competition for the international low score competition challenge trophy in the national horse show.

The Mexicans, who had taken yesterday's opening event, added to their advantage by the perfect performance as they now have only 12 points entered against their record to 19 for the second-place Irish army. The Canadian army is third with 45¾ points and the United States trails badly with 75¾. The final event of the competition will be staged tomorrow afternoon.

Portmaker, a 7-year-old brown gelding owned by Dr. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay of Washington, D. C., and ridden by Earl Phelps, added another first place in the Open Hunter class to become a standout favorite to succeed himself as show champion.

Although there are 13 events to be counted in the Hunter championship, Portmaker ha staken first prize in his only two starts for a total of 10 points.

Mrs. Hank Greenberg's My Bill and the Seven Star Stables' Bob-O-Link earned first prizes in the two events for young green hunters held during the afternoon competition. Mrs. Greenberg rode My Bill to victory in the class for middleweights or heavyweights while Bob-O-Link scored in the lightweight division.

The Dodge Stables of Rochester, Mich., won with its Blue Hawaii in the event for five-gaited stallions or geldings and scored with a pair of small harness ponies, Glenavon Filmstar and Alasa Lady.

Fourth place in the class for three-gaited saddle mares went to Mighty Aton, b. m., owned by Miss Jean McLean of Portsmouth, Va.

Results in the thoroughbred hunter class—(middle weight and heavyweight)—Won by Portmaker, br. g., owned by Alvin I. Kay of Washington, D. C.; second, Golden Hills, ch. g., owned by J. A. Hale of Greenwich, Conn.; third, Erin Beau, br. g., owned by Springsbury Farm of Berryville, Va.; fourth, Prompt Payment, br. g., owned by Mrs. John T. Maloney of Warrenton, Va.

Three-gaited saddle horses (Junior Challenge Trophy)—Won by Glen-Maris, ch. m., owned by the Ward Acres Farm of New Rochelle, N. Y.; second, Feudist Knight, ch. g., owned by Miss Jean McLean of Portsmouth, Va.; third, Chesterfield Fox, ch. g., owned by Bruce Seabright of Bridgeport, Ohio; fourth, The Primadonna, ch. m., owned by Mrs. Fred M. Link of Westwood, N. J.

Reds Reject U. S. Proposal On Partition of Palestine

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 6 (U.P.).—The United States offered today a compromise plan for carrying out the partition of Palestine but Russia immediately rejected it.

A private meeting of four United Nations delegations who have proposed ways of splitting Palestine into Jewish and Arab states broke up with a report of "no progress."

The Soviet representative turned down an American plan which went part way toward meeting Russia's insistence on Security Council control of Palestine until the two new states receive full independence.

United States Delegate Herschel Johnson altered his original plan calling for a three-man commission of the U. N. General Assembly to oversee partition. He proposed today that the assembly commission report to the Security Council, where the big power veto prevails.

Johnson's compdomise provided that the assembly-elected commission should take orders from the Security Council if the situation develops into a threat to international peace and security.

Soviet Delegate Semen Tsarapkin answered Johnson by restating the Soviet view that the Security Council should have complete authority over Palestine affairs until the two independent states come into being. Russia also had proposed that the British mandate end January 1, 1948, because it had been "a failure."

The other two delegations represented were Canada and Guatemala.

Europe's Acceptance of Red Rule Forced, Churchman Says

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).— Europe will accept communism only by force, Dr. Stewart W. Herman, jr., told 450 delegates of the Council of Churches and Christian Education of Maryland and Delaware today.

Dr. Herman spoke at a luncheon following dedication of the council's new headquarters here. He recently returned from a tour of Germany as representative of the World Council of Churches.

He said Christian churches set a "Marshall Plan" before the State Department did by contributing 40 million dollars in material aid for the reconstruction of Europe. As for the State Department's Marshall Plan, Dr. Herman called it only a partial solution of Europe's problem which also needs rebuilding of churches.

The Maryland-Delaware Council includes 1500 Protestant churches in the two States. Its new headquarters is a rebuilt mansion erected in 1853.

Officers elected by the council were: The Rev. Dr. John L. Deaton of Baltimore, president; the Rev. Paul M. Robinson of Hagerstown, the Rev. H. P. Fox of Wilmington, the Rev. John Jackson Brown of Salisbury, the Rev. Asbury Smith of Baltimore, Mrs. Bruce H. McDonald, and Miss Lillian E. Black, vice presidents; Henry W. Schultheis of Baltimore, secretary, and John H. Hessey of Baltimore, treasurer.

Virginia Baptists Elect Col. Camden

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Col. Aubrey H. Camden, president of Hargrave Military Academy, Chatham, was elected president of the Baptist General Association of Virginia at the afternoon session of the 124th annual meeting here today. He succeeds Dr. E. V. Peyton, of Rhoadsville.

Dr. E. D. Poe, of Roanoke, was named first vice president, and the Rev. Carl Collins of Richmond was chosen second vice president.

Officers reelected for the ensuing year include: the Rev. Kenneth E. Burke, of Norfolk, clerk; James R. Bryant, of Richmond, executive secretary; Frank T. Crump, of Richmond, treasurer, and Jesse F. Wood of Richmond, auditor.

Reapointed for the year were: Dr. Thomas C. Allen, of Richmond, assistant clerk, and the Rev. E. J. Wright, Richmond, statistical assistant.

Political Rally Features Drive For GW Officers

Pre-election campaigning for class officers at George Washington University reached a climax last night with a political rally in Lisner Auditorium.

At the rally, sponsored by the election committee of the university, candidates were introduced and senior class presidential candidates Charles J. Baker and Chester J. Byrns outlined their platforms. Main election interest centers around the senior class presidency.

Elections for all class candidates will be held today and tomorrow.

Suicide Verdict Found in Death Of Arizona Visitor

A certificate of suicide in the shooting of Michael E. Kritos, 50, of Tucson, Ariz., was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Kritos, said by police to have lost $50,000 in gambling in the past two years, died in Gallinger Hospital Tuesday night.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

D. C. Banks 80% Liquid, Study Shows

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington's 19 banks continue to show an excellent liquid position currently.

Ratio of liquid assets to total deposits was 80 per cent as of October 6, according to a study of conditions of statement. That means the banks here have 80 cents in cash or Government bonds behind every dollar on deposit.

Of course, the banks would prefer to have more than 20 per cent of their funds out working in more lucrative investments than low-interest Government securities. But the strong liquid position indicates that the funds are available to back large-scale business expansion here.

As of October 6, local banks had a combined investment of $534,003,000 in Government securities. Cash on hand totaled $21,553,000. Balances with other banks aggregated $253,449,000. Total liquid assets amounted to $809,005,000, against aggregate deposits of $1,028,485,000.

A year ago, on September 30, local banks' liquid position was even higher at 86 per cent. The dip in liquidity is accounted for largely by an increase in business loans during the 12 months.

INSTITUTE MEETS: Use of "scientific sales forecasting" was advocated yesterday at a meeting here of the Office Equipment Manufacturers Institute. Harry M. Nordberg, speaking at the Statler, stressed this means as a way of "leveling out the peaks and valleys of companies' sales" and helping management to maintain steadier employment. Nordberg, Pitney-Bowes, Inc., sales manager, was recently elected chairman of the institute's market research committee.

ODD LOTS: Sears, Roebuck Co. reported October sales of $205,979,663, up 20 per cent over same 1946 period . . . G. C. Murphy Co.'s October sales of $10,496,471 were up 21 per cent . . . New rail freight car production rose to 8394 cars last month, highest since April, 1942 . . . Ohio refinery facilities of Gulf Oil Corp. to be improved and enlarged at cost of 20 million dollars . . . Ford truck assembly lines at Highland Park and all branches have shut down briefly for model changeovers . . . Auto production this week estimated at 76,782 passenger and 22,681 trucks.

FOR STATISTICIANS: First issue of the American Statistician, a new bi-monthly magazine, appeared in an edition of 10,000. Written in popular style, the first issue includes a non-technical high-speed computing devices and an article on proposals for a well-rounded curriculum in university statistics. The publication is sponsored by the American Statistical Association, whose president is Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State. Editor of the American Statistician is Sylvia C. Weyl.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co. lists executive changes as follows: George A. Roos, executive vice president in charge of operations; Edward G. Fox, general manager; F. H. Maloney, Southern sales manager; Owen G. Young, Northern sales manager . . . Brig. Gen. H. Joseph Lawes, formerly in command of Aberdeen Ordnance Training Center, has accepted the newly created position of special assistant to president of Proctor Electric Co.

Job Plan For Career People Ready

By Jerry Kluttz

CAREER PLAN: These are the major points of the new Civil Service plan to find jobs for the 1700 jobless career people here, which was explained yesterday to the Federal Personnel Council:

Kluttz

1. Each agency covered by Civil Service will be given a quota early next week of the 1700. It will be given 20 working days to find jobs for its quota. Any agency that fails will be required to fire all of its so-called B-2s, or war service nonveterans.

2. Each agency will be able to pick and choose from the entire list to fill its quota. It may, for example, select all accountants or personnel people. It doesn't matter so long as its quota is filled.

3. The Veterans Administration and Post Office Department will be covered under the new plan. They were exempted from previous placement plans. Only FBI, Atomic Energy, and Central Intelligence will be exempted. They are all outside of Civil Service.

4. No war service veteran is to be fired except in a rare case when a career jobless veteran is qualified to fill only his job, and finally,

5. The new agency quota will include classes of employes such as statisticians, economists, accountants, auditors, and administrative people. The commission used a different quota system to find jobs for several hundred of these people.

However, agencies that didn't fill these former quotas will have the unfilled parts of their old quotas added to their new quotas. And agencies that exceeded their quotas will have the excessive number deducted from their new quotas.

NLRB: Three assistant general counsel have been appointed by General Counsel Robert N. Denham of the National Labor Relations Board. They are: William R. Consedine, Stephen M. Reynolds, and William O. Murdock.

STATE: Its officials are off base if they believe the to-be-created Civil Service loyalty review board will consider the cases of its seven employes who were fired on "security" charges. The law under which these employes were fired clearly states that they have the right of appeal only to the Civil Service Commission.

And the commission will hear the cases. It will decide only one point—if any or all the dismissed employes are eligible for jobs in any other Federal agency outside the State Department. But before Civil Service makes a decision, it's a good bet it will:

1. Require the State Department to supply it with all information it has on the seven people, and,

2. Ask the FBI to supply it with all the facts it has on the seven, and, in addition, to have the FBI make an up-to-the-minute inquiry about each of them.

Each of the fired employes will have an opportunity to give his side of the story and to answer charges against him, if any.

State officials insist that "security" and not disloyalty is involved in the dismissals. But if Civil Service happens to uncover any charge of disloyalty against any of the seven, and if the commission is convinced the charge is true—then that person will be barred from Federal employment. Also, it will refer the case to its loyalty board for an "advisory" opinion.

So, it's entirely conceivable that the appeal to Civil Service which the seven former State employes are planning to make will boomerang.

GPO: Employe groups have asked the Public Printer for a flat 15 per cent raise to become effective early next month. The request will be taken up by the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing after Congress returns.

ARMY: Secretary Kenneth Royall yesterday laid down a personnel policy for his civilian employes. Speaking at a meeting of his area personnel directors, he said, in part:

"I regard sound supervisor-employe relations as the keystone of the department's personnel management program. This goal can be reached by assuring that every employe shall be treated fairly, regardless of race, color, or creed; that employes are assigned to jobs for which they are best fitted by aptitude and experience and are given opportunities for advancement; that employes are trained to do their jobs right and are rated impartially on their performance; that they are compensated equitably and are given recognition for superior service; that they are informed fully about policies and plans affecting them and their work; that they have ample opportunity to express themselves toward improving work methods and altering work conditions; that they be protected in their right to join or not to join any union or lawful, loyal group, and that individuals be accorded a full and fair hearing on any grievance."

Well said.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 6.—First clinics of the new Berkeley County health unit opened here yesterday. Dental and eye clinics for school children were conducted by Dr. Calvin Dirting and Dr. J. S. Fangmeyer. Dr. George S. Appleby was in charge of a baby and preschool conferences. Civic agencies are providing lay workers.

Give One Million to Charity

The Washington Post

DONORS—Dr. Robert S. Barrett and Mrs. Barrett of 404 Duke st., Alexandria, Va., sign away one million dollars to charity. They gave property worth that much to set up the Barrett Foundation yesterday.

A retired businessman of Alexandria, Va., and his wife yesterday gave away almost a million dollars in property—practically their entire fortune—for charitable purposes.

Dr. Robert South Barrett, Duke st., Alexandria, and Mrs. Anne Viola Tupper Barrett, 70, turned over valuable real estate holdings in Alexandria and Florida to the Barrett Foundation, which they recently chartered to distribute an estimated $30,000 annual income.

Dr. Barrett told The Washington Post he had been hoping for many years to be able to set up such a fund. He had grown up in the atmosphere of giving, he pointed out, as his mother, the late Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, had founded the Florence Crittenton Mission, of which he has been president since her death in 1925.

Referring to his family wealth, Dr. Barrett, who has previously made substantial gifts to charities and public enterprises, said "When money doesn't really belong to you, you should try to do the most good possible with it."

He said he and Mrs. Barrett had provided for his 4 children and 15 grandchildren, who are grown up, and "anyway we never believed in giving a great deal to them."

The three sons and one daughter will act as trustees of the foundation with Dr. Barrett. They are Robert Tupper Barrett of Paris, France; Clifton Walter Barrett of New York; Capt. John Paul Barker Barrett, 525 Queen st., Alexander, and Mrs. Viola Barrett Greenland, 113 S. Patrick st., Alexandria.

The trustees will select the institutions to which the foundation's income will go, and which must be operated exclusively for "religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to animals or children." So the income will be free from income taxes, the beneficiary groups must not carry on propaganda or otherwise attempt to influence legislation, as a substantial part of their activities.

At the end of 30 years, the foundation is to be dissolved and the principal to be divided equally between the National Florence Crittenton Mission and the Elks' National Foundation. Dr. Barrett is a past grand exalted ruler of the Elks, and also has been a grand master of the Masons of Virginia.

Among the real estate turned over to the foundation is the building at the southwest corner of King and Washington sts. in Alexandria, now under lease to the United Cigar-Whalen Drug Co. for 30 years at a net rental of $675,000. Another valuable property consists of four stores in the heart of St. Petersburg, Fla., retail district. Mortgages and stocks also are included.

D. C. to Divert Patients From Freedmen's

Commissioners Rule Only Those on Permit Will Have Bills Paid

The Commissioners yesterday paved the way for diverting Dismen's Hospital to other hospitals where rates are lower.

Acting on the advice of Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, they ordered that only those indigent patients who have been sent to Freedmen's by the Hospital Permit Bureau will have the District foot their bills.

The Budget Bureau raised the rate for District patients at Freedman's September 30 from $9.25 to $13.90 a day. Daily rates for tuberculosis patients were boosted from $5 20 to $10.20 at the same time. Both rates are retroactive to July 1.

"There is no obligation on the part of the District . . . to pay for any patients who go to Freedman's Hospital directly, either as emergency or nonemergency patients, before clearane through the Hospital Permit Bureau," West ruled.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said his policy would be to "exhaust District facilities" at Gallinger Hospital and other local hospitals, where District contract rates are lower, before sending city patients to Freedman's.

In emergencies, patients should be taken to the nearest hospital available, he said. But arrangements will be worked out so these cases can be shifted to Gallinger or lower-rate hospitals when the patient is well enough to be moved, he declared.

Kaiser Is High Bidder On German Foil Plant

West Coast Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser was the highest bidder for the first German reparations plant offered to American industry, Maj. Gen. Donald H. Connolly, foreign liquidation commissioner, announced yesterday.

He said Kaiser's Permanente Metals Corp., bid $203,769 for a German aluminum foil plant. The bid includes a 5 per cent down payment.

Kaiser plans to dismantle the plant and bring it to this country.

No Speech

Old Truman Home in D. C. Gets Plaque

By The Associated Press

Washington got another historic monument yesterday.

On an apartment house at 4701 Connecticut ave. a string was pulled to unveil a bronze plague that signifies:

Harry S. Truman used to live here.

Naturally your reporter was out early for such a momentous occasion.

And so was Mrs. Oscar J. Ricketts, resident manager of Mr. Truman's old homestead.

The Trumans lived there from 1941 until 1945. During this time Mr. Truman was Senator, Vice President and—for a couple of days—President.

Mrs. Ricketts said the Trumans, who lived in 209, were model tenants.

Ever any complaints about their tossing the furniture around late at night or otherwise raising Old Ned?

"Oh, my, no," said Mrs. Ricketts.

Mrs. Rube Sworzyn, who has lived in this apartment house ever since it was built 20 years ago, said this was true, all right.

"Awfully nice people," she said. "Of course, Mr. Truman did play the piano."

And then she quickly added:

"Not that we minded it."

Then Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, showed up with John Crane.

Crane, who lives down the road apiece, used to neighbor with the Trumans.

"This plaque was my idea," Crane said.

Around 50 persons had now gathered on the gront porch by the plaque, so Vaughan said:

"Shall we begin?"

There being no dissent, Vaughn and the photographers went to work. Vaughn pulled the string that withdrew the tan kimono that had been hiding the plaque. The photographers busily snapped pictures of same.

When the photographers had finished, Vaughan turned to the crowd, grinned, and said:

"Give me credit for one thing: I didn't make a speech."

It was on this joyful note that the historic meeting broke up.

Groups Ask Vote Reform In Arlington

Three Organizations Protest Dalliance In Counting of Ballots Tuesday

Reform of Arlington's election machinery was called for yesterday by the County Democratic Committee, the Arlington Better Government League, and the League of Women Voters.

Their demands followed the most drawn-out election in Arlington history in which one precinct—Clarendon No. 1—took more than 31 hours to count its 763 ballots, and Ballston precinct took 24 hours to check 2196.

Speaking for the Democratic Executive Committee, chairman Harrison Mann said that better facilities for more rapid voting and ballot counting "must be provided before another election day." He added that redistricting of precincts "will help tremendously."

Chairman Harley Williams of the Better Government League at the same time asked the Virginia General Assmbly for legislation permitting a system of non-partisan primary elections to eliminate all but two leading contenders for all County and School Board seats.

Pointing out that not one of the nine County Board candidates in Tuesday's election received a majority of the total vote, Williams said the non-partisan elimination primaries would shorten ballots and lessen voter confusion.

In a third protest on Arlington voting procedures, Mrs. Carl Marcy, president of the League of Women Voters (AFL), said conditions Tuesday reflect the need for "immediate redistricting of voting precincts and for general improvement in voting procedures."

Her group's views were contained in a letter received yesterday by John W. Jackson, secretary of the Arlington Electoral Board.

Jackson yesterday announced postponement of a special meeting of the three-man electoral board until 8 p. m., Monday, at which time the members will consider means of improving voting facilities. The meeting had originally been scheduled for last night.

Group Insurance

735 Doctors Sign for New Hospital Plan

The District Medical Society announced yesterday that 735 doctors, more than 60 per cent of its members, have enrolled for a new Group Hospitalization insurance plan which will cover doctors' fees for surgery and maternity cases.

The plan had been announced last June, subject to enrollment of more than half of the Medical Society members.

A Group Hospitalization, Inc., spokesman, said enrollment of present subscribers in the new insurance would probably begin by February or March, and the first contracts should be in operation by April 1.

The new service will cover the costs incurred by hospital patients for surgery, obstetrical services, X-ray, anesthesia, and laboratory work. Charges for the new insurance have been set at 80 cents a month for an individual, $1.75 for a husband and wife, and $2 for a family.

The present Group Hospitalization plan, for hospital room and services, costs subscribers 65 cents, $1.50 and $1.75, respectively, but these rates may be raised next year, officials say, depending on the trend of hospital costs. Present subscribers number about 330,000.

While the GH hospital insurance is now open only to Government, business or other employees in groups, Medical Society officials hope eventually to extend the service to individuals. Also being considered for the future is insurance for doctors' fees other than for surgery or maternity cases.

Driver Permit Loss in October Sets a Record

Revocation and suspensions of driver's permits or privileges reached 1094 in October, setting a new all-time high for the second straight month.

Mary A. Silver, secretary of the Board of Revocation and Restoration of operator's permits, said the September total of 1003 had been the highest previously recorded.

The October number included 490 non-resident drivers, who lost the privilege of driving in the Disrtict.

Traffic officials said the increase was due to the mounting volume of traffic.

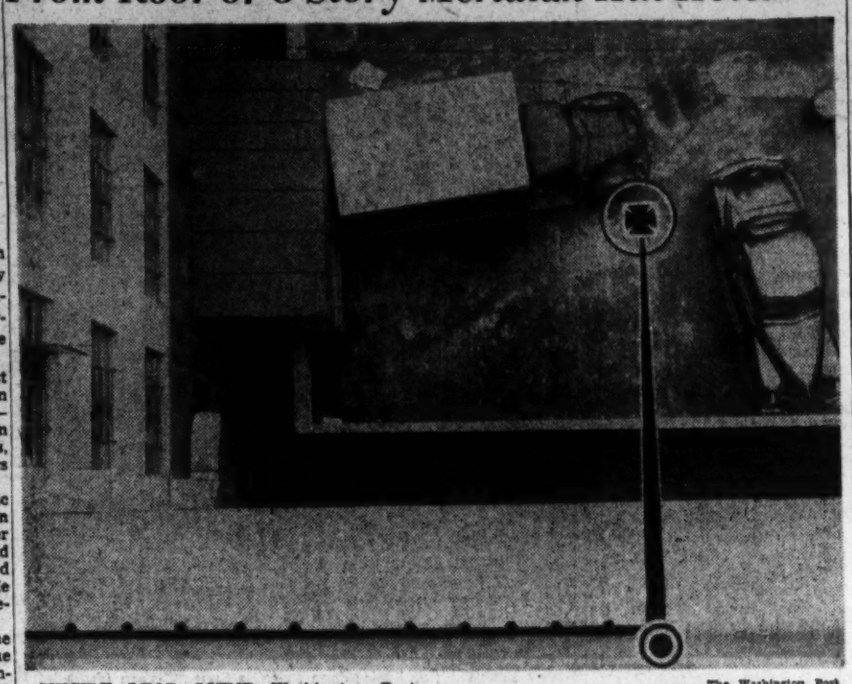
Gault Group to Play

The Gault Chamber Music Players, an amateur group of 30 members, directed by W. M. Gault, will give a benefit concert Sunday at 5:30 p. m. at the Mount Olivet Methodist Church, 16th st. and N. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va. The offering will be for the benefit of the church building fund.

Dr. Hirsh to Lecture

Dr. Harold Hirsh, assistant professor of medicine at the Georgetown School of Medicine, will lecture on "Antibiotics in the Treatment of Meningitis" at Arlington Hospital on Sunday at 10 a. m.

Rep. Reed's Daughter Plunges to Her Death From Roof of 8-Story Meridian Hill Hotel



The Washington Post

SUICIDE LEAP SCENE—Washington Post Photographer Henry Rohland stood on the roof of Meridian Hill Hotel and pointed his camera down to the spot (X), eight floors below, where Ruth A. Reed, a Congressman's daughter, jumped to her death yesterday. She narrowly missed a laundry truck, parked in the area near the servant's entrance. A 4-foot-high metal screen fence (diagramed) inclosed the roof

Had Been in Poor Health and Under Physician's Care

Miss Ruth A. Reed, 39-year-old daughter of a veteran New York Congressman, yesterday jumped off the roof of the eight-story Meridian Hill Hotel.

The red-haired bachelor girl who was serving here as a secretary to her father, Representative Daniel A. Reed (R., N. Y.), had given no hint that she was intending to take her life, police said.

She had been in ill health and was under the care of Dr. Edward Nicklas here. Police stated Miss Reed left no notes.

She was described as an accomplished pianist who in the 1930s was active in social affairs. Two years ago she moved out of a suite in the Roosevelt Hotel into a $9-a-week single room on the fifth floor of the Meridian Hotel at 2601 16th st. nw., which caters to Government girls.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy declared the death a suicide.

Dr. Murphy said that a contributing cause of the suicide was "melancholia." He said that Miss Reed had been under the care of a neurologist, and that a mental examination was considered at one time.

It was hardly possible, Dr. Murphy said, that she would have been found as she was, 16 feet from the side of the building, had she fallen and not jumped. He said the evidence showed that she walked to the roof instead of using the elevator, and was clad, despite the chilly morning, only in a house coat.

Miss Reed's body was removed from the morgue yesterday afternoon by the S. H. Hines Funeral Co. to prepare it for shipment this morning to her family home in Dunkirk, N. Y.

Representative Reed sent word from Dunkirk that he was ill, and did not wish to talk about his daughter's death.

His wife said, "I can ascribe no reason for Ruth's act. It might have been accidental, you know."

Formerly Active Socially; Served as Father's Secretary

The plunge occurred at 8:45 a. m. No one saw Miss Reed go to the roof, which is enclosed by a 4-foot high metal screen fence.

Miss Mildred Anderson, a tenant on the sixth floor, reported to police that she saw a large object fall past her window.

Miss Reed's body was found in a parking area near the servants' entrance and in front of a beauty parlor. She had narrowly missed a laundry truck near which its driver, John Miller, 22, of 919 P st. nw., was standing.

Miss Reed was dressed in a blue polkadot house coat and red and blue slippers. There was a small cut on her forehead.

F. C. Minnick, manager of the hotel, said, "This is the first incident of this kind in five years of operation of this hotel—fortunately."

Miss Reed attended high school in Dunkirk, the Madeira School here, the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, and the Ithaca Conservatory of Music in New York.

She had been in Washington intermittently ever since her father was elected to his office in 1918. Before going to work for him, Miss Reed was employed by the Republican National Committee.

Miss Reed's coresidents at the hotel said that she was fond of playing the piano in the hotel lobby, and added that she often went out with them.

Gun Roulette Game Proves Nearly Fatal

Group of Boys Watch Grocer Wound Himself

A 30-year-old grocer was in critical condition last night after shooting himself in the head while demonstrating a game of "Russian roulette."

He is Burton N. Chassin, coowner of the Benning Market, 4012 Massachusetts ave. ne.

Police said Chassin was in his store Wednesday night with five teen-age boys. He showed them a .38-caliber revolver and asked them if they knew how to play "Russian roulette."

The boys related to police that he said, "I used to play the game in the Army."

He then removed four of the five cartridges from the weapon, spun the cylinder, pointed it at his head and pulled the trigger. The bullet tore off part of his scalp and penetrated the brain, police said.

The onlookers became frightened and ran out of the store looking for police.

Green Hails Kentucky Election of Clements

AFL President William Green yesterday hailed the election of Democratic Representative Earle C. Clements as Governor of Kentucky as a victory for forces opposed to the Taft-Hartley labor law.

He said in a statement that Eldon S. Dummit, Republican candidate, made the act his chief "battle cry" and asked for election on the ground that Clements had voted to uphold President Truman's veto of the bill.

Houseflies Succumb To DDT Campaign

College Park, Md. (U.P.).—Julian J. Chisholm, instructor in entomology at the University of Maryland, has credited DDT with another victory.

Plot Charged

Woman Sent To Asylum Gets Verdict

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Melissa Rowe, 56, won a $2500 judgment today against a former police magistrate whom she accused of signing papers committing her to a State mental institution to "get her out of the way," because he was "infatuated with her daughter."

The former magistrate, Attorney Walter L. Green, Hyattsville, was one of seven defendants named by Mrs. Rowe in a suit which claimed she had been "railroaded" into Spring Grove Hospital as the result of a "conspiracy" among the defendants, her relatives, and friends.

Contending that her 26-day confinement in 1943 represented a deprivation of her civil rights, Mrs. Rowe, whose home is in Brentwood, Md., sought $250,000 damages.

However, the Federal jury was instructed to consider only Green as liable for a possible judgment. A motion for a new trial and another to set aside the jury's verdict was filed immediately in the Hyattsville attorney's behalf.

Green denied from the witness stand that he had signed the papers because of "infatuation" with the plaintiff's 35-year-old, thricemarried daughter, blonde Mrs. Florence Pearson.

Some of the defendants testified they did not even know their codefendants. All denied there had been any "conspiracy" to have Mrs. Rowe committed.

Food Locker to Open

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 6.—A new frozen food locker for Calvert County is testing equipment this week preparatory to its opening. The locker will establish a complete freezing service for county farmers. A similar locker for St. Mary's County has been opened at Sandy Bottom.

Repair Shop Burns

Charlestown, W. Va., Nov. 6.—Fire of undetermined origin yesterday destroyed the Carper Body and Fender Repair and Paint Shop here. All equipment of the shop and a car owned by the proprietor were destroyed in the fire.

6 More GSI Eating Places Are Approved

Which Don't Meet Standards Is Asked Closing of Those

Six more eating establishments operated by Government Services Inc., in Government buildings were approved by the Health Department yesterday and are ready to be licensed along with 31 units approved last week.

License Superintendent Edward E. Bailey, jr., said the licenses would be issued today or early next week.

Bailey said he had also received license applications for 25 other GSI units. These failed to pass Health Department inspections last September. They will be reinspected this month, Bailey said.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland he would recommend that units failing to pas inspection be ordered to meet health requirements or cease operating.

The recommendation will accompany a full report to the Commissioners next week on GSI eating units, Dr. Ruhland said.

U. S. to Transfer Ex-Nazi Destroyers To France Monday

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—With guns booming and the flags of two nations soaring above former enemy decks, the United States will turn two former Nazi destroyers over to France next Monday.

Ambassador Henri Bonnet will receive the two ships for the French government in a ceremony at the Naval Academy's Santee dock.

The destroyers have been here for a year while technicians at the United States Naval Engineering Experiment Station have inspected their structure and equipment. They are the DD939 and DD935, which served Germany during the war as the Z-39 and Z-35.

To mark the occasion, the cruiser Georges Leygues, man-of-war veteran of two invasions of the French coast, will drop anchor in the Severn River on Sunday.

Forum Asks Changes in Home Rule Proposals

D. C. Referendum, Literacy Test, New Geographic Lineup Urged on Radio

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Three major changes in the Auchincloss plan for District reorganization and home rule were proposed last night in a local radio forum.

Individual speakers suggested:

1. Giving Washington residents a chance to declare in a formal vote whether they want the plan.

2. Making literacy a requirement for voting in proposed city elections.

3. Changing the lineup of geographical representation in the proposed District council, to conform more closely to distribution of area populations.

Taking part in the discussion were Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the home rule plan; Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post; Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, and Harry Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board. Presiding was David Brinkley, District affairs commentator for WRC.

Auchincloss Praised

Auchincloss was warmly praised for his work on the plan. Wender said the Congressman had been "a revelation" to Washington residents.

Both Graham and Wender strongly urged a local referendum on whether the home rule-reorganization plan should be put into effect. The Auchincloss plan does not call for a referendum—the plan would take effect when legalized by Congress and approved by the President.

Graham proposed that the citizens of Washington vote formally on the plan 30 days after its approval as a condition to putting it into effect. Such a referendum, he said, would give local residents the feeling that they helped to bring home rule here.

Auchincloss said there would be ample chance for citizens to take part in public hearings on the home rule bill when Congress considers it next year.

Formal Vote Urged

Wender urged a formal plebiscite on the plan as "the one thing that whould show Congress how we feel about it."

Lusk made clear his vote would be cast against the idea of a local elected council. He said the council would get better members if they were appointed by the President instead of being elected.

Lusk and Wender tangled on the suffrage point. Said Wender, "The $64 question is this: do you think the President should appoint the councils of other cities?"

"That's no $64 question," said Lusk, "I can answer it with one hand behind my back. The answer is 'no' because this is a Federal city as everyone knows."

Lusk contended council members in other cities did not measure up to the type of men Washington has had as members of its governing Board of Commissioners. Wender said Washingtonians were just as competent to exercise good judgment on elections as were the residents of other cities.

Judgment and Councils

"They'd probably have just as good judgment and elect just as bad councils," said Lusk.

Auchincloss said he had a little 5-cent question: did Lusk favor home rule?

When Lusk said "no", Wender quipped "Rufus could answer that one with his mouth closed."

Wender urged making literacy a qualification for voting in District elections—a feature not now in the plan—and remarked that he had once had to take a literacy test in New York.

"Did you pass?" asked Lusk.

Wender said he had passed, and had a certificate to prove it.

Auchincloss said there was a "lot of merit' 'in the suggestion that some change might be made in the geographical representation plan for teh proposed city council. The plan now calls for four members elected to represent the city genrally, and two each from Northwest, Northeast, Southwest, and Southeast Washington, all to be elected at large. Graham cited 1946 figures showing these populations in the four sections: Northwest, 481,000; Northeast 183,000; Southeast, 163,000, and Southwest, 35,000.

Cooks Held to Blame For Tainted Food

Lincoln, Neb. (U.P.).—Cooks are to blame for a high degree of food contamination, according to two University of Nebraska scientists.

Chicken examined by bacteriologists M. F. Gunderson and Kenneth Rose was found to have as few as nine germs per half-tablespoonful immediately after cooking. When workers finished boning the fowl, however, the germ count rose to nine million.

Gunderson and Rose began their study for the Quartermaster Corps during the war. Satisfactory methods now have been developed to avoid most of the contamination, they said.

Area News in Brief

'Machine' to Make Money Backfires

A "money making" machine which had netted him $8010 brought Samuel M. Goines, 52, face to face with a possible 20-year maximum sentence in District Court yesterday following his conviction on two counts of grand larceny.

Financial loser in the "double your money" deal was Hilarion Yoro, 38, of 16 Rhode Island ave. nw., who testified that he was induced by Goines to place $7810 wrapped in paper in a glass jar with the understanding that it would be doubled in value upon being sprayed with a "magic" acid.

In addition, Yoro said, he had given Goines and another man, still at large, $200 to purchase the acid.

When, two days later, he inspected the contents of the jar and found nothing but some scorched paper and ashes, Yoro said he "felt like killing myself."

Yoro said he'd sold half his grocery business at 1819 15th st. nw., for $400 and borrowed the remainder of the $7810 used in the deal.

Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff put the clincher on the case by citing a lengthy police record of the defendant going back to 1934. The jury deliberated only 30 minutes.

Zoning Hearings Set

Dates for hearings on the rezoning petition for the Silver Spring and Bethesda area were announced yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners. Hearings will be held in Bethesda on November 18 and December 16 and in Silver Spring on November 25, December 2, 9 and 18. Some 65 petitions are currently pending, most of them in the two areas.

Robbery at Leisure

A thief yesterday morning locked a housewife out of her home at 3409 17th st. ne. and then stole $40 from an upstairs bedroom.

Mrs. Helen Ballard, 25, told police she had hung her wash, then sat down on the front steps to play with her two children. Meanwhile, she later learned, a thief had entered the rear door, locked the front door and proceeded to raid the house.

Student Driver Injured

A student driver, Mrs. Mary L. Cassimus, 46, 2114 Dayton st., Silver Spring, was slightly injured yesterday when the car she was operating jumped a curb on Westeth ave., near Livington st. nw., and then rammed the rear of a truck moving in the same direction.

Mrs. Cassimus and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lucy F. Brown, 1708 Rhode Island ave. nw., the instructor, were taken to Garfield Hospital by the Chevy Chase Rescue Squad. Mrs. Cassimus was admitted with a dislocated thumb and lacerations of the face and right knee, Mrs. Brown was treated for lacerations to the face and righ hand and released. The truck was operated by George Bauer, 46, Baltimore, Md., police said.

Wall Caves in on Man

M. C. Thomas, 53, of 1805 Diagonal rd., Alexandria, was buried up to his hips yesterday afternoon when the wall of an excavation on which he was working caved in. A carpenter foreman, Thomas was inspecting forms in preparation for pouring concrete for foundations for the new Congress Heights telephone exchange building at 3700 1st st. se. He was not injured.

Matter of Choice

With a whole liquor store to choose from, a thief who broke into Person's Liquor Annex, 2440 Wisconsin ave. nw. early yesterday selected two bottles of sherry, passing up Scotch and champagne, police reported.

Far less discriminating was the method of gaining entrance to the store. A front show window was broken with a rock.

Twice Victimized

Miss Isabel Arnold, 35, 1125 11th st. nw., yesterday reported for the second time this year that she has been robbed in the vicinity of her apartment house.

She said that around 1:30 a. m. yesterday as she entered the hallway there, a man put his hand in his pocket and demanded her pocketbook "or else." She handed him the purse which contained about $1.20 and personal papers.

She said that earlier this year, a pocketbook snatcher took her purse from her arm in front of the dwelling.

Holdup Attempt Foiled

Collie E. Murray, 37, of 718 Kenilworth ave. ne., told police he battled several minutes early yesterday with a passenger in his taxi before frightening the would-be holdup man off.

At Irving st. and Park pl. nw., the fare ordered the drives to halt, then thrust a hand in his pocket and reached with his other hand for the change carrier. Not easily intimidated, Murray shouted and struggled with the passenger till he fled on foot.

Gem Thief Sought

The police robbery squad yesterday was investigating the theft of $1300 in jewelry from Mrs. Dora Paul, 1811 28th pl. se., Wednesday night by a pocketbook snatcher.

Mrs. Paul reported that at 8:45 p. m., while walking near 28th pl. and Q st. se., a 14-year-old boy grabbed her purse.

She said that the purse contained a wedding ring set with a 1½ carat diamond, a cocktail ring set with a cluster of diamond chips and a wristwatch.

Shoemen Pick Hahn

Gilbert Hahn, president of William Hahn and Co. shoe store, 7th and K sts. nw., has been elected a vice president of the National Shoe Retailers Association at its annual meeting in Chicago. Hahn was also re-elected to the association's board of directors of which he has been a member since 1944.

Touchdown Club Loses

A thief scored against the Touchdown Club, 1414 I st. nw., early yesterday to the tune of $37.

The light-fingered gentleman hit pay territory in a cupboard over the bar.

Jewels Vanish

The loss or theft of $2000 in jewels was reported to police yesterday by Mrs. Helen H. Fillius, 4300 Hawthorne st. nw.

She said that the articles were nipped from a box in the bureau of her bedroom. Included were a platinum engagement ring set with a carat diamond and 12 small stones and another platnium ring set with a sapphire and 12 to 14 small diamonds.

$200 Shirt Stud Lost

John S. Thatcher, director of Dumbarton Oaks, 3101 R st. nw., reported to police yesterday the loss of his pearl shirt stud with a gold setting valued at $200. He said the stud wa slost Wednesday night between 34th st. and Prospect ave. nw., and a parking lot at 20th st. between E and F sts., where he discovered the loss.

Gun Cleaner Wounded

Louis B. Randolph, 20, of 1758 K st. nw., was wounded in the right thigh late Wednesday when a .22 calibre rifle he was cleaning fell to the floor and was accidentally discharged.

Randolph walked to Emergency Hospital where he was treated and transferred to Gallinger Hospital. His condition was reported as fair.

Boat Disappears

Someone is on the Anacostia without a paddle.

That's the apparent deduction, anyway, from a report made to police yesterday by Frank Miller, manager of Al Well's Boat House, at the foot of 19th st. se.

A 12-foot boat, without benefit of paddle, mysteriously vanished from the dock, Miller told police.

Pranksters' Luck

Pranksters risked their lives to disconnect 45 electric line sockets in the District and nearby Maryland on Halloween, the Potomac Electric Power Company revealed yesterday.

In a report to the District Electrical Department, the company said all the 27 sockets "pulled" in Maryland were on dangerous high tension circuits. Eighteen were disconnected on regular District power lines.

In addition, 1443 street light bulbs or globes were smashed by revelers, PEPCO said. But celebrants were less ambitious than last year, when 1787 were broken, or in 1945, when an all time high of 1801 bulbs or globes were shattered.

Roof Rule Revised

One-story garages may have wood roofs in certain cases, the Commissioners ruled yesterday in approving an amendment to the D. C. Building Code.

The amendment was recommended by the D. C. Regulations Committee and approved by the Fire Marshal. It provides that one-story garages not over 10,000 square feet in area may have wood roofs if ceilings and supports are fire resistant and areas used for garage purposes are equipped with sprinkler systems.

Postlude

3 Winners Presented to Home City

By Paul Hume

It was all free at Constitution Hall last night: orchestra, pianist, soprano, and violinist.

But don't for a minute think that there wasn't plenty of fine music making. Under the joint sponsorship of the Chamber Music Guild and the American Federations of Musicians Local No. 161, three recent Chamber Music Guild Audition winners were presented to their home city.

Mishel Piastro was in charge of the orchastral proceedings but little that the orchestra did was to his credit. For the most part he reflected the spineless sort of conducting which characterizes his radio programs, and more than once he simply left the soloist out on a limb with no support whatsoever. Nothing else explains his work, for the players were competent men, many from the ranks of the National Symphony.

Pianist Harriet Serr showed real depth and ability in her delineation of the Beethoven E Flat concerto, a work not to be attempted lightly. Her tone and entire address was mature and in large part finished.

Soprano Phyllis Hoyland has a fine voice. So have many singers before the public today. Miss Hoyland seems young for the kind of thing she is attempting, and her singing shows that she has, in her own estimation, or that of her teacher, passed beyond the point where scales, exercises, and vocalizing without ceasing is still requisite.

Stanley Weiner may well be most experienced among the evening's players. At any rate there was a flair to his playing of the Paganini concerto in its shortened form, which marked him as the most advanced of the artists.

Sousa Band Alumni and 2 of His Daughters Honor Memory of Famed D. C. Musician

The Washington Post

"TAPS" AT SOUSA'S GRAVE—In Congressional Cemetery, Mrs. Helen Sousa Abert of New York City, and Miss Jane Priscilla Sousa of Sands Point, N. Y., daughters of the famed musician, stand beside John Philip Sousa's grave as Navy Chief Musician Oscar B. Short sounds taps at a memorial service yesterday on the nine-third anniversary of Sousa's birth. Short was cornet soloist in Sousa's band. Saluting are (from left) Chief Musician John A. Liegl, Chief Warrant Officer John Corey, Chief Musician Herbert E. C. Weber, and Dana Garrett. All of the Navy musicians were members of the "March King's" band

Former bandsmen of John Philip Sousa yesterday paid tribute to his memory in simple ceremonies at Congressional Cemetery.

Observing the ninety-third anniversary of the birth of the native Washington bandmaster who became world famous, members of the Washington Chapter, Sousa Band Fraternal Society, gathered at his grave to pay their annual tribute.

Miss Jane Priscilla Sousa of Sands Point, Long Island, and Mrs. Helen Sousa Abert of New York City, daughters of the composer of "The Star and Stripes Forever," "The Washington Post March" and other stirring compositions, were among those present.

A wreath of blue and white chrysanthemum pompons reproducing the collar ornament of the Sousa band uniforms and recalling the band's world tours was placed on the grave.

Chief Musician Oscar Short, USN, former cornet soloist with the band and now soloist with the Navy Band, played "Taps" and Lieut. C. W. Ellison, Navy chaplain, gave benediction.

Among former Sousa bandsmen present in addition to Chief Musician Short, were: Dana Garrett and Chief Musicians John A. Liegl, Herbert E. C. Weber, Charles Nutick, Lloyd Folts, and George Jenkins.

Mrs. Abert and Miss Sousa attended a memorial concert for their father—who died in 1932—by the Boys' Club Junior Optimist Band at Kramer Junior High School Tuesday night.

New York members of the Sousa Fraternal Society will honor the bandmaster's memory at their annual dinner there Sunday, and West Coast members will pay tribute at a dinner in Los Angeles.

Parcel Post Rules Abroad Govern Rates

Why does it cost 63 cents to send a 1-pound parcel to Bolivia, while the same parcel, mailed in the same U. S. postoffice, requires only 14 cents if it's addressed to Hongkong, Honduras or almost any of the European countries?

Why can you mail a parcel post package of 22 pounds to England, Germany or Austria, while if you want to send a gift package to France or Italy, you are limited to 11 pounds?

These and many other more specific and practical questions about parcel post to foreign countries are being answered in increasing volume by the local postoffices, whose officials report more and more people are sending food packages to European and other countries.

The reason for different regulations for different counties, as explained yesterday by E. L. Ellis, general foreman in the office of the general superintendent of mails, Washington Postoffice, is that all foreign parcel post mailing is based on agreements with individual countries. Certain countries charge for transporting such mail inland, others charge for having it cross through their territory on the way to the country of destination. The United States gets the best deal it can and then has to stick to it.

Some regulations, either generally agreed on or imposed by the United States Postoffice, are the same for parcels destined to any country. For instance, size of package is limited to 72 inches in length plus girth. Perishables are not accepted. Parcels must be sealed (to make it easier to detect any rifling in transit). While no particular type of container is required for foreign-bound parcels, it must be strong enough to withstand handling and shipping.

Must List Contents

Customs declaration and international parcel post tags must be affixed to such parcels. These may be obtained from any local postoffice, and contents of any package must be listed, item by item, for customs authorities. The tags are in short supply, Ellis explained, and many clerks prefer to have you bring in the package you want to mail and then get the necessary tags, rather than give you tags to take home.

Weight limit variations, as well as value limitations and insurance and registraton, vary from country to country. Most common limits are 11, 22 and 44 pounds, but even these are not standard, as Panama, for instance, allows 70 pounds.

"Special handling" stamps are good only in this country. Placed on an international parcel post package, they may save 24 hours in transit to some point such as San Francisco, because they provide first-class handling that far. After the package leaves the country, however, it's just parcel post to their postal authorities.

People desiring specific information on postage, regulations, or any other mailing technicalities, should call the Main Postoffice, or their local branch, and ask for information. Those who want to have the official regulations at their fingertips may buy Part II of the Postal Guide, available at the Government Printing Office for 75 cents, plus the quarterly supplements which will keep things up to date for two years for the sum of $1.

William J. Moore, Sr.

Funeral services for William James Moore, sr., 73, of 6452 Medwick rd., Hampshire Knolls, Md., will be held today at 2 p. m. at Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia ave. Silver Spring. Burial will be in George Washington Memorial Cemetery.

Mr. Moore died unexpectedly on Tuesday. A native of Baltimore, he had lived in Washington and vicinity for the past 35 years. He was a retired telegraph operator for the old Postal Telgraph Company.

He is survived by his wife, Nettie A. Moore, a son, William J. Moore, jr., of Deerfield, Va., two daughters, Mrs. Catherine Davis and Mrs. Adelaide Ferry, both of the Hampshire Knolls address, a sister Mrs. Fannie Smith of Washington, and a Brother, Herman Moore of Baltimore.

Sugar Deals Bring Fines Of $28,500

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Nine persons were fined a total of $28,500, with eight receiving prison sentences in Federal Court today in virtually the closing chapter of a million-pound sugar black market operation which was uncovered by Federal agents last spring.

Four persons remain to be sentenced of the 16 who pleaded guilty of violating su gar rationing regulations. The other three have already been fined a total of $10,000, making a total of $38,500 in fines meted out by Judge Harry E. Watkins.

Before sentencing, Judge Watkins briefly outlined the history of the operation, explaining that by the defendants' own admission more than one million pounds of sugar was handled with illegal ration stamps or without stamps, that using their own figures the defendants grossed $40,000 and by evidence introduced in hteir trials, the prosecution indicated the gross at more than $75,000.

Those sentenced today, their fines and sentences were:

Clarence A. Lane, Culloden, W. Va., $10,000 and 11 months; David W. Law, jr., Reedy, W. Va., $10,000 and 11 months; Jack Eller, North Wilksboro, N. C., $2000 and two years probation; Ethiel Z. Edwards, Huntington, $1000 and eight months; Homer H. Dillon, Huntington, $2000 and 11 months; Harold P. Davis, Huntington, $1000 and seven months; Everett L. Miller, Huntington, $500 and five months; Quillian N. Faulkner, Burlington, N. C., $1000 and four months; and William Mills, Newark, Ohio, $1000 and five months.

In administering the prison terms, Judge Watkins recommended that Lane, Law and Edwards be confined at the United States reformatory at Ashland, Ky., and the other confinements be served at Mills Point, W. Va.

Loyal D. Hutchinson of Landrum, S. C., and Jack P. Conley of Bulloden will be sentenced tomorrow.

Miss McQuown Dies; Traveler And Lecturer

Miss Clara Winifred McQuown, 74, lecturer and world traveler, died at her home in the Kennedy Warren Apartments at 6:45 p. m. yesterday following a brief illness.

A daughter of one of western Pennsylvania's pioneer families, Miss McQuown was a native of Franklin, Pa., and came to Washington in 1917 after gathering lecture course material, largely in Japan, China and the Far East.

She was in Japan shortly before World War I broke out, and came to Washington on her return to the United States.

Miss McQuown was active in women's Republican work and at one time was a representative on the Washington group's board of directors. She also was a member of the Washington Women's City Club and of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. She had no near relatives.

William R. Power, Jr.

Funeral services for William Raymond Power, jr., 38, 4301 1st st. se., former electrical engineer with the Rheem Manufacturing Co. of Baltimore, will be held today in St. Andrew's Chapel of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, 1764 N st. nw., at 2 p. m. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Robinson Dies; Served As Clay Aide

Funeral services for Col. David L. Robinson, jr., 40, who died Wednesday night at his home, 4529 N. 18th st., Arlington, Va., will be held at the graveside in Arlington Cemetery at 2 p. m. today.

Colonel Robinson, a native of Mumford, Tex., had served nearly two years in Berlin as director of management control on the staff of Gen. Lucius D. Clary, commander in chief of the European Command, when ill health forced his return last April.

He entered public administration work in Dallas, Tex., in 1925, and was assistant city manager of Dallas from 1931 to 1935. He then became assistant director of Public Administration Service, with offices in Chicago, and five years later became director, supervising surveys and reorganizations of governmental agencies for a number of cities and States.

A member of the Texas National Guard, he was called to active duty in 1943. He served in the Bureau of the Budget and was deputy chief of the bureau's administrative management division when he was assigned to Berlin.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Wylene Robinson; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Robinson of Dallas; two brothers and a sister, Mrs. George M. Stuart, Robert R. Robinson, both of Dallas, and Francis N. Robinson of San Antonio, Tex.

Friends will meet at Chambers Funeral Chapel, 1400 Chapin st. nw., at 1 p. m. today to go to the cemetery.

Adm. Cecil Rites Today At Arlington

Funeral services for Rear Admiral Charles P. Cecil, USN, killed in the South Pacific in 1944, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Arlington Cemetery.

Rear Admiral Cecil, twice awarded the Navy Cross, was killed in an airplane accident when en route to New Guinea for duty as an Amphibious Group commander in the Seventh Amphibious Force.

Honorary pallbearers for the graveside service will be Vice Admirals Robert B. Carney, William M. Fechteler and George F. Hussey, jr., and Rear Admirals Osborne B. Hardison, Arthur C. Miles and Frank E. Beatty.

Friends attending the funeral can reach the grave by entering the South Gate, directly in front of the Navy Department's Arlington Annex, and turning right just inside the gate.

Rabbi Jacob D. Gordon

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Rabbi Jacob D. Gordon, 70, principal rabbi of the Norfolk Orthodox Jewish Community and dean of religious leaders here having served B'nai Israel and associated congregations for 40 years, died at Sinai Hospital, Baltimore, Wednesday night.

In failing health for two years, Rabbi Gordon had been in Baltimore for treatment for the last 10 days. His death came as a shock to local Jewry and a delegation led by Rabbi Paul Reich of Beth El Temple and Rabbi Julius Schecter, of the United Orthodox Synagogue, left to attend funeral rites in Brooklyn today.

John C. Martin

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—John C. Martin, 57, retired dairy operator, died yesterday in his car just off Shore Drive. Dr. H. F. Dormire, Princess Anne County coroner, gave a heart attack as the cause of death.

Martin is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ruth Milner Martin; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin Bowser, and a granddaughter.

Col. Franklin Langley Whitley, U. S. Army (ret.), died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital after a long illness.

Col. Whitley

Funeral services will be held at Fort Myer Chapel at 3:30 p. m. today. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Colonel Whitley, 63, who lived at 3815 Beecher st. nw., was born in St. Louis, and was graduated from West Point in 1908.

On Mexico Border

He served in the Mexican border trouble in 1916, and fought in France with the 9th Infantry division from 1917 to 1919.

In 1925, Colonel Whitley was attached to the Adjutant General's office with the rank of major.

Military attache in the Balkans from 1933 to 1937, Colonel Whitley was put in command of the New York port of embarkation in 1939, where he remained until September, 1943, when he was sent with the military government to north Africa. Later Colonel Whitley served with military government in Italy and southern France.

Many Decorations

Colonel Whitley was retired by his own request in July, 1945.

Among his decorations were the Distinguished Service Medal, two citations for gallantry in action, the French Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre with palm, seven other decorations from European nations.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Thetis P. Whitley; a son, Arthur L. Whitley, now a cadet at West Point; a daughter, Diana Whitley, and a sister, Miss Maude C. Whitley, Washington.

Apartment Units Get Rent Boosts

Rent increases averaging more than 6 per cent were recommended for two large Northwest apartment houses yesterday by a rent control examiner.

Recommended by Examiner James G. Tyson was a 6.83 per cent hike for 240 units of the McReynolds Apartments at 705 18th st. nw. The increase would raise $25-a-month units to $26.75, and $65-a-month apartments to $69.50.

The owners, the C. and R. Corporation, had requested a 15.21 per cent increase to bring in $17,868 more per year for increased operating and maintenance costs and capital improvements. The recommended boost would add about $8025 to the company's annual income, Tyson estimated.

He also recommended a 6.01 per cent rent increase for 94 units at the La Reine Apartments, 5415 Connecticut ave. nw. This would raise $38-a-month apartments to $40.50 and $80-a-month units to $84.75, he said.

J. S. Gruver, the owner, sought a 15.03 per cent hike to obtain $10.140 a year more for increased operating and maintenance costs and capital improvements. Tyson's recommendation would bring the owner an additional $4059 a year.

The higher rents will go into effect in 10 days unless either the tenants or the owners appeal for reconsideration by Rent Control Administrator Robert B. Cogswell.

Rector May Heed Washington Call

THE REV. HAROLD SEDGWICK,

39, rector of All Saints Episcopal Church in Brookline, Mass., said yesterday he would "consider very seriously" a call to become rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church here. Suit Attacks Divorce Given In Panama

The legality of a Panama divorce is at question in a District Court case in which the first wife of a deceased Army colonel is suing against his estate and for payment of a Veterans' Administration pension.

Named defendant was Mrs. Evelyn O'Leary of Somerville, N. J., second wife of Colonel Herbert O'Leary and executrix of his $3000 estate. Colonel O'Leary, a native of Wisconsin, who lived in Washington a number of years, died in Walter Reed Hospital in July, 1944. He married for the second time in 1930 in New York City.

Plaintiff is Mrs. Josephine O'Leary of Baldwin, Wisc., who married the officer in 1910. Colonel O'Leary secured a Panama divorce decree in 1930.

Attorney Ralph Cusick representing Mrs. Josephine O'Leary contends the Panamanian divorce is illegal since, he said, Mrs. O'Leary was not notified of the proceedings against her.

Attorneys William R. Lichtenberg and Samuel Barker, representing Mrs. Evelyn O'Leary, are defending the legality of the Panama decree. They also pointed out that the plaintiff did not start legal action until some 15 years after O'Leary's remarriage. The case, which started yesterday will be resumed on Monday before Associate Justice F. Dickenson Letts.

Essay Contest For Seniors To Offer $500

Checks and balances in government is the subject of a $500 essay contest scheduled next spring for District high school seniors, Dr. Maurice A. Goldberg, past president of Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, recently announced.

The topic was selected by Bolitha J. Laws, chief justice of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The subject, in full: "Checks and Balancese in the Government of a Nation and the Relations of its People Are Essential to the Strength of Democracy."

The winner will receive a $500 scholarship, payable $250 per year for two yars, to any college or university of the winner's choice.

Applications for the contest, scheduled for next April 13, will be distributed early in the year by senior high school principals, Dr. Goldberg said.

Cafe Au Lait From Bossy Just a Dream

By The Associated Press

Without a qualm, the Department of Agriculture shattered a dream yesterday.

It was a dream of a cow that would give coffee with cream and sugar.

Don't laugh yet.

Last week the department reported that a method has been devised to feed waste pulp of the coffee bean to dairy cattle. It was an important development for Central and South American countries.

So—

Well, any country boy knows that certain feeds do affect the taste of milk. Onions, for instance. Maybe coffee pulp—

"No," said the Department of Agriculture man firmly, "this coffee pulp does not impart a coffee flavor to the milk, otherwise we never would have issued the . . . No, it's impossible. No, you couldn't feed the cow coffee pulp and cane sugar pulp and have . . . Fantastic."

Okay. Okay. It was just an idea.

Now what do you suppose a cooperative cow could do with some eggs, whisky, rum and nutmeg during the forthcoming eggnog season?

D. C. Income Taxes Wait On High Court

City tax officials are holding up collection of "200 to 300" District income tax bills pending a possible local tax law ruling by the Supreme Court.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West asked the Supreme Court on October 27 to review a United States Court of Appeals decision which ordered the District to make a tax refund to Clifford G. Breckham.

Beckham, a Bureau of Internal Revenue tax lawyer who lives at 1914 Connecticut ave nw., sought a refund on his 1940 tax bill because he has a legal residence in Forth worth, Tex. He has lived here since 1928.

Both the District Assessor and the District Board of Tax Appeals denied the refund because there was doubt that Beckham was "domiciled" in Texas.

C. & P. Phone Rate Hearing Is Postponed

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—A petition by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia for marginal rate increases was adjourned today until November 20 after the State Corporation Commission had heard a detailed explanation of the proposed new rates and how they were reached.

During the interim period until the hearing is resumed the phone company was requested to prepare much additional information dealing with its financial operations.

Testimony regarding the rates requested was presented by Arthur W. Harrison, general commercial manager of the company. Briefly the new proposal would increase the cost of residence telephones by 25 cents and business phones by 50 cents per month.

Harrison, who said the supervised preparation of the rate schedules which were filed with the SCC on September 29, said the proposed schedules result in raising the level of rates, "across-the-board," for the primary business main services by 50 cents per month and residence main services by 25 cents per month "with two minor exceptions."

In the highest rate group, rural business is not being increased, he said. The other exception is an increase of 50 cents per month for party and rural residence service in the lowest rate group.

Harrison said 83 per cent of the increase asked comes from main exchange services "which constitute the heart of the telephone business."

Army-Irish Series May Be Continued

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ON SECOND THOUGHT, the calamity tone of Army's coach, Earl Blaik, as he prepares to send his West Pointers against Notre Dame tomorrow would seem to be justified. Blaik's pre-game despair of Army's chances could be merely that of a realist. A fresh, new statistic has just arrived to heap more dismay upon Blaik.

POVICH

All season long, Johnny Lujack has been acclaimed as the best college football player in the United States, and he probably is. Blaik's intelligence tells him that Lujack quarterbacks unbeaten Notre Dame, but as if that item was not disturbing enough to Army, Blaik now reads that Lujack for all his skill may not be Notre Dame's best quarterback.

The latest official statistics of the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau show that Frank Tripucka is a better forward passer and a better punter than Lujack. Unhappily for Army, Tripucka also plays for Notre Dame. Lujack's record of 42 pass completions in 74 attempts pales before that of Tripucka who has connected on 20 of 28 throws. And Tripucka, the statistics show, is a better punter.

FRANK LEAHY, of Notre Dame, is properly cognizant of the potency of substitute Tripucka and tomorrow he may be disposed to use both of his quarterbacks in the same backfield. Those two war-year beatings in 1944-45 when Army poured it on the Irish 59-0 and 48-0 are still vivid with Leahy and he has hinted that Lujack could be shifted to a halfback job against West Point.

The fact is that Lujack is Notre Dame's best ball carrier, in addition to his other accomplishments. He has carried the ball six times this year for a whopping average of 21 yards per rush, and Leahy is not the man to waste that kind of talent. Lujack can also catch a pass and he would be one more target for Tripucka, who is merely leading the country in percentage of pass completions.

Navy could tell Blaik about the effectiveness of Tripucka. He threw nine passes against the Midshipmen and completed eight of them, one for a touchdown. He didn't get another touchdown because one of his receivers fumbled after going to the Navy 1-yard line with the ball.

ARMY GOES into South Bend as the most passed-against team in the Nation. It's opposition has pitched 156 aerials in six games and completed 75 of them, a fact that Notre Dame scouts have certainly tabbed. When Army was finally beaten for the first time in four years, it was a defeat dealt off the arm of Gene Rossides, Columbia's forward passer.

There's always one danger, though, in passing against Army. There appears to be no middle ground in the Cadets' aerial defense. It's either good or bad. Army has a high average of interceptions of enemy passes with a total of 21 for the season. It's on the chance that the Irish passes may boomerang that Army supporters can draw their chief comfort.

Leahy's intention of using Lujack as a ball carrier is understandable enough. The Notre Dame running game, without him, isn't much. It's probably the weakest ground attack any Leahy team ever had, and the Irish have virtually been driven into the air this season. Navy outrushed 'em for long stretches last week.

ARMY WILL BE operating against Notre Dame without Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard for the first time in four years. The preseason acclaim for Andy Gustafson and Arnie Galiffa was unjustified, it appears. Nor does Blaik have a quarterback who could make the Army attack move as did Arnold Tucker. Army's line saved it from a beating by Illinois before Columbia found the vulnerability of the West Point air defense.

When Army played Notre Dame to a scoreless tie last year, it was Tucker who was the best player on the field. Lujack attempted 17 passes in that game and completed only five of them. Tucker was in there intercepting no fewer than four of Lujack's heaves. Unhappily for Blaik, Tucker is now wearing the stripes of a second lieutenant in the Regular Army.

Against Navy last week, the Irish didn't trifle much with assaults at the Middies' line after a bit of preliminary probing demonstrated the futility of it. The Irish probably won't waste much time trying to crock Army's forwards tomorrow, either. There's no better strategy than a completed forward pass into the end zone, especially with handy guys like Lujack and Tripucka in your lineup.

Spirits Never Down

Those Irrepressible Middies Confident for Tech Clash

By John Chandler

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—Navy's football forces, bruised and bumped by Notre Dame last week, tackle another tough customer—Georgia Tech—in Baltimore Saturday, and around Crabtown they're saying "anything can happen, and probably will."

For an outfit that has been taking it on the chin so regularly, it seems strange so much confidence and determination comes oozing from the Academy grounds each week.

"It's been a murderous schedule, and Saturday we will meet the best team in the South," Capt. Tom Hamilton, Navy head coach, said today.

"Our scouts say Tech is very dangerous, with a high-powered outfit. We think they are probably better than Notre Dame, because they have a running game to go along with a good passing attack."

After recalling that Notre Dame took Navy 27-0, it's hard to see how anybody along the Severn can rate another team stronger and still entertain any hopes for a victory.

"It will probably be a ding-dong battle, a wide open affair with lots of passing and maybe a free-scoring afternoon," Hamilton declared.

A year ago, in Atlanta, with two minutes left, Navy led 20-14 and was heading for another touchdown when Bill Hawkins fumbled. A Techman scooped up the ball and ran the length of the field to score. Moments later a pass interception gave the Engineers another touchdown.

"Those are the breaks," Hamilton said. "It could have been 27-14 for Navy. You can look for that type of game in Baltimore Saturday. Lots of action."

Hamilton said that Dick Scott, Navy's candidate for All-American center who was shaken up in the Notre Dame tilt, probably would play. Scott hasn't practiced this week.

Georgia Tech will be the sixth team Navy has met so far which was undefeated when they went against the Middies. Others were California, Columbia, Duke, Penn, and Notre Dame. Duke and Navy tied 14-14, and Georgia Tech defeated Duke, 7-0.

Virginia Just As Cocky as Mighty Penn

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 6.—If Pennsylvania defeats Virginia Saturday at Franklin Field, they'll have to do it with a football and not by psychology.

"The days of being overawed by a team like Penn or any other club are over down here," Head Coach Art Guepe said today as his spirited Cavaliers hustled through their final drill before departing for Philadelphia.

"We feel the same way about the game Saturday as Penn does—that we'll win. We have a mature squad and all that stuff of years gone by about the invincibility of an Ivy League team is just pure bunk as far as we are concerned.

"We're Mighty Confident"

"And you might add that we're mighty confident that we'll take Penn. I understand they feel the same way about us. If that's true, it should be a helluva ball game."

Guepe, the 33-year-old Marquette All-American whose Virginians have romped over six foes so far, wasn't trying to be cocky. He was calm and cool when he spoke.

Even the news that his star right halfback, Billy Pennel, of Memphis, Tenn., may be of little service against powerful Penn, failed to crimp his confident manner.

Pennel pulled an injured stomach muscle against Richmond Saturday and has had no contact work all week.

"Sure, we'll miss Pennel, but we've got another halfback, Ray Brown, who's no slouch himself."

A Falls Church Boy

Brown is the Falls Church, Va., senior who was touted as one of the swiftest runners ever seen here. He was injured in pre-season practice and has been in only two games so far.

But he's ready now and was running in the first-string backfield along with Quarterback Joe McCary, Fullback Grover Jones and Halfback Bruce Bailey today.

Guepe said he was a bit worried only about one thing—his line.

"Our line hasn't faced any real opposition this year. Offensively, I'm satified with it, but the Penn line may be a bit tough for us on defense."

Gee, Only 8 Good Backs

"Ive got only two good backfields, not four," he said. "We've used everybody in all of our games and all of them have looked good. But Saturday you'll see us working with about eight backs, that's all."

In addition to the starters, Guepe will use George Grimes, George Neff, Johnny Papit, a Philadelphia boy, and Pennel, if available, as his backs.

Never has Virginia football spirit been higher, not only on the team, but on the campus as well. Charlottesville will be a deserted village Saturday, as most of the student body will be among the 80,000 at Franklin Field.

Tonight the team was given a rousing sendoff at a pep rally with one of the greatest pepper-uppers in the business—Admiral Bull Halsey—as principal speaker.

Guape hopes his team follows the admiral's orders.

Baltimore Clippers Play Here Tonight

Tonight's ice hockey clash at the Uline Arena transfers to the American Hockey League a feud begun last season in the Eastern League when Lions Coach Jack Riley led the Baltimore Clippers against the Lions' 1946 Coach Leroy Goldsworthy in the Eastern League championship playoffs:

Goldsworthy now heads the Buffalo Bisons, strongest Western Division contender in the American League, who attempt at 8:30 tonight to duplicate the 7-3 trouncing they handed the Lions in Buffalo last Sunday.

The Bisons bring with them high-scoring Joey Bell who slipped two shots past his brother, Gordie Bell, Washington goalie, in Sunday's contest. Four Lion alumni are also featured on the Bison roster — Goalie Paul Bibeault, Wingman Leo Lamoureux, Hugh Currie and Art Lessard.

Lion Wingman Scotty Mair joins Defenseman Larry Archambeault on the sick list and Coach Riley plans to use his Lion cub line of Ed Thomas and Bill Johnson, both 19, and Don Slater, 20. The youngsters were standouts in training this fall, but have yet to prove themselves in league competition.

Recreation Badminton Set for Nov. 17-21

Postwar badminton's comeback in Washington will be climaxed by the revival of the City of Washington badminton tournament at Central High School November 17, 19, 20 and 21 under the sponsorship of the District Recreation Department.

Entries will be limited to residents of the metropolitan Washington area. Entry blanks are available at all public schools and badminton clubs in the area. Entries close at the Tennis Shop, 1126 19th st. nw., November 14, 1947.

St. John's undefeated and untied Cadets, leading the informal Catholic high school league, and Central's once-beaten Vikings tied for first in the public high loop, hook up at 8:15 tonight at Griffith Stadium in the feature of today's

Tech	5	0	0	Coolidge	2	2	0
Central	5	0	0	Western	1	2	1
Eastern	3	2	0	Roosevelt	0	2	0
Anacostia	2	2	1	Wilson	0	5	0

15-game scholastic football card.

With no logical college game here tomorrow, the St. John's-Central game, regarded by many as the unofficial Washington high school championship contest, may draw 15,000 spectators.

The two teams have met seven times during the past 10 years, with the Vikings winning six times. The last time the two met at night in Griffith Stadium was in 1940, when a crowd of more than 14,000 saw Central win 27-7.

Viking Opponents Tougher

The Vikings, despite their lone defeat, 20-14, in their opening game, to Virginia's championship Granby High team of Norfolk, are slight favorites because of the tougher schedule of opponents they've beaten.

Among Central's victims are Anacostia, 12-0; Calvin Coolidge, 13-0; Eastern, 20-6; Roosevelt, 7-0; and Woodrow Wilson, 21-12.

The Cadets have conquered Calvert Hall of Baltimore, 12-7; Charlotte Hall of Mechanicsville, Md., 13-6; Montgomery Blair, 36-20; Western, 20-13; Chamberlain Vocational, 19-6; and Georgetown Prep, 27-12.

Central's first-string line is unscored on in District competition. St. John's Coach Joe Gallagher is prepared to go over the Viking defense with the passes of 6 foot 168-pound Quarterback Jack George, who has a remarkable .667 percentage. George has pitched 12 touchdown passes, scored one himself, and has booted all 11 of his team's extra points.

Taking the handoffs from George for the most of the running assignments will be Bob Poch, whose 431 yards of rushing have been accumulated on 61 tries for a 7.6 average. Another potent Cadet ball-toter is stocky Doonie Waldron, who has a 5.2 average.

Tom Fannon, 6-foot 2-inch 195-pound end, is George's favorite pass target. Fannon has snared six of Jack's touchdown passes.

The Viking line averages nearly 200-pounds with 6-foot 3-inch End Hal Sponsler, Center Moon Million, and Tackles Bill Wallace, 215

Michigan, Too

Poor Middies Take It Easy Next Season

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Nov. 6 (AP). Cats let out of bags by other institutions received official recognition from a Naval Academy spokesman today who confirmed Navy's nine football opponents of 1948, including Michigan's Rose Bowl bound Wolverines.

Michigan and Missouri are to take the places of Georgia Tech, which plays Navy in Baltimore Saturday, and Penn State, which tackles the Middies in Baltimore on November 15.

Michigan is returning to the Navy schedule after a lapse of two years, the two elevens having met in Baltimore in 1045. The 1948 game will be played in Ann Arbor.

Dates and the sites of home games have not yet received official approval.

To be met at "home"—either in Annapolis or Baltimore—are Notre Dame, California, Missouri and Cornell.

The away games in addition to Michigan will be Duke, Columbia, Penn and Army.

Elimination of Georgia Tech from the 1948 schedule halts a series which dates back to 1922 and during which the rivals have broken even in six meetings.

The Penn State rivalry goes all the way back to 1894, taking in 25 games up to this year. Navy has won 13 of the contests and two have been ties.

Army, Irish Get $125,000 Each

South Benn, Ind., Nov. 6 (AP).—The wind-up of the classic Army-Notre Dame football rivalry here Saturday will pay approximately $125,000 to each school, a far cry from pioneer days of the rivalry when Notre Dame once went $600 in the red on the game.

The South Bend Tribune today printed a copy of a financial report, written in hand by the late Knute Rockne in connection with the 1919 game at West Point, won by Notre Dame, 12 to 9. Rockne's statement showed the Irish received a $1000 guarantee and the game expenses amounted to $1603.

Army-Irish Series Record

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 6 (AP).—Recapitulation of the Army-Notre Dame football rivalry which ends here Saturday in a thirty-fourth meeting with the score favoring Notre Dame as 22 wins, seven losses and four ties:

Coach Blaik Hopeful as 'Doomed 39' Get Sendoff

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 6 (AP).—Army's football warriors took off for South Bend tonight amidst one of the greatest demonstrations in the history of the Military Academy and Coach Earl Blaik held out at least a dim ray of hope that Saturday's game will not be the last between the Cadets and Notre Dame.

"I've noticed that things go in circles," observed the Army mentor. "I seem to recall that even Army and Navy once had a slight rupture of football relations. But we are playing again now.

"Anyone who says that the Army-Notre Dame game will never come back is crazy. He simply doesn't know.

Once again Coach Blaik took occasion to avow that he had nothing to do with terminating the long, lustrous gridiron rivalry between the two schools.

Enlisted Personnel Joins In

"It is presumptuous to assume," he said, "that any coach can dictate the continuance or discontinuance of a series such as this, particularly at a place like the Military Academy."

Possibly because they realized their team was supposed to be heading for a bad defeat, the Cadets tried to outdo themselves in their send-off of the "doomed 39."

After a loud rally in the mess hall replete with speeches and cheers, the entire corps accompanied the squad to the train at the foot of the great bluff.

For the first time ever, the enlisted personnel of the Academy made a special request that they be permitted to join in the festivities. The request, needless to say, was granted.

They're in Fine Shape

There wasn't a sign of an injury among the once-beaten Cadets.

The team is scheduled to reach South Bend at 1:30 p. m. (CST) tomorrow and will go directly to the Notre Dame stadium for a light workout.

Before leaving, Blaik reiterated that he expected Saturday's tussle to be an offensive scoring spree. He said he only hoped his pupils would get in on the fun. When a reporter offered to bet him two cigars, with matches, that the game would produce another scoreless tie, he grabbed the wager with alacrity, though he doesn't smoke.

Blaik admitted he had been increasingly intrigued by reports that Coach Frank Leahy was thinking of shifting his star passer and signal caller, Johnny Lujack, to halfback.

Aware of Lujack's Passing

Asked if he thought his team could stop Lujack's passing attack, Blaik answered slowly and soberly:

"You know as much about that as I do. I can say this—we are prepared as well as we can be against passes. Goodness knows, we have worked on it enough.

"It's funny, but this actually is the first time in the past four years that we've had to think about pass defense. With the fellows we had—Tucker, Blanchard, Davis and the rest—we just didn't have to worry about that part of it."

Brooklyn Signs Negro, 19, for Farm

Winthrop, Mass., Nov. 6 @.—Milton Neal, 19-year-old recent Winthrop High Negro all-round athlete, has signed with the Brooklyn Dodgers and assigned to their Nashua, N. H., New England League farm team.

Neal, an outfielder, will report to the Nashua club for spring training at Greenville, S. C. He attracted the favorable attention of Bill O'Connor, the Dodgers' New England district scout, while playing with a Winthrop twi-light league club last season.

Norris Rolls First Ball

Richard Norris, president of the D. C. Bankers Association, helped open the new Kalorama Bowling Center at Seventeenth and Kalorama rd. nw., last night by rolling out the first ball. A mixed team tournament was won by Jack Barkley, of Clarendon, and Dotty Clark of Roslyn, with 677.

In This Week's Big James

Irish, Georgia Tech, Michigan, Penn, SMU Favored

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Having batted an even .800 last week, we take off on another football forecast with renewed confidence and a season's average of .790 on 369 correct predictions and 98 misses.

Army vs. Notre Dame—Here's where the Cadets and the Irish saw off one of the most popular rivalries in college football and it's likely to be quite a farewell party. Although rain could make it close, you can bet Frank Leahy means to give Red Zlaik something to remember in the years to come. Notre Dame.

Georgia Tech vs. Navy—Like Army, the Middies have been reduced in stature since the days of plentiful wartime service talent. Navy tied Duke, which Tech licked by only one touchdown last week and could spring an upset here. A confident vote for Georgia Tech.

Indiana vs. Michigan — With one foot in the Rose Bowl, the powerful Wolverines already are dusting off a prominent spot in their trophy case for the Big Nine gewgaw, A handful of votes for Michigan.

Virginia vs. Pennsylvania—The list of eight major unbeaten, untied teams will be reduced by at least one in this fracas. The Cavaliers have knocked off half a dozen weak sisters but they haven't looked at anything as tough as the Quakers. Should be a honey and the nod goes to Penn.

Southern Methodist vs. Texas A. and M.—After tripping Texas, the unbeaten Mustangs are the marked men of the Southwest Conference. One rousing vote for Southern Methodist.

Stanford vs. Southern California—If UCLA doesn't balk the once-tied Trojans in their bid for the Rose Bowl November 22, Notre Dame probably will ruin their hopes for an unbeaten season December 6, but Stanford isn't capable of either chore.

Mississippi vs. Tennessee—Ole Miss needs this one to stay in the running for the Southeastern conference title and should have little trouble against a team that has lost four out of six.

Purdue vs. Minnesota—This figures to be as close as any game on Saturday's program. A Boilermaker triumph would give Stu Holcomb a stout claim to the best first-year coaching job in the land. Purdue.

Baylor vs. Texas—Still in the running for the Southwest conference title and the Cotton Bowl job, the disappointed Longhorns probably will take their spite out on the Bears for the loss to SMU.

North Carolina vs. North Carolina State—The Tarheels seem to have found themselves after a disastrous start but anything can happen in this game. North Carolina.

Washington vs. California—The Golden Bears, still hoping for a share of the Pacific Coast title, get the call.

Iowa vs. Wisconsin—The Badgers could win the Big Nine by beating Iowa, Michigan and Minnesota. Wisconsin.

Kentucky vs. West Virginia—Both teams are scrambling to get back on the right track. Kentucky.

Werner May Play Against Duquesne U.

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The high-flying football forces of Maryland University, beaten only by Duke this year, emplane today to seek their sixth victory in a clash with Duquesne University tomorrow at Pittsburgh's Forbes Field.

A chartered plane will transport the entire Terrapin squad under Coach Jim Tatum to the Smoky City. Leaving shortly after 1 p. m., the Terps will arrive in time for a light workout this afternoon.

Meanwhile, Coach Tatum announced that big Al Phillips, one of the Terps' most durable performers at guard, will captain the team tomorrow. Phillips, a junior, has started every game this year. He is second at Maryland. Before the war he played a year at Pittsburgh.

Ear trouble will keep Vern Seibert, flashy "scat-back" out of the game, Tatum announced today.

No official announcement has been made as yet, but the word here is that Hubie Werner, brilliant halfback out of the last two games with injuries, will be a starter at Forbes Field.

This would make a first team backfield composed of Quarterback Vic Turyn, Fullback Harry Bonk and Werner and Lu (Bambino) Gambino, tied for national scoring honors with 66 points, at the halfback posts.

Jim Meade and Al Woods, assistant coaches who have scouted Duquesne in its last three games, have brought back word that it is a big, tough outfit which has run into some bad breaks.

Skins '230-Pound 'Underweight' to Be Fattened Up

An "underweight" tackle scaling a spindly 230 pounds yesterday was acquired by the Washington Redskins as Bill Ward, guard who joined the team in 1946, was sold to the Detroit Lions.

The new lineman is Don Deeks, former University of Washington performer, who was in his third year with the Boston Yankees. He is 24 years old, 6 feet 4 inches.

"In college and during the start of his pro career," a Redskin spokesman said, "Deeks' playing weight was around 250. 'Injuries have cut down his poundage recently but we expect to build him up."

Deeks, who may play with the 'Skins in Pittsburgh Sunday, will be used on defense until he can be groomed to fill Ward's guard post.

With the return of Joe Tereshinski, rookie end, to practice yesterday the Redskins had hopes of being at full strength for Sunday's critical game. Tereshinski's injured elbow was the last major casualty on the club.

Navy Defends Harrier Championship Saturday

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 6 (AP).—Nine Eastern colleges will compete in the ninth annual cross-country championship meet of the Nonagonal Games Association here Saturday over Princeton's five-mile course, with Army favored to capture the title from Navy's defending champions.

Pennsylvania, Yale, Dartmouth, Princeton, Cornell, Harvard, and Columbia also will be represented.

53 Schools In East Agree To Strict Code

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Fifty-three Eastern colleges have agreed to the new Eastern College Athletic Conference constitution with its strict freshman and transfer rules and its edict against excessive student-athlete aid, Commissioner Asa S. Bushnell said today.

The schools are the charter members of the new circuit, largest in the United States. The old circuit was made up of conferences, each with its own rules.

Subscribing to the new constitution, each school promises to abide by the code which makes mandatory a year's residence for freshmen and transfers, and forbids financial aid to an athlete if the same aid is not available to a non-athlete. In no case is the aid to exceed tuition plus institutional incidental fees. Such as laboratory charges, room, board and laundry.

"This reorganization is particularly significant," said Bushnell, "because it meets a long-felt need by creating—for the first time in collegiate athletics in the East—a single set of exacting rules which can be supported and followed by institutions in the area. In the past smaller groups of colleges in the territory have maintained codes of this same general sort, but some collegiate bodies had conflicting codes."

ECAC schools from Washington, D. C., and its nearby area, are Georgetown, the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and Western Maryland College at Westminster, Md.

Bushnell said his office, opened in 1937, would continue to provide full administrative services to all its affiliated groups, some 21 leagues and associations in 14 different sports, and that ECAC members could continue their memberships in such circuits as the Ivy League. However, ECAC rules must prevail if there is a conflict.

Vets Excluded in Transfer Rule

The one-year transfer rule will not hold in some instances in cases involving veterans of World War II and will not apply at any time when an athlete from a junior college transfers to a member institution and is either a junior or a senior.

A junior college transfer of either the freshmen or sophomore class, however, must wait a year before he is eligible to compete.

Other eligibility rules provide that an athlete's three years of competition must be used up in five years; that no special or "night" class students may compete, and that no athlete with a baccalaureate degree may compete except when the sports' season extends beyond graduation day. No graduate at midyear, however, may represent the school athletically in the following semester.

Turnesa Wins North-South

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Swarthy Jim Turnesa, 27-year-old member of the famous golfing family, turned in two steady, sure rounds today to win the 45th annual North and South Open golf tournament with a four-under-par 284 total for 72 holes.

The stocky Elmsford, N. Y., pro won going away as his early contenders slumped in the two final rounds and finished five strokes ahead of the field to take top money of $1500.

George Schoux of Mamaroneck, N. Y., turned in two 74's today for a total of 290 and second place.

Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., a pretourney favorite who started slowly, turned in the afternoon's best round with a 69 to finish in a six-way tie for the third at 291.

He split money with Al Brosch, Garden City, N. Y.; Claude Harmon, Mamaroneck, N. Y., Tommy Wright, Knoxville, Tenn.; Henry Williams, jr., Sunbury, Pa.; and PGA Champion Jim Ferrier of San Francisco each got $500.

Three Baltimore competitors topped the 300 mark. Andy Gibson had a 223-78—301 final day card; Ralph Beach, 226-76—302, and Walter Romans, 231-80—311.

Bermuda Accepts

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Olympic organizing committee reported today Bermuda has accepted an invitation to participate in the 1948 games, bringing the total number to 52, two above the record set in 1936.

St. John's Jayvees Beat Roosevelt by 12 to 6

Charlie Hartpin's 70-yard touchdown run in the third period gave the St. John's junior varsity a 12-6 victory over the Roosevelt jayvees yesterday at Roosevelt. The victory was the sixth straight for undefeated, untied St. John's.

Bridal Flower Wins Pimlico Feature by 10 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimloco, Md., Nov. 6.—King Ranch's Bridal Flower, bred by the late Col. E. R. Bradley, was a ten-length winner in the eleventh running of the $10,000 added Lady Baltimore Handicap, involving a field of seven fillies and mares.

The daughter of Challenger II and Big Hurry, away from the winner's circle since last summer, finished far in front of a photo in which four horses sought the place money.

The camera gave second to O. L. Nyberg's Irisen with William E. Helis' Earshot third and Christiana Stables' Camargo fourth. Earshot, winner of the 1946 renewal, was the favorite. Bridal Flower paid $8.20 and was clocked in 1:45 4/5 over the heavy track. A crowd of 12,000 saw the action.

Jockey Warren Mehrtens rode Bridal Flower and rated the 4-year-old behind the pace battle of Irisen and Red Shoes. Approaching the stretch, the leaders ganged up and between horses came the King Ranch hope. She swept to the front and it was all over.

Victory Third of Year

The victory, the third of the year in 16 starts, brought $8800 to Bridal Flower and boosted her 1947 earnings to $47,525.

The tightest finish of the day came in the second race when a pair of maiden 3-year-olds produced a dead heat.

Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Play Neddie and the Bomar Stable's Making Merry battled it out so evenly that the judges and the camera could not separate them. Lady Colorado, owned by M. Mercado, was third in the field of twelve.

Play Neddie ridden by Jockey Johnny Breen, paid $5, while Making Merry, with Apprentice Jack Turner up, returned $5.40. The dead heat caused a twin pay-off in the daily double.

Bar Ship Wins 'Chase

Those who coupled Sweep Torch, the first race winner, with Play Neddie, collected $12.20, while those with Sweep Torch and Making Merry took down $9.80.

Edgar G. Horn's Bar Ship was the only horse who had no trouble and won the day's steeplechase, third event on the card. The 9-year-old got home six lengths in front of Mrs. Vera S. Bragg's Parader with Mrs. M. Walsh's Mint Chap third in the starting field of six. Bar Ship paid $9.40 and was clocked in 4.20 2/5 for the two miles over a soggy course of 15 jumps.

Solunar Tables

The schedule of solunar periods, as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's "Solunar Tables." Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory for hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The major periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the time shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The minor periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Use Eastern Standard Time.

Bill Bennings

At Pimlico.

DEAR FOLKS:

Alfred G. Vanderbilt seems to be serious about shooting for the Kentucky Derby and other 3-year-old classics next spring. In fact, he will winter several of his most promising candidates, including Newsweekly, at Aiken, S. C., instead of keeping them on his nearby farm. Bowie has removed several high hedges that interfered with the standees' look-see and has put up five sections of bleachers in front of the regular stands. Trainer H. A. Luro, who handles, among others, the horses of Mrs. M. E. (Liz) Whitney, has signed Apprentice T. Jasperson who rode with success in New York. Jockey Eddie Arcaro will be here to ride Miss Grillo in the Exterminator on Saturday. Conn McCreary had the mount, but stay in New York to ride Stymie. Dr. Almac is training well again and goes next Monday in the Sagamore. Leeds Rieley was a visitor from Charles Town and reports the infield hump has been removed and a drainage put in around the inside of the track. Won't be long now. I don't see how one jockey can look so good and then so bad. I'm talking about Apprentice Leon Buttler, who is hot and cold with the greatest of ease. See you on the rail . . . BILL

Baseball Heads Veto Early Training Start

Cincinnati, Nov. 6 (AP).—Baseball's executive council voted today to recommend to the joint meeting of major league club owners in New York, December 11, that the "American Legion rule" be included in "the body of the rules of baseball," and that the clubs be prohibited from "inviting or suggesting" that players report voluntarily for spring training before March 1, the official fixed time.

The executive council, consisting of Commissioner A. B. Chandler, Presidents Ford Frick and Will Harridge of the National and American Leagues, respectively; Warren C. Giles, cincinnati Reds, and Benjamin Fiery, attorney for the American League, met after Chandler had conferred with the administrative committee of the baseball players pension plan.

Fiery Attends First Meeting

Walter Mulbry, secretary of baseball, said the American Legion rule, which precludes the signing of any American Legion players before the end of their season, had always been in effect, at the direction of the commissioner, but "is not in the body of the rules."

Fiery attended his first council meeting since being named to replace Leslie M. O'Connor, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, who was lifted from the council at Chandler's request after being suspended for defying an order to pay a fine for signing a high school player. The fine since has been paid.

Mulbry said the "Chandler-O'Connor matter" was not discussed by the council.

At Chandler's meeting with the administrative committee it was agreed, Mulbry said, to modify the pension plan rule which credits a major league player's time spent in military service as playing time.

Pension Rule Changed

The rule, as originally drafted, provided that a player must have been with a club at least 60 days before entering the service in order to be credited with unbroken baseball tenure.

Under today's agreement, Mulbry said, the time is reduced from 60 days to 1 day.

The committee also agreed and ordered that coaches and trainers be included in the pension plan.

Talon Heads Field of Six In Riggs 'Cap

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 6.—Six seasoned performers, headed by R. N. Ryan's top-weighted Talon, have been named overnight for the twenty-second running of the mile-and-three-sixteenths Riggs Handicap tomorrow.

The race is worth $25,000 in added money. Talon, under 126 pounds, will be asked to give from 8 to 19 pounds to his five rivals in this historic Pimlico fixture but judging from his recent efforts on the New York circuit of tracks, he will be well backed.

Talon's rivals include Walter M. Jeffords' Loyal Legion 118, Pentagon Stable's The Doge 115, Ridgewood Stable's Double Jay 115, Greentree Stable's Coincidence 112, and King Ranch's Flash Burn 109.

Only a matter of inches has kept Talon from ranking even higher up the handicap ladder this season.

The Argentine-bred horse won five of his 17 starts including the All-American at Atlantic City, a dead heat for first in the Merchants and Citizens and the Saratoga Cup while in both the Jockey Club Gold Cup and the New York Handicap he was beaten noses.

Other seconds include the Widener, Monmouth and Gallant Fox Handicap. Talon has earned $116,525 to date.

The three-year-olds, Double Jay and Loyal Legion, are expected to be important factors in the Riggs runnings.

NBA Seeks Reaction to War Record

The National Boxing Association yesterday polled association members and a cross-section of persons in all walks of life to determine whether Middleweight Champion Rocky Graziano should be barred from the ring for wartime desertion from the Army.

The association said results of the poll will be announced November 20.

The Army disclosed recently that Graziano, who won the middleweight title from Tony Zale last summer, was dishonorably discharged April 29, 1943 after serving 10 months of a one-year court-martial sentence for absence without leave.

The poll was requested by the Florida and District of Columbia boxing commission.

Miller Raises Question

Harvey L. Miller, executive secretary of the association and chairman of the District of Columbia boxing commission, said the issue is "what connection is there between boxing and a man being dishonorably discharged after he has served his time?"

The association said that besides its members, others to be polled will be clergymen, veterans, businessmen and sports writers.

It said the result of the poll will be used to guide each member of the association in determining whether Graziano should be barred. Such action, it said, would be by individual commissions.

Seek Wide Opinions

In the six-page bulletin sent out from national headquarters here, the NBA outlines the case of Graziano, who has been barred in some States because he was dishonorably discharged from the Army.

Graziano also is under suspension in New York State, which does not belong to the NBA, for failure to report an alleged bribe offer.

The NBA members are asked to cast official ballots and to record a cross-section of public opinion on three questions:

1. Do you believe Graziano should be barred from professional boxing?

2. Do you believe Graziano should continue boxing?

3. Do you believe Graziano should cancel his "exhibition" tours and meet the outstanding challenger for his title?

Voting Explained

Pointing out that NBA may not initiate disciplinary action but "nationalizes the application of disciplinary action taken by member commissions," the bulletin continues:

"The Graziano case has been so widely publicized and such widespread public interest engendered, that your national office desire to formulate an intelligent opinion, based on the views of a genuine cross section."

The official poll consists of one vote from each State, territory or province or foreign country and from each past president. Ballots from others than NBA official will be tabulated separately as expressions of public opinion.

Out Hunting

By Jack Bell

DESPITE A DRASTICALLY curtailed wild waterfowl hunting season and reduced bag limits, a representative number of shooters were out for opening day.

In consideration of Monday's nor'easter, that was expected to drive a large number of Northern ducks, few bag limits were reported. Jack Nelson of Washington and Walter Weber, Vienna, Va., wildlife artist, reported their bag total after an afternoon's hunt on the upper Potomac consisted of one dead crow and bottle.

However, they did see three big flocks of black ducks.

On the Eastern Shore, Tilghmans, St. Michaels and the Kent and Sassafras River goose-shooting areas most hunters found little sport.

Lee Jackson, host at Green Run Lodge, Assoteague Island, reports he has never seen as many wild geese as there are in the area, and the large number of black duck on Sinepuxent Bay also is unusual.

* * * *

NOVEMBER 15, MARYLAND and Virginia's great army of sportsmen will spread in all directions when the upland game season opens.

In addition to small game, deer hunting in certain counties of Virginia also will be legal. Virginia's deer season, however, is very complicated, with varying dates for different counties.

Before opening of the upland game season in Maryland approximately 150 wild turkey will be released in the northwestern part of the State.

Those who want a turkey for Thanksgiving will have a chance to win one November 15 near Rockville, Md., fair grounds, where a turkey shoot will be held.

The shoot, sponsored by the Maryland division of the Izaak Walton League, is for the purpose of raising funds to further conservation education in Maryland public schools.

Saturday and Sunday, November 22-23, from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m., the Twelfth Precinct Pistol Club will hold their regular Thanksgiving turkey shoot. The contest is open to everyone. For further details call No. 12 Police Precinct.

Colts Favored to B Rockets Tonight

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Chicago Rockets and the Baltimore Colts of the All-America Football Conference will meet in Soldier Field tomorrow night with the Colts heavy favorites because the Rockets have lost 10 successive games.

The Colts, if victorious, can move into a fourth-place tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers in the Eastern Division ratings.

The Rockets will be handicapped by the loss of Elroy Hirsch, top scoring threat, sidelined by injuries. The Chicagoans, who have scored only one touchdown in their last two defeats, probably will depend upon Sam Vacanti's pitching and Ray Ramsey's catching for any touchdown production.

Unbeaten Teams Play

Two six-game win streaks will be matched at Armory Field tomorrow at 2 p. m. when Moon Williams' Hurricanes meet the Stonewalls in an amateur game.

Tuck Finishes 2-Day Wrestle With Budget

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Governor Tuck and his budget advisory commission adjourned a two-day session of budget "balancing work" today, but there was no comment as to how much of the $612,673,696 requested was granted.

Governor Tuck described the budget as "terrific." Delegate C. C. Louderback of Page dubbed it "a big, fat baby." Budget Director J. H. Bradford smiled, said nothing.

The $612,673,696 was announced yesterday as the official total of all requests for both general and special funds proposed for State operations and capital outlays in the budget for 1948-50.

This amount is almost double the $346,182,921 appropriated or to be spent for all purposes in the current biennium, and includes demands on the general fund for both recurring and capital outlay appropriations of $255,139,464, which is more than twice the expenditures contemplated from the general fund in 1946-48.

The principal item in the budget requests was the $87,709,234 asked by the State Department of Education from the general fund.

The Department of Education's request was about 63 per cent above the present appropriations and was the largest presented during th erecent budget hearings.

At his new conference, Governor Tuck said there was "still some more work to be done" in preparing the budget.

HB21—By the Speaker—To authorize an increase in the Laytonsville (Montgomery) tax rate up to 35 cents.

HB22—By the Speaker—To authorize Montgomery County Commissioners to pay $50,000 to hospitals caring for indigents not receiving State aid.

Philippine Church Seeks Union With U. S. Episcopal

Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 6 (AP).—The petition of the Philippine Independent Church for a limited union with the Protestant Episcopal Church of America was approved today by the American church's House of Bishops.

Only one vote was cast against the approval. It was by the Right Rev. Henry Wise Hobson of Cincinnati, Bishop of Southern Ohio.

He explained later that he was not against the granting of the petition, but had voted "no" only because he thought the matter had been given insufficient study and that the House of Bishops was acting too speedily.

The Philippine church was established October 1, 1902, by Gregorio Aglipay, a former Roman Catholic priest, and now has a membership of between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000.

Md. State House Proposal Gets Short Shrift

Annapolis, Nov. 6 (AP).—An administration proposal to allot two million dollars for construction of a new legislative building or expansion of present facilities was put through a committee wringer today and came out with only $250,000 recommended for specified improvements in the State House.

Chairman Pumphrey (D., Prince George's) of the Ways and Means Committee said the action was not a setback to plans for providing lawmakers with more office space and rooms for committee work.

He cited a joint resolution introduced in the House today which would create a 15-member commission to study the possibilities of modernizing the State House, finding additional space in the Court of Appeals and State Office Buildings and constructing a new legislative building near the State House.

Chest X-Rays at C&P

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. recently completed chest X-rays on a voluntary basis for approximately 6500 employes.

The X-rays, arranged by the Washington Tuberculosis Association, will be examined and findings reported to the individual employes by Dr. Lomax Wells, Chesapeake & Potomac medical director.

NAPOLEON

Reduced Tobacco Production In Prospect for Next Year

By The Associated Press

An Agriculture Department expert said yesterday that tobacco growers face the necessity of cutting production next year because of shrinking export markets.

Arthur G. Conover, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, told an annual outlook conference of Federal and State farm officials that flue-cured, burley and some of the dark types of tobacco will exceed demand unless production is lowered.

He said exports of flue-cured tobacco—the major export type—may drop to 300 million pounds this season compared with 550,000,000 last year.

The only thing that might improve the export outlook, Conover said, is the Marshall foreign aid program. He said funds may be made available under this program to provide a larger foreign market than now is apparent.

Cotton, on the other hand, is in a better position than tobacco, he said, because supplies are relatively low.

Sidewalk Quiz By Bridges Irks Britons

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Senate Appropriations Committee, holding the strings to American foreign aid, bumped today into a British suggestion it was snooping by carrying on a sidewalk survey in London.

Less than 24 hours after the committee arrived here, the liberal London Star reported Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) was buttonholing the British "man in the street" with the help of a battery of shorthand writers and asking such questions as these:

"Have the people lost the incentive to work hard, and if so, why?

"What are your views on your limited rations and have they contributed to lost incentive?

"How would you explain the lost desire to invest money?

"Do you think the socialization of some industries has increased the incentive or decreased it?

"What do you think about communism? Do you regard it as a real threat?"

The Star commented that all the questions "have a political flavor" and "might well be resented as unwarranted interference in our domestic affairs."

Louis H. Glassman Honored by Navy For War Service

Dr. Louis H. Glassman, civilian technical assistant of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with the combat "V" yesterday for service as a naval technician in Europe during the war.

The presentation was made by Rear Admiral T. S. Combs, USN, acting chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, in ceremonies at the Navy Department.

Dr. Glassman, who lives at 818 N. Edgewood st., Arlington, was cited for obtaining secret information about jet and rocket engines while working under fire in a captured aircraft factory. He has been a naval aviation technician for 18 years.

Western Md. Will Install New President

Westminster, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—After four months as head of the institution, Dr. Lowell Skinner Ensor will be inaugurated formally as president of Western Maryland College in ceremonies Saturday morning.

He was pastor of the new Westminster Methodist Church and a member of the college board of trustees when named to the presidency in June.

He succeeded Dr. Fred G. Holloway, who resigned after 13 years to become dean of the theological seminary at Drew University, Madison, N. J.

Some 129 colleges and universities will be represented in the academic procession to Alumni Hall for the inaugural ceremonies at 10:30 a. m.

Bishop James Henry Straughn, Methodist Bishop of the Pittsburgh Area and president of the school's board of trustees, will preside at the exercises and administer the oath. Dr. Edwin Holt Hughes, retired Bishop of the Washington Area of the Methodist Church, will deliver the principal address and the new president will respond with his inaugural message.

After the inaugural, Dr. and Mrs. Ensor will be honored at a reception and luncheon. Roger J. Whiteford, Washington attorney, will be toastmaster at the latter affair.

Dr. Ensor becomes Western Maryland's fifth president since the school was chartered in 1863 and its third in 59 years.

Faith Healer Oreder To Leave by U.S. Agency

Philadelphia, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Avak Hagopian, self-styled faith healer from Iran, and two companions have been ordered to leave the United States, the Immigration and Naturalization Service announced today.

Immigration Commissioner Watson B. Miller said Hagopian and his companions had been denied extension of the visitor's visas. Hagopian was brought to this country from Teheran to treat the Epileptic son of Vaughan Arakelian, wealthy wealthy California wine merchant.

AAA Creates Road Safety Foundation

Traffic Safety Foundation whose goal is reduction of the Nation's traffic accidents was created here yesterday at the close of the annual meeting of the American Automobile Association.

The foundation, which is to be a separate, nonprofit organization, will "concentrate on educational activities in the safety field." Emphasis is to be placed on driver-training programs in the country's high schools.

Approval of the plan was voted by the AAA board of directors after introduction by its joint sponsors, Robert J. Schmunk, new AAA president, and Lou E. Holland, senior vice president. Earlier, it had received unanimous indorsement by various committees of the national auto club.

Holland said Federal or State legislation that would "unduly restrict the operation of motor vehicles" might be enacted if the country's traffic record is not improved.

"The foundation," he said, "will produce various types of safety materials and will engage in research and experimentation to test the effectiveness of various safety programs."

The work will be financed through donations and contributions from interested individuals and organizations, he said. A 13-member board of trustees, seven from the AAA and six selected from educational, business and professional groups and youth organizations will govern the foundation.

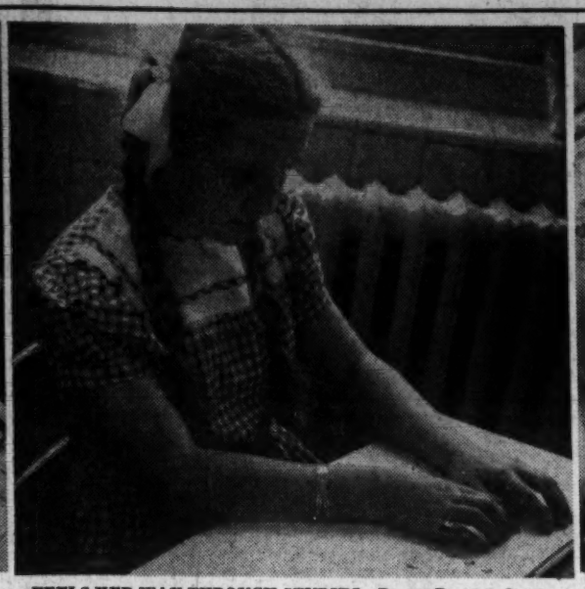
WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1947

BOOK THAT'S EASY TO READ—Robert Golden, 10, student in the sight-saving class at Adams, compares his large textbook with normal-size book used by elementary school children. The type used in Robert's book is 24-point, large enough for him to read without straining his eyes



FEELS HER WAY THROUGH STUDIES—Donna Darrow, 9-year-old Adams student, runs her fingers over the dotted pages of a Braille textbook. Although not completely blind, Donna does not have sufficient sight to read

COUNTING BY THE SENSE OF TOUCH—These are the hands of a nearly blind student at Adams. By fitting the pegs into eight-sided holes in 10 position, the pupil can form the numerals 1 to 9. All students in the special class see well enough to care for themselves

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Long Sentence Given in Rape Of Girl Cabbie

A 28-year-old former soldier drew sentences totaling 20 years in the Maryland State Penitentiary in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday for raping and robbing a woman taxicab driver near Chapel Oaks, Md., last March.

The defendant, Noah C. Taylor, who lives in the District but has no fixed address according to police, was sentenced to 15 years on the rape charge and given five years for robbery. He had pleaded not guilty to both counts.

Taylor was accused of hiring the woman's cab in Washington and ordering her to drive to a secluded road where he chocked her with his belt and assaulted her. The complaintant said he also took $10 and the cab, leaving her stranded at the scene of the attack.

He was apprehended only a short time after the assault when, according to police, the cab crashed into a freight train at a railroad crossing on River rd.

Bogus Police, Sex Charges Hold Youth

An 18-year-old youth yesterday was charged with impersonating a policeman to lure two 14-year-old girls into his car.

He was Jack P. Reeves of 2437 S st. se., an employe of the Veterans' Administration, who was charged with assault and impersonating an officer. He was freed on $500 bond on the assault charge and on $1000 bond on the impernation count despite his court-appointed attorney's plea to set bond "as low as possible because no harm has been done."

Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott refused the motion, declaring "as much harm has been done as if those girls had been seriously injured." He ordered Reeves held for jury trial December 12 on the assault count and for grand jury action on the other charge.

Police said Reeves showed a badge to the two girls in the Senator Theater, 3900 Minnesota ave. se., told them he was an officer and wanted to question them.

False Alarm Fine Levied And Suspended

Despite a plea by her father that she be "committed for medical treatment," Miss Frances Thibadeau, 41, received a suspended sentence in Municipal Court yesterday for calling in a false alarm of fire.

Miss Thibadeau, onetime secretary in the office of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, was convicted last week of reporting a fire in her apartment at 2440 16th st. nw. because she was locked out.

Judge Armond Scott fined her $100 or 30 days and then suspended sentence "on the theory that you will try to help yourself."

The defendant's father, Joseph F. Thibadeau, of 2216 Connecticut ave. nw., told Judge Scott:

"I am asking my daughter be committed for medical treatment as I believe that is the only thing that will help her."

Miss Thibadeau's attorney, T. Bateman Ennis, spoke up. He said she was the victim of her own friends who made liquor accessible to her. Ennis said Miss Thibadeau "sometimes drinks to excess," but added:

"She realizes her faults and she can go away to some resort or some place out of town and get away from all these people. However, if you commit her to an institution you will ruin her whole life."

"This," said Judge Scott, "is a delicate spot you are putting me on. I think her trouble is due to drinking. I don't think she would have done this if she were sober."

Miss Thibadeau declared she was not drinking when the fire call was made.

In passing the suspended sentence, Judge Scott said, "I cannot see myself sending you away without giving you a chance."

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Three specially equipped rooms are provided at the John Quincy Adams School to train District younsters destined to live in the twilight world of the partially blind.

In one room, seven boys and girls are learning to read and write in Braille.

These handicapped children come from all over the District. Buses call for them each morning and take them to their homes at the end of the school day.

The two teachers in the sight-saving classes, Miss Bertha Newell and Miss E. S. Kent, explain that they follow the regular school curriculum as much as possible.

The books they use are printed in large type, three times the size of the ordinary text. The desks have elevated tops that can be regulated to bring books and papers as close as a few inches from the child's eyes.

Lights that avoid shadows and paint and shades that eliminate glare and heavy yellow chalk that makes a line nearly an inch thick on the blackboard are other precautions used to conserve sight.

When these children reach the fourth grade Miss Kent teaches them to type on machines equipped with oversized letters.

"The program of each child is geared to what he can do," Mrs. Florence N. Cornell, principal of the Adams School, pointed out. "Our teachers work closely with the child's eye doctor to avoid overstraining the child's sight. Concentrated work is limited to 20 minutes, and there is no homework."

The vision of the children in the sight-saving classes is one-fourth of normal or less even with glasses, she said.

'Uncle Remus' Via Disc

Currently the children are hearing "Uncle Remus," "Snow White" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

To provide social contacts, the sight-saving children join regular students for social studies and classes in geography, Mrs. Cornell said. They also participate in games and assemblies and in any other activity that does not require concentrated use of eyes.

Children in the Braille class are taught the complicated process of reading and writing by Dr. Henrietta Kornitzer.

These children have vision enough to get around and care for themselves but they see less than one tenth what the normal child sees. There is little hope that their sight will improve and some have eye conditions apt to resul in blindness, she said.

Dr. Kornitzer trains the awk ward fingers of these young chil dren to pick letters and word out of the raised dots in Braill books.

The groping fingers of the chi dren also are trained to mast arithmetic.

Aerial Sham Battle Scheduled At Monument Grounds Sunday

Washington's aerial watchdogs, the 113th Fighter Group, will be seen in action Sunday when it takes to the sky to engage "enemy invaders" over the Washington Monument grounds.

The sham battle, starting at 2:30 p. m., climaxes a week-long air defense unit demonstration on the Monument Grounds. It is part of the current campaign to recruit 3200 local men for the District National Guard by November 16.

More than 50 planes will participate in Sunday's hour-long air show. "Enemies" of the District's Air National Guard unit will be light bomb squadrons from Alabama and Ohio. The local group includes squadrons from Washington, Maryland and Virginia.

The ground show, which opened Monday, will continue daily until Sunday from 3 to 4 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m. Guns, searchlights and radar equipment are demonstrated.

Dance Set Tomorrow

"Illinois Night" will be celebrated by a dance at 9 p. m. tomorrow at the Shoreham Hotel sponsored by the Illinois State Society.

Alley Species Gets Its Due

The Washington Post

CORRESPONDENT AND "MR. WHITE"—"Now, take Mr. White," says Bascom Timmons, noted Washington correspondent, "here is a cat with sterling qualities." Timmons, named honorary chairman of National Cat Week, favors the back-fence variety of feline

The outstanding journalistic friend of cats, Bascom N. Timmons, who has been named honorary national chairman of National Cat Week, is marking the occasion by being kind to his favorite species—the alley cat.

Timmons, mind you, loves all cats, but particularly favors the back fence variety. "He has more sense, more affection and more robustness. I guess the common people are always best, anyway, aren't they?"

As the bushy-haired newsman told of the "sterling qualities of the cat," five or six felines of varying and multi-colored hues, sizes and ancestries, wandered in and out of the living room of his Georgetown home. Occasionally one would jump into his lap.

Timmons, who is no johnny-come-lately as a friend of the cats, traces his interest in cats to his observation of them in the wee hours when he was news gathering for a morning newspaper.

Now he considers them superior to some politicians he now meets in his daily work as a Washington correspondent for 26 papers. As a matter of fact, he declares, "I don't think you ought to compare them with politicians.

"Politicians are nearly all alike. I never saw two cats who even remotely resembled each other. Politicians are pretty noisy. Cats know the expressive power of silence. The cat is the most mistreated and most neglected animal on earth. Most politicians are treated too well. Cats are natural and I am afraid some politicians are phonies," he explained.

Cat Week, which is now being celebrated, was organized in 1945 to combat misunderstanding about the felines. Timmons felt the occasion should be used to help achieve a world "in which every cat is well fed, well furred and well housed."

Irishman Wins Over Red Tape

An Americanized Irishman who paid a return visit to the ould sod had more trouble getting back in the United States than an over-quota immigrant.

McAllister

The plane trip back—his first air journey—had soothed 82-year-old Daniel M. McAllister when he arrived here. He contends that American citizenship papers 30 years old should stand up under even a 10-year visit to County Armagh.

In this contention he is supported by his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. McAllister of 501 11th st. nw. They snipped at State Department red tape for months trying to get him back.

About 10 years ago the elder McAllister took his ailing wife from their home in North Carolina back to Lurgan, County Armagh. The wife died a short time later, but he remained there with his sister.

He began planning a return to the United States when the sister died last May, but the vice consul in Belfast refused permission on grounds that he had forfeited his citizenship by staying out of the States over 10 years.

The battle raged for months, but he has returned to Washington to live out the rest of his citizenship—cleared by a decision that he had never lost his status.

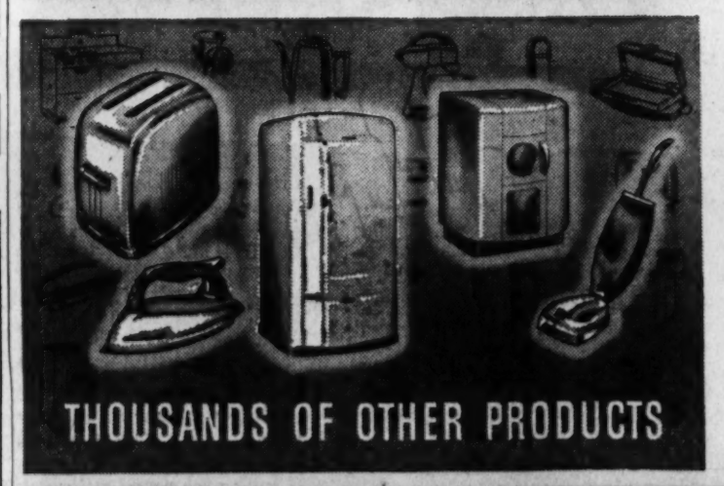
ONE BILLION DOLLARS
Means More Steel for the Things You Want



STEEL companies are pushing to complete the biggest program of expansion and improvements in the peacetime history of steel.
More than one billion dollars is being spent. More than 2,500,000 tons of new steelmaking equipment is being built.
Meanwhile steel production in 1947 is setting new records. Production in October exceeded average monthly output in the peak year of war production. The total tonnage for the year will establish a new peacetime record by a wide margin.
Demand still is great and some shortages still exist. But production is catching up as rapidly as possible. Every month there is more steel for the things you want.

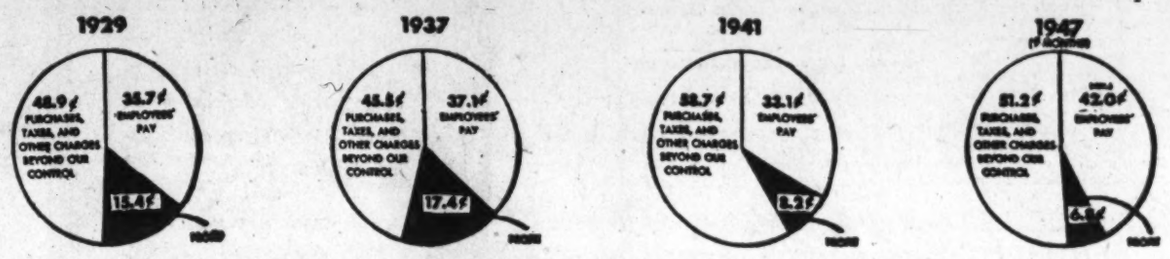
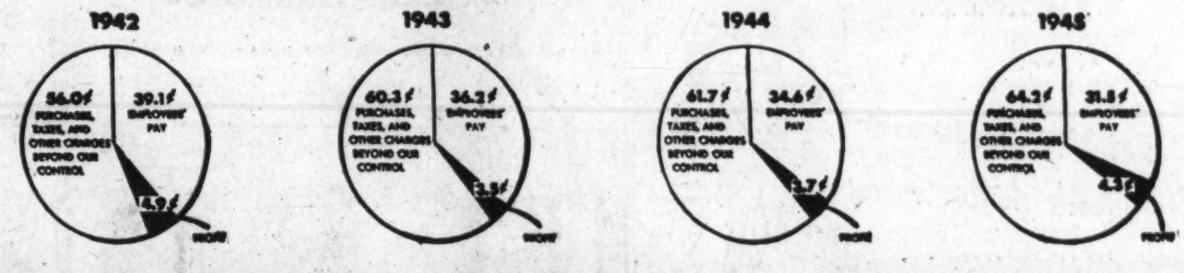
HOW BIG ARE GENERAL ELECTRIC PROFITS?

ARE THEY TOO BIG?

In typical years of General Electric's greatest earnings, here was how each dollar of income was divided up:



In the war years here was how each dollar of General Electric income was divided:



The profits for the first 9 months of 1947 were $56,459,434. The employees' pay increase given last Spring is amounting to a yearly rate of more than $50,000,000 and the Company's payments into the new pension fund for employees will run above $20,000,000 this year.

WHAT DOES THE PUBLIC THINK ABOUT PROFITS?

Survey after survey indicates people tend to set 10¢ as the expected average sales dollar profit that would influence them in risking their savings in a business of their own. They tend to set 10¢ as the least they are entitled to get from a sales dollar even from companies like General Electric and the better ones among its competitors. They recognize there are ups and downs of good and bad times, of tough or reckless competition, that may affect the results accomplished by management. They recognize also that the best managed concerns may sometimes earn more than 10¢ on the sales dollar—even after meeting competitive prices—and that the companies which earn much less than 10¢ on the average may be victims of conditions their management cannot overcome. Yet they still feel that good management should be able to conduct a business skillfully enough to earn, over the years, an average of at least 10¢ on the sales dollar.

WHAT DOES THE GOVERNMENT SAY IS RIGHT?

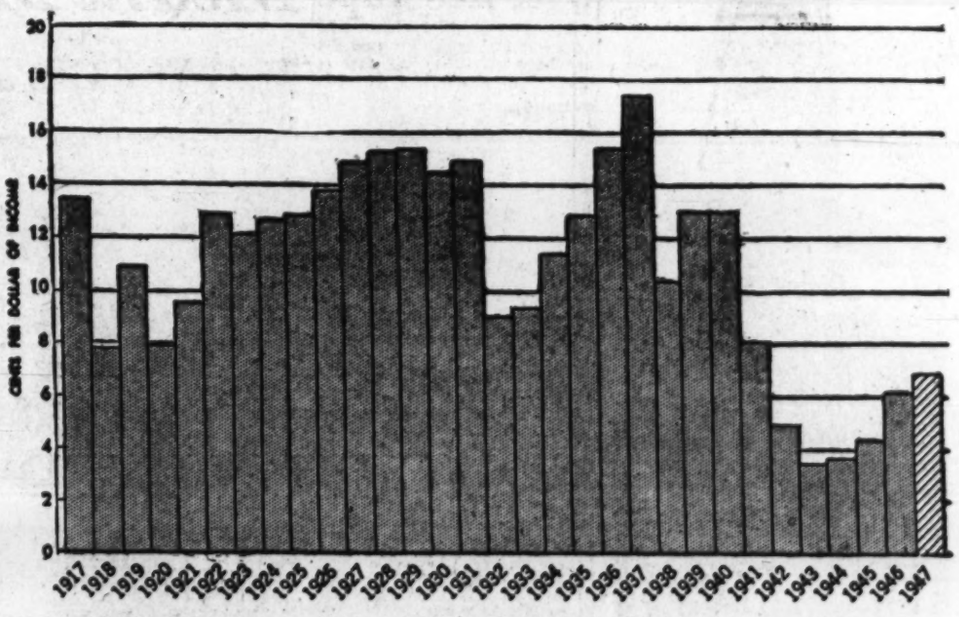
Mr. Roosevelt's administration could never be charged with favoritism toward business. In view of this, it is interesting to note how ex-G.I.'s were advised by the New Deal on how they could get into businesses of their own and what they ought to expect from a successful business. Here is an extract from a Government pamphlet. It is typical of instructions given in many such Government pamphlets initiated during Mr. Roosevelt's administration and issued to returning soldiers.

"A business, according to accepted practice, should make at least a 10% profit clear."

The pamphlet emphasizes that "this percentage is . . . on the selling price, or the amount charged to customers", and says further, "this is a most important consideration."

WHAT'S GENERAL ELECTRIC'S 30-YEAR RECORD?

Here's how many cents of profit were left out of each dollar of income General Electric received.



For this period of 30 years and 9 months, the average profit of General Electric is 8.9¢ on each dollar of income. For the first nine months of 1947 the profit is less than 7¢ on each sales dollar received.

HOW GOOD IS THIS RECORD?

We think it is a good record — but not good enough!

Our job in General Electric is to serve three groups of people — our employees, our stockholders, and our customers — all of whom are free to work with us or invest their money with us or buy our products, or not — as they choose.

We must preserve a fair balance between these three groups, so that our employees will want to continue working with General Electric, our stockholders will want to keep risking money in the company, and our customers will want to continue buying General Electric products.

Let's look at General Electric's 30-year record in serving these three groups, remembering that during the last seven years we have been hampered by the conduct and after-effects of a disastrous war that damaged us all.

OUR CUSTOMERS. During the war, our main customer was Uncle Sam. Then and since our other customers have been given the best value we could achieve under the circumstances, and we hope as good or better than they could get elsewhere during these times. This value still is not as good, however, as we should be able to make it. We are determined to overcome the limitations of the present situation and to resume our traditional task of supplying more goods to more people at less cost.

OUR EMPLOYEES. Our employees have been given the best jobs we could provide under the circumstances, with as good working conditions as we could arrange, and with a constantly increasing rate of pay. Recently this increased pay has not helped as much as it should because of inflation and other unfortunate consequences of the war. The better real wages can come only out of increased production and by checking inflation through a return to careful buying on the part of the consumer. So General Electric wants to do all in its power to expand production facilities and to influence individuals and groups to study their working habits and buying habits to the end of increasing real wages regardless of what the money wages may be. Along with this, we want to improve General Electric jobs constantly — and we are making every effort to do just that.

OUR STOCKHOLDERS. Our stockholders furnish the plant and equipment with which we multiply our human power many hundreds of times with mechanical power. This makes possible our American mass production system with its high wages and low-cost products. There are 250,000 stockholders who have risked their savings with us. While our average profit over the 30-year period has been a little below the minimum expected of most companies, our average during the past seven years — and our profit rate so far this year — are well below what we ought to achieve. Just and good profits are the "seed corn" that produces new crops of more and better products at more attractive prices, along with new crops of secure and otherwise better jobs.

In a free competitive market the size of a company's profit is the measure of how efficiently in the public interest the business has been conducted. If the company's profit in free competition is larger than that of its competitors, it means that the concern has wasted less of the country's natural material resources and less of the country's human energy in accomplishing what the customer wants done at the price he can and will pay.

We feel General Electric should continue to strive for profits that are just and good — in the interest of customers, employees, stockholders, and all the people.

Returns From South America

Mrs. Robbins, Back Home Again Tells of Wings to Another Land

By Marie McNair

MRS. WARREN DELANO ROBBINS, just back by plane from a visit to South America, is spending a quiet orientation period at her home on Woodland dr.

What's most amazing about flying to the Argentine born widow of an American diplomat is not so much the mechanical feat of the airplane but rather its ability to transport one to another world in so short a space of time. In Argentina Irene de Bruyn Robbins heard the problems of old and new friends, listened to the pros and cons of the political situation. When she spoke it was easy to lapse into French or Spanish, but it's difficult to remember that she speaks English, once she's back in Washington. "A completely different people and languages" she says with her intriguing accent." I'm still all mixed up. All I seem to want to do is sleep."

Friends in Buenos Aires and Santiago, where she also spent a week, made life very gay for her during her stay in the two cities. In Santiago she found her son, Warren, jr., well and very busy in a special job with the American Embassy there.

Mrs. Robbins brought news, too, of the former Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, who have postponed their visit to this country until the end of December. They'll stay with Mrs. Robbins, she hopes, when they do arrive, and then go on to New York where Felipe Espil has established law offices and where Senora de Espil's daughter, Louise, now Mrs. Hugh Leighton, lives.

Proposes U. S.-European Production Partnership

By Genevieve Reynolds

A production partnership between the United States and Western Europe was suggested yesterday by Miss Barbara Ward, foreign affairs editor of The Economist in London and a governor of the British Broadcasting Corp.

"Let Western Europe come to the United States for productive vitality and know-how," she said in an address before members of the Women's National Press Club at a luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

She pointed out that Europe has the essential raw materials, plus a reservoir of skilled labor, but lacks the vitality this country possesses in such great abundance.

Miss Ward emphasized that the European economic crisis and America's triumphant productive power and vitality could complement each other. "Where we lack, you have," she declared.

The speaker, whose talk was broadcast over WINX, said that many people in Europe regarded the Marshall Plan as a defensive measure against communism. "If European nations could be made to feel that they were working with the United States on a common ground for — and not against — something," she explained, "there would be no defensive attitude toward the Marshall Plan, and the production concept would increase."

Helping Themselves

As for what Europeans are doing to help themselves, Miss Ward cited the fact that production in France and Great Britain had reached 1938 levels until the advent of the floods and drought.

Miss Ruth Cowan, club president, presided and introduced the guests at the head table, among whom were Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman Council of Economic Advisers to the President; Dr. Leon Keyserling, vice chairman of council; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. N. Edwards of the British Embassy; Dr. Winifield Reifter, chief of economic advisers with the Herter Committee; Miss Helen Hill Miller Washington correspondent for the London Economist, and Miss Edith Gaylord of Oklahoma City, past president of the WNPC.

New Hat Look Is Sleek and Lovely

By Peggy Preston

OH, THE HATS! Mmm-m, the hats! Whee-ee, the hats!

It isn't often that Washington has a chance to preview the advance spring hat collections and meet some of the designers as well. But that's what happened yesterday at the Fashion Group's monthly luncheon on the Washington Hotel roof.

And, literally, those hats raised the roof. They were as exciting an array of headgear as one is apt to see here in many a day. The more than 300 women and unusually large group of male guests in attendance applauded constantly as the hats were shown in an hour-long parade.

There with their own chapeaux were Braggard, Mme. Reine, Florence Reichman, Peg Fischer, Mary Goodfellow and Anita Andra. Speaking quite adequately for their creators who were unable to be present were the hats by Lillie Dache, Laddie Northridge, John Frederics and Walter Florell.

Mary Kelley, director of the Millinery Fashion Bureau, New York, was commentator for the show, pointing out general style trends and individual touches for which each designer is known. Included in the showing were a "Best Seller" from each of the collections and one representing a spring trend.

Judging from the hats offered for late winter and spring wear, the outstanding trend to watch for is the forward brim. Dache, Peg Fischer and others emphasized this style feature. Most of the hats were designed to comply with new hair fashions which call for shorter, simpler coiffures. For the most part the crowns sit down firmly on the head. This was true of all those shown yesterday with the exception of the little side beret styles which perch over on one ear.

But there were none of the heavy-looking, bulbous crowns which were prominent in the fall collections. Apparently the designers are returning to sleek lines once more and favoring small, neatly turned out hats.

TO MENTION just a few of the loveliest hats in the show: A giant-brimmed, pale blue felt by Dache, trimmed with deep violet ribbon and the flowers for which she is famous . . . a darling black starched lace cap, the ruffles bound in gold by Mary Goodfellow, and a pale peach felt with forward brim heavily laden with red roses by the same designer . . . a chartreuse felt, trimmed with blue ribbon and pink roses, by Laddie Northridge . . . Mme. Reine's picturesque gray felt with a huge bow of filmy gray lace . . . fragile, pale blue straw from John Frederics, big and limber with a shallow crown . . . Peg Fischer's "Best Seller," a salmon-colored velvet bonnet with open crown and trimmed with two "vulture" feathers.

Among honor guests at the head table were Signora Tarchiani, wife of the Italian Ambassador, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. William Fulbright, Mrs. John Steelman, wife of the presidential assistant; Mrs. Cyrus Ching, Mrs. William Borah, Mrs. Morris Cafritz and Matthew Hyland, of the Millinery Council.

Miss Gertrude Prisley, regional director, presided at the luncheon and the program was directed by Miss Lee Walsh of the Daily News.

Round 5—Mr. and Mrs. Reducing Bout

Ida Jean Kain

Desserts Prey on Dieters

By Ida Jean Kain

One "poor loser" admits to rounding out the diet with pie at lunch. Of course, you don't order dessert for lunch! That is, you never intend to. The waitress stands at your elbow to take the order, and you speak up firmly: "No dessert, thank you."

"But you've got it coming to you," she says encouragingly.

Then you are faced with the cold cash fact that you're turning down something you want—and are going to pay for anyway. You weaken enough to inquire what they have for dessert.

There's pie, and cake, several kinds of ice cream and crackers and cheese. Nothing too tempting, so taking a firm grip on your will power, you repeat, "No dessert."

Feeling very pleased with yourself at such fortitude, you're about to settle for the check . . . when along comes another waitress with a tray, and on it are two lusciously-looking pieces of pumpkin pie with whipped cream. Her way is blocked for a second, right at your table, and there she stands with the pie practically under your nose.

"Is that homemade pumpkin pie?" you inquire wistfully.

"Our specialty," she pipes up.

You reflect that you haven't had a piece of pumpkin pie this year, but your memory of how good it tastes is very vivid. And anyway, dessert comes with the meal——.

Yes, the incline to obesity is paved with good intentions and sugar-coated calories. The craving for sweets may be so strong that you feel your system actually craves them. It's nothing but habit and it's such a fattening habit that your dessert orders can almost account for the accumulated pounds. One strong-minded woman who cut out desserts entirely lost 20 pounds over a period of a few months, without making any other changes in her meals.

The more you say "no" to dessert, the easier it becomes . . . it takes practice.

Good Cooking From the Books

Lapins (Rabbit to You) Make Tasty Supper Dish

By Lucia Brown

TIPS from a huntsman on preparing game and fish, advice from a young wife on cooking for two, and recipes from 300 Wellesley alumnae are included in three newly published cookbooks.

They are: "Fish and Game Cookbook," by Harry T. Botsford, (Cornell Maritime Press), "Recipes for Two," by Mary Lou Glass, (John Wiley and Sons), and "Favorite Recipes of Wellesley Alumnae (Photopress, Inc.).

Directions for making pheasant cacciatore and roasting a saddle of venison are given in Mr. Botsford's book, but he doesn't mind telling you how to fry a rabbit, too. The blurb on the front describes the volume as a "gay, gusty, and robust array of the stories behind memorable meals." In breezy fashion, Mr. Botsford describes succulent dishes and champion chefs all the way from the Mexican border to Longchamps in New York.

One which rarifies the humble rabbit is for "Lapin au Vin Blanc." If you can get hold of a couple of "lapins," by shot or by shopping, you might like to try it:

LAPIN AU VIN BLANC

2 cups beef stock.
1 clove garlic, minced.
1 pint white wine.
Parsley, chervil, salt, pepper.

Saute rabbit in cooking oil, with garlic and onion, until well browned. Place in greased casserole, add stock, wine, mushrooms. Cook in 350 degrees oven for one hour.

P. S. to food conservers. The remainder of the rabbits can be used for a tasty stew.

"RECIPES FOR TWO" is a book that should be a welcome gift for any bride—as well as for others faced with the problem of cooking food in small amounts. Most of the recipes yield only two servings, although some of them for "party food" are in larger quantities. A great many valuable shopping suggestions—amounts to buy, grades and cuts of meat to get, and similar information—are included, as well as a list of necessary cooking equipment for two persons, a glossary of food terms, and meal-planning tips.

Recipes are given in an unusual "step-by-step" form, as will be seen in the following one for "fudge pudding:"

FUDGE PUDDING

1. Sift and measure: ¼ cup flour.
2. Resift the flour with: ½ teaspoon baking powder, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoon granulated sugar, 1½ teaspoon cocoa.
3. Cut into the dry ingredients: 1 tablespoon shortening.
4. Add and mix until smooth: 2 tablespoons milk, ¼ teaspoon vanilla.
5. Stir in: ¼ cup nuts, chopped.
6. Pour the batter into a greased baking dish and sprinkle with mixture of: 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 tablespoon cocoa, dash salt.
7. Pour over the batter: 6 tablespoons hot water.
8. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 40 minutes.
9. Serve while hot. This dessert makes its own sauce. Remove the pudding from the baking dish and turn it upside down into the dessert saucers.

Yield: 2 servings. Preparation time: 55 minutes.

"FAVORITE Recipes of Wellesley Alumnae" proves conclusively that higher education in other lines is no handicap to becoming a good cook. Recipes from members of every class from 1887 through 1946 are included in the book, which was issued for the benefit of Wellesley's seventy-fifth anniversary fund.

Among Washington women contributing are Mrs. Dean Acheson, who describes the making of "the best succotash in the world" and Mrs. Ralph E. Church, former president of the Wellesley Alumnae Association, who contributes the recipe for a "favorite New England dessert—date nut pie."

The contribution of Mayling Soong Chiang, '17, (Madame Chiang Kai-shek) is a recipe for Niw-Goo-Yok (sweet and pungent pork), an excellent dish for serving now because it takes only 1 pound of meat:

NIW-GOO-YUK

Cut in 6 pieces each 3 large green peppers. Cook in boiling water until almost tender (about 8 minutes). in a 10-inch heavy frying pan heat ¾ cup oil, 1 teaspoon salt. Finely dice and add 1 small clove garlic. Make a batter by heating together 1 egg, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Cut in ½-inch cubes 1 pound lean pork. (Chicken or duck may be substituted.) Pour batter over pork and mix lightly until all pork is coated. Drop one piece at a time into frying pan. Brown over moderately hot flame. Pour out all but one tablespoon oil; add 1/3 cup chicken bouillon. Cut in six pieces each 4 slices canned pineapple; add pineapple and green pepper to meat. Sauce: Blend together 2½ tablespoons cornstarch, 2 teaspoons soy sauce, ½ cup vinegar, ½ cup sugar, 2/3 cup chicken bouillon. Add to meat and stir constantly until juice thickens. Serve with bowls of hot rice.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Parents' Opposition Parted Young Lovers, Who Made Other Marriages, Now Have Children, But Still Feel They Were Meant to Be Mates

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In my school days I had a girl of whom I was very fond, and she likewise fond of me. In our latter teens I took a job and she continued in school, by which time we were very much in love and wanted to marry in a year or so—but our parents objected.

She was sent to another State to finish school, and my parents wouldn't let me visit her, feeling I was too young; but we kept in touch by correspondence until finally I stopped writing, as it seemed we would never see each other again.

To make a long story short, I got married and then later she too married, although we were still in love. That was 10 years ago. Now I have children and so does she. My wife is a good wife, good mother and good housekeeper—but I can't forget the other girl.

They're Trying To Be Sensible

THERE just seems to be that deep love of her and she feels the same about me. She lives in another State but occasionally we meet in our home town and then we sort of go to pieces.

We've had a couple of talks and we agree that we have always loved each other and always will; and that we must have been intended for each other, or the feeling wouldn't have lasted.

However, we want to be sensible about it now, because of the children, but we are hoping and praying that we can be together some day. If we both do right, do you think it possible that things will work out in our favor eventually? We are two bewildered people. Please help us. D. R.

What Is Implicit In Their Prayer?

DEAR D. R.: If you both do right, your lives must inevitably bear some fruit of heart's content, but there is no guarantee that the lost opportuniy to marry your old sweetheart will ever recur.

And speaking of doing right, is it right to be hoping and praying that your respective helpmeets will conveniently die, sooner or later, leaving you a span of years ahead in which to be together, as husband and wife?

Isn't that what you have in mind, without actually facing it, when you speak of things working out "in our favor eventually?"

You've said that you want to be sensible about the matter, because of the children—meaning, I suppose, that you are tacitly agreed that divorce seems out of the question; that it would be unfair to them, loaded with heartaches and social risks that you feel duty bound to spare them.

Best to Forget Lost Opportunity

That's honorable unselfish thinking, as far as it goes; but loses all merit if, in refraining from divorce, your soul's sincere desire is fixed on a death-wish for your present mates.

A house divided against itself must fall—a saying which applies not only to households, but also to human personality. Thus if your conscious sense of right says, "For the children's sake, stick to the marriage you have made," and you want to do right to the best of your ability, then it seems to me you've got to make this a wholehearted choice.

So my advise is: gradually and firmly dismiss from mind any speculations concerning the lost opportunity for a supposedly great love-match with the other woman. Switch the emphasis from pining passion to bone-deep friendship that age can't wither.

That's the way to become a whole man in the role of husband and father, the way to grow in real relatedness to family and other daily associates through the years, and gather increasing strength of character and peace of spirit. M. H.

SUNDAY: Married man takes wife and children to live with his widowed mother, then resumes bachelor habits and tells spouse she is an unnecessary expense.

My silent friends

I often wonder out of all . . . The friends I ever made . . . How many met misfortune and . . . How many made the grade . . . A few of them have written notes . . . And some have called on me . . . But many seem to go their way . . . Alone and silently . . . Perhaps they have acquired all . . . They ever hoped to get . . . Or maybe things went wrong for them . . . And they are deep in debt . . . I only wish within my heart . . . That all of them were here . . . So I could praise their victories . . . Or add a little cheer . . . I only wish that I could see . . . The sunshine of their smiles . . . And share their good companionship . . . Along the many miles.

COUNTY FAIR BREAD

Made Under the Supervision of the Famous First Baker to the Nation's Great—NELLIE PROCTER HEWITT, the Baking Champ From Silver Spring

"COUNTY FAIR BREAD has the right name—it's delicious as blue-ribbon products shown at a Fair. Washington's Nellie Procter Hewitt, who's won blue ribbons herself for feather-light baking, supervises baking of County Fair Bread, so it's sure to be consistently flavorsome, tender and fresh, just the way bread should be. To say: 'It's MY kind of bread,' is putting it mildly."

County Fair Bread is as different as a country lane from a city alley. As different as lilacs fresh-washed by warm rain from the paper kind in the 10¢ store.

Because County Fair Bread is made the way a woman who really knows how to bake bread says to bake it. That's Nellie Procter Hewitt—the baking champ from Silver Spring.

And say—this new County Fair Bread is enriched with Vitamins and Minerals for better health.

County Fair Bread is selling like farm eggs. So get your grocer to save a loaf for you.

So come on, folks, for better eating, get County Fair Bread. Costs no more—so no reason not to have it.

Hurry! Hurry! Hurry! Get County Fair Bread at your grocer's today. It's fresh as a daisy.

Saturday's Peace Plate

Stuffed Hamburgers
Buttered Onions Baked Hubbard Squash
Mustard Pickles Baked Raisin-Rice Pudding

This menu, with its three baked dishes, makes good use of the oven.

STUFFED HAMBURGERS

3 cups coarse, soft bread crumbs	2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons minced onion	3 tablespoons hot water
6 tablespoons melted butter or fortified margarine	1 pound hamburg
1½ teaspoons poultry seasoning	dash of pepper
	1 egg
	¼ cup canned tomato juice

Combine bread crumbs, onion, butter, poultry seasoning, and 1½ teaspoons of the salt. Add the water, and blend. Combine meat, remaining ½ teaspoon salt, pepper, egg and tomato juice. Press meat mixture to a depth of ½ inch into each of six greased custard cups. Then put in a layer of the stuffing, and cover with remaining meat mixture. Set custard cups in a pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 45 minutes. Serves six.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I have a luncheon cloth made of peasant-style crash with colored designs embroidered on it. At a children's party, milk was spilled on it. No attempt was made to remove this milk until the cloth was washed. After it was ironed, the tannish outline of the milk appeared. I have washed it twice but cannot remove the stain. How can I take it out without bleaching the cloth, as I want to keep it the same as the undamaged napkins?

Once stains have "set," it's very difficult to remove them except with a strong bleach. However, you might try powdered pepsin on the spots. First sponge them with cold water, then sprinkle on pepsin. Let it stand half an hour. Brush it off and rinse spot well. For best results, be sure material is free from soap or other alkali before applying the pepsin. If this isn't entirely effective, hydrogen peroxide might help bleach out the spots. It affects some colors, but not others, being mild in its action. Try it out on an inconspicuous place on the cloth before applying it to the stains.

My limed oak table is cracking as though it were drying. What can I do to prevent further damage? A. W. G.

If you will give your table a good coat of cream wax it will help to protect it from further cracking. Use a large piece of cheesecloth wrung tightly out of water and folded into a large pad. Pour a small quantity of wax onto the cloth and work it into the surface of the cloth. Rub a thin coating of wax over the surface of the furniture with the grain of the wood. Remove any excess wax before you attempt polishing. Polish thoroughly to produce a good shine. Also, if the table is where it is exposed to sunlight, moving it out of the sun will stop the drying from this source.

Have you a recipe for a baked confection called Sebastopol and made with cashew nuts? E. R.

A search of many different recipe sources fails to turn up a recipe for Sebastopol. Do any of you "Ask Anne" readers have a recipe for it?

My young son has a Lionel Scale Model "00" electric train which he used only about two months before it was stored with our furniture for the duration of the war. We have just recently found living quarters, and when we took our goods out of storage we crushed one section of the curved track. I have written the Lionel company and several hobby shops and have learned that this model was discontinued during the war. Have you any suggestions as to whom I might write or do you know anyone who might have a few pieces of track they would sell me? L. H. J.

If any readers have track of this type they would be willing to sell, they may contact L. H. J. through this column.

Do you know of a store that sells rubber buttons such as those on knit sleepers? A. W. C.

It seems that rubber buttons are not for sale in Washington at department, dime, mail order houses or the button stores. One button store buyer said that his store had never had rubber buttons for sale and he suggested that the company or companies putting them onto pajamas may have exclusive right to their use.

I have a brown alligator cigarette case that got wet with salt water, which caused it to change color. What can be done to restore it to its original color? It is just discolored in spots. S. K. M.

A leather expert tells me that redying alligator-skin articles isn't practical, as the dye rubs off. He suggests that you rub the case with banana oil (purchasable in drug stores). This should help to restore its appearance. Several applications may be necessary in order to get the oil to thoroughly permeate the skin.

I stored a gray topcoat in a trunk. The storage room was later flooded with rain. As a result, I find stains and water marks on my coat. I've tried removing them with a cleaning fluid but to no avail. Can you give me some suggestions as to how I might remove these water marks? M. G. B.

Have you had the coat cleaned professionally since it was stained? If you explain to the cleaner how the material became spotted, he will probably be able to take the marks out. If you want to try taking them out at home, here are some suggestions: Scratching with the fingernail or a stiff brush or rubbing the cloth between the hands will sometimes remove such spots. Or else dampen an entire panel of the material evenly (if it doesn't seem to have a tendency to shrink) by sponging or by shaking in the steam from a briskly boiling teakettle. Then press through a cloth while its still damp.

About 10 years ago I had a pair of blankets made from old woolen clothing, badly worn blankets, and other old material. The address of the firm that did this work has been lost. I only remember it was located in Maine. Do you know of any place that does this work? V. S. C.

Attention N. D.: The following information regarding Susy Cooper china has been sent in for you by another reader:

Will you tell N. D. that I have just returned from Evanston, Ill., where I bought china in the Susy Cooper pattern as a gift for a bride at the following store: The Blue Parrott, Orrington ave. Davis st., Evanston, Ill. H. B. F.

There she goes!

Quick, Petunia, the blotter! And next time, remember to put a small lead weight in the bottom of that tall, top-heavy vase. It will prevent a lot of accidents.

West Hopes To Get Report On Clegg Soon

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West yesterday expressed the "hope" he would receive "in the next few days" a report of an investigation into charges of police brutality made by Julius Willie Clegg, 26-year-old Negro war veteran.

For more than a month the corporation counsel's office has been probing the charges to determine whether the accused policemen should be called before a police trial board.

The case was assigned to Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton D. Korman, who also has been working on two other controversial matters. Several days ago the case was reassigned to Oliver Gasch, who made a progress report to Corporation Counsel West yesterday.

Clegg, through Attorney Roger Robb, contends he was illegally detained by police at the First Precinct station for 34 hours without any charge placed against him, and that he was beaten by two detectives.

A night employe of The Washington Post, Clegg says the police took him into custody on the oral complaint of a white waitress at 6 a. m. August 2.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

FLYING SAUCERS are crashing crazily in the Casino Royal. Aptly named John Risko tries to keep ten saucers spinning at once on little sticks. LIFE SAVING UMBRELLA. When Henry Wong, treasurer of the Lotus Corp., was beaten up and locked in a closet of his home by a couple of thugs, all details didn't come out. Henry didn't kick his way out of that closet as reported. He was too weak and almost smothered. He managed to poke a hole in a door panel with an umbrella. Fresh air gave him strength enough to keep on poking a bigger and better hole and the door could be unlatched . . . The robbers evidently operated on inside information that the Lotus Corp., has just sold their States Restaurant for $50,000 and the naive idea that Henry would carry that much cold cash on his person . . . Henry's so disgusted with the whole thing that he vows he's going to sell his house, a really magnificent place on Crittenden st., near 16th st. with a Hollywood decor by Charlie Zeller. He doesn't feel happy whenever he passes the closet door behind which his chubbiness was jammed. It seems that a man's best friend can be his umbrella.

A happy pappy is Sacha Lucas, whom everybody remembers as the violinist and maestro of the old Troika. The new arrival is a big healthy boy named Russell and mamma Trudy is doing just fine at Garfield Hospital.

ARTHUR'S BACK. Arthur Marchisio, maitre d'hotel of the Pall Mall Room, has resigned at least four times in the last few years. Each time he's vowed that he was going to retire to his home in Yonkers, N. Y., and spend the rest of his life playing around his garden. But Arthur's that fabulous person, the irreplaceable man, and can't make those resignations stick. He's back in the Pall Mall Room . . . Some one should make a book out of Arthur's recollections of the hotel business. He was schooled in it under famed Cesar Ritz, has met thousands of notables in the world's most famed hotels.

Club Cairo is busily trying to get sound proofed or something before Martha Raye comes in next week. Won't it be wonderful if La Raye faces the complaining neighbors in court? They'll have to sound proof the Courthouse.

Mrs. Morrison Suggests New "Design for Giving"

Estelle Morrison of 5404 Belt ave. se. passes along a plan for implementing the true spirit of Christmas.

MRS. MORRISON

"Some of the folks with whom we usually exchange Christmas gifts," she says, "have friends and relatives in the devastated areas overseas.

"In those cases, why not make an exception this year? Send a food parcel overseas (as your gift to your friend), and let him send another parcel (as his reciprocating gift to you).

"In other words, agree beforehand that the money you ordinarily spend on each other will this Christmas be spent to help feed somebody overseas.

"In this way, I think, we can give Christmas an added meaning this year."

For those who are interested in District Liner Morrison's excellent suggestion, I might mention that the telephone number of the CARE office is Columbia 9320. The address is 1344 Connecticut ave. nw.

MILKING THE CONSUMER

Mrs. B. S. A. of Falls Church, Va., passes along some interesting sidelights on the price of milk. She writes:

"A short time ago I asked my milkman why our bottles couldn't be dated, as they are in many cities. This plan furnishes a much-needed protection to the consumer.

"The milkman explained that the company had bought a tremendous number of bottle caps, and wouldn't be able to date its milk until all those caps were used up.

"Now I see that this same company is citing 'the increased cost of bottle caps' in its explanation of the recent hike in the price of milk.

"Do they think they're kidding somebody?"

CARD OF THANKS

A couple of weeks ago the Boys Club received two tickets to the Redskin-Bear football game, together with a letter expressing the wish that the tickets be given to two club members.

Since the letter wasn't signed, Harry E. Polk, supervisor of Club No. 2, is taking this means of reporting on the disposition of the tickets. He says:

"Two members of our 150-pound league were selected by team vote, and thoroughly enjoyed watching the pros in action.

"I'd like the donor to know that acts like his encourage us greatly in our work with the youth of Washington."

GIVE AWAYS

"Five beautiful kittens, 10 weeks old." (Mrs. Van Order, National 0037).

"Three 2-month-old kittens. I'll gladly pay a dollar each to get them good homes." (Mrs. Zimmerman, Dupont 2117 Monday through Friday, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.)

"Cute female puppy, 7 weeks old. Very intelligent." (Emerson 0977, evenings. "If the pup answers, hang up.")

WEATHER—OR NOT

Since we've been inviting folks to dial "Weebee" to get the weather forecast, several District Liners have been moved to comment.

C. C. McDonnell of 122 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, Md., observes that you can get the same results by dialing "Weather." (The extra letter doesn't affect the first six.)

Fourteen-year-old Beatrice M. Hamlin of 1227 N. Taylor st., Arlington, Va., helps to explain the situation by reminding us that the forecast may be obtained by dialing "93" and any four (or more) other numbers.

This leads to such interesting combinations as Wetter, Yehudi, Wealth, Weekly, and dozens of others.

Unfortunately some of the folks who dial "Weather" don't know how to spell—and J. D. Griesemer of 115 W. Underwood st., Chevy Chase, Md., wishes they'd learn.

His phone number is Wisconsin 3843—and that's the phone that rings at all hours of the day and night when the non-spellers try to get the WEATHER by dialing WHETHER.

Give the poor guy a break, gang. Call Weebee.

DAIRY, DIARY

H. Alex Stouck of 2 Buchanan st. ne. sends me two clippings and asks, "what happened to the proofreaders last Monday?"

In the headlines on both items the word "dairy" was spelled "diary."

I took the matter up with Washington's best known diary expert, Jerry Kluttz, who examined the errors carefully and then said:

"This gives me a wonderful idea. When I get too old to write The Federal Diary, I'll go into the milk business and call my company The Federal Dairy."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—One afternoon a group of Maine correspondents invited Senator Wallace White of Maine to lunch. White accepted, and at the luncheon he answered their questions about the possibilities of getting Federal aid for the victims of Maine's forest fires. . . . "You know what my answers would be to all those questions," said Senator White. "Why don't you ask me about those rumors of my resignation as majority leader of the Senate?" . . . "All right then," said one reporter, "Senator White, what about those rumors of your resignation as majority leader? . . . "My answer," said Senator White, "is, 'No comment.'"

Samuel Golden, director of the American Artists Group, refuses to reproduce any of his own canvases in the group's Christmas card collection. "If I included a painting of mine," he explains, "then I'd also have to include my relatives'."

Russell Maloney, the author-critic, is a graduate of Harvard. He received so many letter from Harvard about contributing to university projects that he finally returned one and marked it "Deceased." The mail continued, addressed to "The Estate of Russell Maloney."

Some months ago Moss Hart dined in Hollywood with one of the Warner brothers, who asked what Hart was doing. The playwright told him: "I'm writing the screenplay for 'Gentleman's Agreement'" . . . Warner expressed his displeasure at the project, and felt that a movie about anti-Semitism would contribute nothing in combating bigotry—and might promote instead of reduce it . . . Hart told Darryl Zanuck, producer of "Gentleman's Agreement," about Warner's contention. "There's only one thing to do about that," said Zanuck. "Put it into the picture" . . . The scene was written and Robert Warwick played the Warner characterization.

The purchasers of the European edition of Marcia Davenport's novel, "East Side, West Side," think it's a story about the Soviet Union and the United States. Russell Davenport suggested to the author: "Jimmy Byrnes' book is called 'Speaking Frankly.' I think you and Byrnes should have swapped book titles."

By mid-December, one year after the death of Damon Runyon, the Runyon Memorial Fund for Cancer Research will have collected and distributed one million dollars without deducting even one single penny for expenses . . . Metro's story-editor reported to L. B. Mayer about the adaptation of Dostoyevsky's "The Brothers Karamazov," written by the Brothers Epstein. "What's it about?" asked Mayer, and was told: "About two brothers. One is drunk, the other is crazy. One is an atheist. One may have killed his father." Mayer sat back in his chair and said: "See? You never can tell from appearances."

Mrs. Morrison Suggests New "Design for Giving"

Estelle Morrison of 5404 Belt ave. se. passes along a plan for implementing the true spirit of Christmas.

MRS. MORRISON

"Some of the folks with whom we usually exchange Christmas gifts," she says, "have friends and relatives in the devastated areas overseas.

"In those cases, why not make an exception this year? Send a food parcel overseas (as your gift to your friend), and let him send another parcel (as his reciprocating gift to you).

"In other words, agree beforehand that the money you ordinarily spend on each other will this Christmas be spent to help feed somebody overseas.

"In this way, I think, we can give Christmas an added meaning this year."

For those who are interested in District Liner Morrison's excellent suggestion, I might mention that the telephone number of the CARE office is Columbia 9320. The address is 1344 Connecticut ave. nw.

MILKING THE CONSUMER

Mrs. B. S. A. of Falls Church, Va., passes along some interesting sidelights on the price of milk. She writes:

"A short time ago I asked my milkman why our bottles couldn't be dated, as they are in many cities. This plan furnishes a much-needed protection to the consumer.

"The milkman explained that the company had bought a tremendous number of bottle caps, and wouldn't be able to date its milk until all those caps were used up.
